But, one point further. One letter says: "The Review did it all alone." They did no other advertising—didn't need to. The other, larger advertiser, used one other paper—about an eighth the space used in The Review. But they say: "They invariably mentioned having read the ad in The Review." So, you see, they didn't need any other, either.

It used to be that advertising frequently was like kissing—it went by favor. Still does, to some extent. Profits still are good enough in this trade so that it sometimes is easier to pay the money than to dismiss the solicitor. But that day is passing.

For those who have felt the pinch of a hard winter these letters have a real cash value.

BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

The classes at the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society were this year mostly for bulbs, there being no classes for rambler roses, acacias, ericas, azaleas, etc., which are generally such a feature in Boston. The main hall being occupied by Farquhar's Italian garden did not allow of their being displayed, but there were, nevertheless, many interesting exhibits. The first prize group of orchids, from Wheeler & Co., was noteworthy. Duncan Finlayson had a splendid Dendrobium Wardianum carrying 275 flowers. J. T. Butterworth had specimen plants of Cattleya Trianae, Dendrobium nobile and Cypripedium Vandyke. His lily of the valley also was easily the best in the exhibition.

Louis Dupuy had fine hydrangeas and several ericas. A. Leuthy & Co. had an excellent group of palms and other foliage plant. W. T. Walke, on his table, had a splendid lot of Begonia President Carnot, a fine commercial variety. Mrs. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, had the best specimen Cattleya Schroederæ in the show. She also had a plant of the new blue rose, Veilchenblau, awarded honorable mention. Mrs. H. F. Durant, T. L. Watts gardener, had Medinilla magnifica and Statice Halfordii. Robert Rust, Pomfret, Conn., had two nice vases of chrysanthemums, rather out of season at a spring exhibition. Walter Angus had an excellent table of cut camellias and Cherokee roses. Francis Skinner, of Dedham, R. G. Chamberlain gardener, had a fine lot of Tausendschon roses, Lilium Harrisii and a table of well grown bulbous stock in pots and pans. Mrs. Oliver Ames, H. Cole gardener, had a fine vase of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora. A. W. Preston, J. L. Smith gardener; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener; William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, and E. A. Clark, A. McKay gardener, were the leading exhibitors of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and other bulbous plants, showing finely grown stock. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had a table of thirty of the grandest specimen cyclamens ever seen at a Boston show, awarded a silver medal.

No classes were provided for cut flowers, although usually carnations are quite a feature at the Boston spring shows. C. H. Totty sent Wodenethe in splendid shape, awarded a first-class certificate. Peter Fisher had Benora, also certificated, and Patten & Co. showed Mrs. C. W. Barron. The antirrhinums from T. G. Procter, James Marlborough gardener, were superb. James Wheeler also had several vases of fine spikes. Mrs. Lester Leland, Eric Wetterlow gardener, had a table of splendid Primula obconica, William Thatcher a collection of Streptosolen Jamesonii, John L. Smith cut orchids and Carnation Mrs. C. W. Barron, and Mrs. E. M. Gill a nice display of cut orchids.

Miscellaneous awards included a gold medal to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for their Italian garden, which is being constantly renewed and kept in fine condition, and a silver medal for a big specimen plant of the new Chinese Clematis Amandi Farquhariana. This variety created something of a sensation, both foliage and flowers being extremely handsome. The same firm also had Clematis montana rubens and other Chinese novelties. Louis Dupuy received a silver medal for Hydrangea Mme. Mouillere. Duncan Finlayson secured a certificate of merit for Primula malacoides, destined to be of great commercial value, and cultural certificates for Dendrobium Wardianum and D. nobile nobilium, and honorable mention for Calanthe Baron Schroeder var. albescens. Hatcher the Florist received honorable mention for the new Asparagus Hatcheri. J. T. Butterworth received honorable mention for Cypripedium Vandyke. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener, received honorable mention for a collection of beautifully flowered Acacia heterophylla.

W. N. C.

Here's a point for those who count the cost.

THE EVERY-DAY WORK.

Monotonous, But Essential.

That every day brings its own work is as true in the rose houses as in any other branch of horticulture. The routine of the section men is trying work, but is absolutely necessary, for without it the plants would soon become untidy and profitless. To the outsider this work appears to be easy and unimportant, but there is a right and a wrong way of doing everything, including routine work around a rose house.

The Daily Cut.

The cut is the first consideration every day in the year, and even this, simple as it appears, needs to be properly done. If only the day's crop were to be considered, then anyone might be trusted; it would only be necessary to instruct the beginner to cut the roses with as long stems as possible and let it go at that. But the careful rose grower has the condition of his plants always in mind and uses his brains as well as his hands. Often, on young stock, there will be long stems and good flowers, but these will not be cut clean out. To do so would seriously weaken the plants, so the grower is satisfied to take shorter stems and leave several good eyes and leaves to carry on the work of sap elaboration and keep the plants in a healthy, growing condition.

Good Judgment in Cutting.

In cutting roses a keen knife is an absolute necessity, or much of the wood below the cut will be rendered useless by splitting and bruising. The habit of nearly all hybrid tea roses is to occasionally throw up vigorous basal shoots that are in reality not flowering wood at all. It is true there is usually a flower produced at the top, but this, as a general rule, is not a particularly good one and is out of all comparison with the size of the growth. Obviously it is wrong to cut away the long, vigorous stem with this poor flower, as it is a waste of the plant's energy to no good purpose. If, on the other hand, six to eight inches is cut away with the flower, then the shoot will throw up laterals with fine flowers, as is the natural way of this class of roses. Some growers object to this method and say that it leads to a bushy head and short-stemmed flowers, but this depends on how the flowers are cut. If a couple or more eyes are left when taking the flowers, it surely will, but cut the shoots in close to the stem, right to the basal eyes, and when the main shoot is exhausted cut it right out to make room for others that will by this time be showing.

Feeding and Watering.

At this season of the year the growth is more active than at any other time, and, if the quality of the flowers is to be kept up, ample feeding and abundant watering are necessary. To insure the food and water being properly appropriated by the roots, let the surface soil be frequently stirred or cultivated. With frequent stirring it is almost impossible to overwater healthy roses at this time of year, and they will stand, and pay for much more feeding than is usually given. The pale yellow foliage so often seen on roses is in nine cases out of ten brought about by lack of nutrition, and a good dose of cow manure is the best medicine.

Maintaining Healthy Foliage.

There are, of course, cases of pale foliage where it will be of little or no use to feed. By injudicious treatment the plants have got into so bad a condition at the roots that they cannot take the nutriment, and nothing but taking up and replanting in new soil, or, better still, replacing with new stock, will be of any avail. But I have no hesitation in saying that more than nine-tenths of the unhealthy roses in this country are in that condition from lack of feeding, watering (both at the roots and in the atmosphere) and cultivating. A vigorous plant is far more resistant to diseases and insect pests than a weak one; so this, again, is an argument for plenty of feed and plenty of water as long as the weather is suitable.

Fine Spraying and Copious Watering.

Spraying for insect pests is, of course, desirable at times. There is probably no better disturber of the peace in a family of red spiders than plenty of cold water, vigorously applied. But constant daily spraying with force through a fine nozzle or sprayer is injurious to the tender leaf surface and robs it of its natural "bloom," which is itself a protection against disease and insects. Although much has been written and said against it, there is no doubt that the grower who slops around plenty of water in the house, is not afraid of a muddy walk occasionally and keeps the atmosphere moist, is going to get better foliage, better roses and more of them than the man who deals his moisture out in homeopathic doses through the medium of a fine spray nozzle.

All cultural details are open to change, and what is right, say in the south and west, may be wrong in the east on a certain day in the year. But everywhere in the United States and Canada we get long, sunny days, a dry atmosphere and a maximum of light that call for far more abundant supplies of moisture than are doled out by ultra-careful rose growers.

Removing Superfluous Wood.

No plants can be perfectly satisfactory, either in appearance or in the quantity of flowers produced, that are crowded with useless wood, and for this reason they should be frequently gone over and all such removed. It is not wise, however, to do it all at once. Old snags resulting from continuous cutting, and weak, blind wood that is not fit for propagating and only harbors insects, should be kept cut out regularly, a little today and some more in a week's time. In this way no serious check is ever given to the plants, cropping is prevented and the plants are kept clean and in a healthy growing condition.

Reading, Pa. — Good fellowship reigned at the residence of Jacob C. Bander, florist, March 5, when J. Harry Stiteler and Mr. Bander entertained their fellow members of the Men's Bible class of the First Baptist Church.

ASTERS AT IRONDEQUOIT.

Western New York is known as a section where the aster is at home—it is grown there by the acre. Mrs. J. M. Pendleton is said to be the largest aster grower in the Irondequoit district and the accompanying illustration is prepared from a couple of snapshots showing her greenhouse with nearly 500 flats containing transplanted plants intended to go into the field as early as possible. For six years she has shipped her cut to the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia. During the season of 1911 her shipments were from 5,000 to 12,000 a day.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

F. A. Hibbert, of the firm of J. Hibbert & Sons, seed merchants, Cardiff, England, who died recently, left an estate of the gross value of $154,060.

J. Cheal & Sons, the well known garden architects and landscape gardeners of London and Crawley, have changed their organization to that of a limited liability company. Joseph and Alexander Cheal, sons of the founders, have traveled widely in foreign lands and have also visited the United States.

Hugh Dickson, of Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland, purposes visiting the United States, and particularly California, in June. W. Atlee Burpee and his sons will pilot him around.

Samuel Pope, who has done more, perhaps, than any other one person to bring the double tuberous begonia to its present wonderful form, is retiring on account of ill health, after fifty years of strenuous work, the last twenty-one years with T. S. Ware, Ltd., Feltham, England, as begonia specialist. Prior to that, he was with John Laing & Sons, Forest Hill, London, in the days when they revolutionized the single begonias by introducing wonderful size and a wide range of colors. The principals and employees of Ware's nurseries presented a marble timepiece to Mr. Pope on his retirement.

CINCINNATI.The Gateway to the South.

Last week's market was rather peculiar: It opened with a rush that looked most promising; midweek showed that almost all lines were crowded, while the close was again brisk, and on Sunday most of the stock was cleaned up. Monday being a general replenishing day for the retailers, was exactly the same as the one preceding.

Roses, particularly the Killarney and Richmond, are coming in splendidly. The quality leaves nothing to be desired and the increasing quantity is gratifying. Some good Bride and Maid are included in the offerings. Good Beauties are in demand and sell easily.

The supply of all kinds of carnations is fair and their quality is, as a whole, of the best. The offerings are ample to meet requests. Sweet peas come in steadily and clean up better than they have been doing. This is not because of any increased demand but because of a decreased supply. In the bulbous line, callas and Easter lilies are now enjoying a fairly steady call and the market for them is not so crowded as it was a fortnight ago. Small bulbous stock is in light supply. Among the offerings last week were some elegant Paper White narcissi.

The violet market has not shown any improvement since the last writing. Valley is in fair supply and about equals the calls for it. Miscellaneous offerings include pansies, snapdragon and mignonette.

Last week was a busy one for greens. The call for plumosus, Sprengeri and other lines was good, while that for smilax kept the market bare of that commodity.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell had quite a run on smilax last week, because of the spring openings.

Wm. Niehaus, formerly Fred Gear's manager, opens a store, March 30, at 1407 Vine street. He is a hustler, popular with his trade and should make good from the very start.

Mrs. L. H. Kyrk has returned after a stay of five weeks with her mother at Tiffin, O.

The Anglo-Importation Co., operating The Shop Perfect, on Fourth avenue, was thrown into receivership March 19 at the instance of Leo Kugel, a stockholder and endorser of some notes.

Visitors: Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co., and E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Wm. Lodder, Hamilton, O.; J. T. Herdegen, Aurora, Ind.; Messrs. Keller, of Lexington, Ky.; Milton Alexander, with Lion & Co., New York. C. H. H.

BOSTON.The Market.

Business has been fair for the last week, and would have been better but for the coming again of winter on the first day of spring. We had a considerable snowfall to usher in spring and quite a heavy additional fall March 24, a minimum temperature as low as 10 degrees above zero being recorded. There is no particular glut in any line at present, nor is any now likely until after Easter. Roses are selling about the same. Good Beauties are still in rather short supply. Mrs. Taft takes the popular fancy, the name possibly helping its sale. Killarneys continue of remarkably fine quality, but all roses are good, due to the absence of hot weather. The demand for yellow varieties is good. Carnations are not such a glut as they were and are making more satisfactory prices. Pink Delight continues a leader. White Wonder, Gloriosa, Beacon and White Enchantress are all in good demand. Single violets are nearing the end. Some growers will finish picking this week, and only those who have held their plants cool will have any at Easter.

Dutch bulbous flowers are of splendid quality and selling a trifle better. Callas and lilies are abundant, but do not sell well. Valley of really good quality is not plentiful, but there is quite a supply of poor stock. Sweet peas are of grand quality, some having 15-inch to 20-inch stems. These are in good demand. Marguerites are grand in quality and much more plentiful. Yellows on long stems have been making as high as $4 per hundred. The best mignonette makes $8 per hundred. Snapdragons are excellent, but not selling as they should. Gardenias are coming better in quality. Cattleya Schroederae is more seen now than Trianae. Dendrobis are plentiful and so are cœlogynes. Asparagus Sprengeri is now rather poor in quality, and much of the adiantum offered is not well matured.

Pot plant trade is active, and all specialists in this line are up to their ears in business.

Club Field Day.

About fifty members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club journeyed to Waverley March 23, on invitation of the W. W. Edgar Co., to inspect the houses of Easter plants. Arriving at 3 o'clock, the houses were at once inspected and they surely never contained a finer grown or better flowered lot of plants. Giganteum and multiflorum lilies filled two big houses and were splendid. There was also an extra fine lot of candidum, the true, broad-petaled type. Two houses were filled with genistas and others with azaleas in the leading sorts, perfect plants. Hydrangeas were remarkably well grown, carrying huge trusses. Rambler roses, such as Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon, are now seen in large quantities and there was also a house of hybrid perpetuals just right, including such sorts as Magna Charta and Frau Karl Druschki. There was a fine lot of well flowered spiræas, both Gladstone and Queen Alexandra. Lilacs were seen in large numbers and were splendidly flowered. Geraniums in quantity, well flowered, were also noted, also acacias, metrosideros, etc. Palms, ferns, dracænas and other foliage plants filled other houses. Herman H. Bartsch, the genial manager, richly deserved the words of praise heaped upon him. Refreshments were served in the large packing shed and short, appreciative addresses made by Vice-President Kennedy, M. A. Patten and others.

An alarm of fire from E. Allan Peirce's residence took many of the party over there. The fire started in the upper story, burnt through the attic and roof, but was subdued before it had done any great harm, the greatest damage being from water. A number of the members looked over the mammoth establishment of Peirce Bros. Here were many thousands of lilies, chiefly giganteum. These were unusually dwarf; one house of Formosas contained much taller plants. Azaleas and other Easter stock were seen in quantity and several of the big houses were filled with carnations, among which Pink Delight stood out prominently.

Various Notes.

Carbone, on Boylston street, among his rambler roses, has one pale yellow in color, with pretty yellow buds, named Golddust. He has a splendid lot of Tausendschon and Carmine Pillar. Ericas in small sizes are in great demand. Hypericums, grown by A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, are also something of a novelty. Pot plant trade is starting here in good shape.

Bouvardia Humboldtii has been a leading specialty with J. W. Foote for a year or two. He grew it magnificently but may not plant it again, owing to its not proving sufficiently remunerative.

Daniel Iliffe reports business as being good in greenhouse construction. He has a contract for an iron frame house for H. L. Belcher, of Winthrop, and many inquiries concerning new houses.

Walter B. Cobb, of Canton, is sending D. F. Lancey, at the Boston Coöperative Market, a fine grade of carnations.

William R. Nicholson is cutting an average of 10,000 high-grade carnations per week. He has superb marguerites on long stems and mignonette holds out well. He will increase his planting of the latter next season. He will start on his new carnation house, Lord & Burnham material, right after Memorial day and will have it ready to plant July 15.

Considerable interest is being taken locally in the international flower show in London next May. Among those who will go from here are J. K. M. L. Far-quhar, William Nicholson and Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, is having great success with White Wonder and Gloriosa carnations. He has sold 28,000 rooted cuttings of these varieties this season.

Wm. Hannan & Son, of Dorchester, have many thousands of fine longiflorum lilies for Easter, and B. A. McGinty finds a quick sale for them.

H. L. Belcher, of Winthrop, will have some 50,000 bulbous flowers for Easter. He is having excellent sales on Golden Spurs, Von Sions, ornatus and tulips.

Andrew Masson, of the Larz Anderson estate, Brookline, has assumed charge of Miss Mary S. Ames' new estate in North Easton.

Lester H. Mann, of Mann Bros., the largest bulb specialists in this section, speaking of Formosa lilies growing tall, states that if growers would keep their bulbs a month in the cases before planting they would start better and grow much shorter.

N. A. Hudson, of Natick, is cutting yellow marguerites with 24-inch stems.

The Waban Conservatories are busy propagating their sensational new rose, Mme. Charles Russell, which they have decided to place on the market next season.

Spiræas from the Sutermeister Estate, Readville, are now fine. This firm will have a fine lot of bulbous stock in pans for Easter, but not sufficient for the demands. There seems to be something of a shortage of this class of stock this season.

Local seedsmen welcomed the spell of wintry weather, as it enabled them in some measure to get abreast of the avalanche of orders which came in earlier. Nurserymen are still unable to dig any stock.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, has finished picking from three houses of tomatoes, which have made profitable prices this winter. His carnation houses are in good crop for Easter.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, was first in the market with Countess Spencer sweet peas. These were sown last August.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, has a fine grade of sweet peas on long stems, also fine double violets, of which he picks many thousands daily.

W. T. Walke, of Salem, has for Easter splendid batches of lilies, acacias, hydrangeas, dwarf ramblers in variety and Begonia President Carnot.

The Taunton Greenhouses, Taunton, Willard & Williams, proprietors, have some thousands of fine longiflorum lilies for Easter, also azaleas, bulbous pans, etc., all well grown.

Growers of the new marguerite, Mrs. Sander, are divided in their opinions regarding its merits. Wm. Nicholson, of Framingham, will plant less of it next season, as it does not stand up like Queen Alexandra as a cut flower, proving rather soft.

A hearing occurred at the State House March 27 on various appropriations being asked for by the Massachusetts Agricultural College. These include one of $1,200 for a man and equipment to start experimental work in roses, carnations and other florists' crops next year. This, it is hoped, will be granted. W. N. C.

THE SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Two hundred loyal members of the New York Florists' Club and their friends attended the twenty-fifth annual banquet and it was indeed a jubilee. Silver was everywhere—menu, program, the ladies' souvenirs, the service presented to ex-President Nugent, and even the tongues of the orators, all emphasized the celebration of twenty-five years of glorious achievement.

The thirty tables were charmingly decorated by Alex. McConnell, one of the club's charter members, and the orchids, carnations, roses, tulips and other flowers were contributed by the leading wholesalers and growers, lavishly, so that the great ball-room of the Park Avenue hotel, when all the guests were seated, presented such a charming ensemble as has never before been seen there. An attendance of 300 was anticipated, and, in fact, every member of the club was expected, but the spring rush is on, the night was stormy, and the stay-at-homes were many. But all who attended were delighted and the dinner committee was given a cordial vote of thanks, to which Secretary Schenck happily responded. Silver fizz flowed unstintedly, and a splendid orchestra furnished almost continuous melody. Departing from the usual custom, there was no vaudeville and the singing was of popular songs, in which the entire company joined. The festivities lasted until after 1 a. m.

President Manda, in a brief address, spoke of the club's splendid record and accomplishments during its twenty-five years of existence and predicted even greater achievements for the future. He then introduced Patrick O'Mara as the silver-tongued toastmaster.

Seated at the guests' table were Prof. L. H. Bailey, of Cornell University; R. Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F.; J. Otto Thilow, president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia; A. Farenwald, president of the American Rose Society; Messrs. Hall and Wiltshire, of Montreal, and the presidents of several of the local horticultural societies. Telegrams of congratulation arrived from the St. Louis Florists' Club and the Philadelphia Florists' Club.

Mr. O'Mara was in his happiest mood and kept the interest unflagging to the close. The presentation of the case of silver to ex-President Nugent was made by Walter Sheridan, who eulogized Mr. Nugent for his many years of loyalty. The first speaker was President Vincent. The S. A. F. was his theme. Notwithstanding a severe cold, he gave a strong address in behalf of his beloved society. Prof. Bailey was eloquent, as usual, on his favorite theme of American floriculture, and no one in this country is more thoroughly in touch with its achievements. J. Otto Thilow was enthusiastic and convincing in behalf of fraternity and thoroughness. Mr. Farnwald had his favorite toast, "The Rose," to enthuse over and gave a fine address. President Hall, of Montreal, and his side partner, Mr. Wiltshire, brought brotherly greetings from Canada, and both were earnest in their hopes and intent as to the entertaining, at no distant year, of the Society of American Florists, at Montreal. A. S. Burns, one of the New York Club's charter members, was reminiscent and interesting and handed President Manda the original charter of the club as a memento worthy of official preservation. Harry Bunyard waxed eloquent on his favorite theme, the sweet pea. Charles Weathered was given the twenty-fifth degree and raised to the table for his feeling and interesting address. C. C. Trepel spoke of the value of nerve in his educational work for the masses. Ex-President Nugent made a pleasing speech in acknowledgment of the club's handsome gift, and W. J. Stewart told some of the many things the horticultural press has done and desires to do for American floriculture.

The spirit of fraternity was dominant throughout the evening, the greatest good fellowship prevailed, and the ladies were especially appreciative of the generous silver mementos given to all the gentler sex who graced with their presence this memorable occasion.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Spring was sidetracked again last week; the season is away behind other years. The delay in the advent of seasonable weather has sadly handicapped all branches of the trade. The street men, on whom so much depends at this time to relieve a congested market, have had a hard row to hoe because of the cold spells, and without the relief afforded by the department stores there would have been a panicky time of it since January.

In the cut flower market there are heavy shipments of American Beauties and in large lots the prices have been shaded below the regular quotations. The new roses hold steady, but Killarney, Maryland, Maid and Bride are overabundant and in large lots have been at the mercy of the buyer. Thousands of them were slaughtered at $1 per hundred and under. The quality of everything is now perfect and carnations especially excel in this respect, but prices do not follow, many thousand lots going at $10 and under. Violets are down and out; 10 cents a bunch has been the corner vender's quotation and $1 per thousand was gladly accepted by the wholesalers, for any surplus. Easter will about finish them for the season, and about finish many of the smaller growers at the same time. It is even hinted that many of the violet men are going to turn to growing carnations next season.

Orchids are abundant, and prices are low. Mossiae seems to be the favorite. There is a good shipping call for Easter. The best valley seldom is quoted as high as $3 per hundred; $2 was about the average last week. Lilies, including callas, are now quoted at 6 to 8 cents and few have been booked above 10 cents a flower, in pot or otherwise, for the holiday. Gardenias will be in good supply. The best now bring $4 a dozen and $6 is asked for next week; these and orchids seem to have the call with the 400. Tulips are glutting the market. Southern daffodils are on the way. The bulb supply is topheavy. There is no scarcity of anything, and all varieties of spring flowers are in the windows, including arbutus, forsythia and lilacs.

Various Notes.

April 8 is the date of the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. This will be sweet pea night and Harry A. Bunyard will have something interesting to say on his favorite theme.

W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., has completed a house 40x150 at his country home at Chappaqua, N. Y., where he will grow acacia only. Hitchings & Co. are the builders.

Mr. De Forest, of the Lord & Burnham Co. has secured the contract, amounting to $75,000, for a range of houses at the estate of J. B. Duke, Somerville, N. J., to be devoted to the growing of oranges, peaches, etc. There are nearly seventy houses in this enterprise, which is the largest private range in the world. A. A. McDonald is the superintendent. Mr. De Forest left March 24 for a short trip to Montreal.

Julius Chevally, of Blue Point, L. I., has placed an order for a carnation house 72x183, the third of his L. & B. houses. As an evidence of evolution, Mr. Chevally began with a truss house, then a pipe frame house, and now the iron frame house with all the modern accessories.

A man calling himself Otto Schmidt has been collecting plants and flowers, using the names of Young & Nugent and other firms, and causing considerable trouble. Mr. Nugent takes this method of warning others.

Excellent Brunner roses already are coming in from Zuber & Son, of White-stone. Their cut is handled by Badgley, Riedel & Meyer.

The new plant market at Fifty-ninth street and Second avenue, under the big bridge, opens Monday, April 1, and will be ready for the big Easter show there.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. had a fine supply of arbutus last week and the week preceding, the first of the season. It is now abundant.

H. E. Froment was not subjected to any serious loss by the fire above his store March 18 and business was not interrupted.

Snyder's bulb stock is handled by William Kessler. Among his stock of Easter plants are the big daisies of Woodsen & Christensen, of Woodbridge and the bougainvilleas of Emil Savoy, of Secaucus.

The auction sales draw well and prices have been good. Hardy roses brought as high as 25 cents each, and no variety has sold under $10 per hundred.

A visit at Max Schling's found that gentleman and his thirty assistants all busy with funeral work and dinner decorations. Mr. Schling never complains of lack of business.

M. A. Bowe hopes to be in his new store on Broadway by June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Nash were fortunate to escape serious injury last week in a runaway accident.

Maurice L. Glass has undertaken a wholesale business on his own account, with headquarters in the Coogan building.

John B. Nugent will celebrate his ninetieth birthday April 8. He has been in the florists' business for seventy-two years.

Charles Millang has almost recovered from his severe accident and is on deck again at his store.

W. B. DuRie, of Rahway, celebrated his seventy-second birthday on St. Patrick's day.

Schloss Bros. say sales of their ribbon specialties this spring are far in advance of any other season.

S. Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, are having their busiest season and another building this year is an absolute necessity.

The busy season is in full swing at Arthur T. Boddington's. Harry A. Bunyard is back from Chicago, all gingered up for the spring rush and optimistic as to business generally.

L. J. Kervan, Sr., is having a fine holiday, he writes, at his Florida home.

Woodrow & Marketos have stocked their big branch store, at 438 Sixth avenue, with blooming plants. Mr. Woodrow has recovered from his recent illness.

S. Masur, in Brooklyn, has a big branch store for Easter, to handle the overflow.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht say the spring crop of cattleyas, now due, will be larger than in any previous year.

Robert Schultz, of Madison, who ships to J. K. Allen, has a particularly fine crop of Richmonds.

M. C. Ford has his windows filled with blooming plants.

W. H. Siebrecht has been forcing valley for thirty-six years.

The death of Herman Maenner is reported in this week's obituary column. J. Austin Shaw.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Baur & Steinkamp are highly pleased with the way their new red carnation has been selling and say they expect no trouble in disposing of every cutting they will be able to root up to the end of the season.

KING OPENS WESTERN OFFICE.

The King Construction Co., of North Tonawanda, N. Y., which recently opened an eastern sales office at New York, now has established a western office at Aurora, Ill. The western representative is H. G. Miller, who has been with the King concern for many years, but whose home is in the Chicago suburb. His special field will be Chicago and vicinity.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was in an overcrowded condition every day last week. While the retail trade was reported quite good, there was not enough of it to consume the large number of shipments that came in. The stock is all of extra good quality in all varieties with prices lower than ever before at this time of year for corresponding quality.

Roses are especially heavy in all grades. American Beauties, in the long fancy class, are coming in with better color and quality. Carnations, sweet peas and violets are the flowers that have glutted this market of late. Bulb stock, too, is heavy in all the seasonable varieties, with tulips, lilies and Dutch hyacinths in the majority. They sell well, but at greatly reduced prices.

Various Notes.

Kuehn received a grand lot of auratum lilies and lily of the valley last week.

Smith's had an abundance of violets and peas daily all week from their Kirkwood growers.

Angermueller's Easter lilies sold well and some nice orchids from Vesey's were seen.

Sunday we had the heaviest snow storm of the season, which greatly handicapped the retailers in delivering their usual heavy Sunday morning orders.

William F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y., spent Thursday, March 21, in this city on his way home from Hot Springs, Ark.

Frank A. Windler has been admitted to the firm of W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. The officers of the firm now are: W. C. Smith, president; Frank A. Windler, vice-president; William H. Ossick, secretary and treasurer.

Charles Holzborn, the Oak Hill avenue florist, is building a handsome residence on Hartford street adjoining his greenhouse plant.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, called on the local trade last week.

City Forester Julius Koenig has a large force of men trimming sidewalk trees and replanting the dead ones.

The J. W. Dunford store was bought last week by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., who in turn sold it to Oscar Huettemann, of the Tower Floral Co., who will use the fixtures and supplies at their Grand avenue store.

All the big plant stands in Union market are still closed, whereas at this time last year all were alive with blooming plants.

Max Herzog, who runs a pretty place at the corner of California avenue and Sidney street, is sporting an automobile delivery car, with a removable body, which makes it possible to transform it into a pleasure car.

The stork made another visit in the trade this week, calling at the home of Otto Sander, where he left a pretty baby girl. Otto says she is the flower of the flock.

C. Young & Sons Co. are again attracting the passersby with a splendid window display of garden seeds and implements; also an incubator which has just hatched out several dozen chicks which are allowed to run loose around the windows.

Harry Young, treasurer of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, reports that the society has paid off all the indebtedness of the last show and that the question of disbanding the society will be decided at a future meeting.

The west end establishments are already showing some grand Easter blooming plants. Those of Waldbart, Ayers, F. C. Weber, F. H. Weber, Ellison, Kalisch, Sander and Young are a beautiful sight.

A petition has been going the rounds requesting the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden to open the garden to the public every Sunday. As it is now, only the first Sunday in June and September are open to the public in accordance with the will of the late Henry Shaw. J. J. B.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The first day of spring was more like the beginning of winter than the beginning of spring, for the temperature was decidedly low and we had a heavy snow storm. After the delightful spring weather we had been having, the return of winter was most trying and the cold was felt more than ever. If this weather continues, it will require more firing on the part of the growers to bring stock on for Easter trade.

Spring openings, in almost all stores where spring goods are sold, were held last week. Strange to say, fewer plants and cut flowers were used for decorations this year than last. Artificial foliage and flowers cut quite a figure this spring for opening decorations. St. Patrick's day favors and decorations of all kinds sold well this year, because the celebration was strung out three days.

Carnations are still overabundant, with low prices prevailing because of the surplus. However, if the cold weather continues, the supply will diminish speedily. The price of roses is about the same as at last writing and the supply continues to pour in. The cheaper grades go at almost any price, but the fancies and the specials are firm in price. The quality of Killarney, My Maryland, Taft, Richmond and Mrs. Aaron Ward is excellent. The supply of American Beauties has been greatly stimulated in the last two weeks by the sunshine and warmer weather; nevertheless, the price is firm.

Bermuda and Harrisii lilies are not plentiful and are held at a firm price. They are in great demand, because of the large amount of funeral work. Callas continue to come, but are not much used. Valley is good at present and is selling well. Cattleyas are fine and there is a demand for them. Violets begin to show the effects of spring weather and they are becoming smaller.

Rambler roses, lilacs, acacias, rhododendrons, wistarias and spiræas are coming on in great numbers, since Easter is near at hand. A few good genistas are seen thus early. Ferns, leucothoe sprays, asparagus and adiantum are all plentiful. Everybody is looking forward to a big Easter trade and a few early orders are already booked.

Various Notes.

A committee has been appointed to ask the state legislature for an appropriation of $50,000 for the erection of greenhouses at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., for the purpose of experimenting with plants and flowers. This would be of invaluable service to the florists and growers of the state, as well as to the public. The members of the Rochester Florists' Association are intensely interested in the project and are working hard for the passage of the bill which will bring about the appropriation for the greenhouses.

Crosman Bros., seedsmen, report that the seed trade has been a little slow for the last few weeks, but as soon as the weather is a little more favorable they expect to do a big business for this year.

Frank P. Jones has taken a lease of the Foss greenhouses and has reopened them.

After much discussion, pro and con, as to postponing the annual banquet until after Lent (for some members preferred cutting out banquets during Lent), quite a number insisted that the banquet be held on the date decided upon at the last meeting; so the banquet was held at Hotel Powers, March 26.

M. Adler, of pearl pins and novelties fame, called on the trade last week.

Geo. Keller, of Mt. Hope avenue, is cutting his spring crop of giant mignonette and it is first-class.

Albert Vick has the sympathy of the Rochester florists in the loss of his wife, which occurred March 18. Mrs. Vick was a member of the Ladies' S. A. F.

The floral decorations at the pure food show, to be held here at Convention hall, April 15 to 27, will come in for much thought and work. Many of the national exhibitors have signified their intention of spending large sums of money on the beautification of their booths in the flower line.

Walter Stroh, of L. C. Stroh & Son, of Batavia, N. Y., was a visitor here last week and he reports that his business is growing and that he expects a big Easter trade.

Six of our bowlers went to Buffalo on Monday, March 18, to play a match game with the Buffalo bunch. The Rochesterians were again victorious.

James Vick's Sons have had a fair advance trade in seeds this year, but the local seed trade has not begun because of the backward spring. They expect to be rushed in about two weeks or so.

OBITUARY.

Herman Maenner.

Herman Maenner, widely known as a grower of holiday and bedding plants on Long Island, died March 20. Mr.

Herman Maenner.

Maenner was born November 12, 1861, at Ebringen, Germany. He served his apprenticeship at the establishment of a cousin, Karl Maenner, at Ravenburg, Wurtemberg. After that he worked for several years at the botanical gardens at Zurich, Switzerland, going thence to Sander & Son, at St. Albans, England. He came to the United States in 1888, finding employment at Easton, Pa., as head gardener for Prof. Eyerman. In 1890 he started in business for himself at Maspeth, specializing on hot plants. He was a member of the New York Florists' Club, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association and the New York Cut Flower Exchange. A widow is left, also a brother, B. J. Maenner, who will look after the business.

Patrick McKenna.

At the advanced age of 93 years, Patrick McKenna, one of the pioneers of the craft in Canada, passed away March 14. Mr. McKenna started as a gardener in Cote des Neiges sixty-one years ago, finding his market in Montreal. He proceeded to build up a business, which later became known as that of McKenna & Son. He retired from active work twenty years ago, leaving the management of affairs to his son, James McKenna. He was born in Cavan county, Ireland, and came over in 1847.

His son, James McKenna, was a councilor and mayor of Cote des Neiges before annexation to Montreal, and an alderman of the city after it. Mrs. McKenna survives her husband. She is 84 years of age. Besides the son, James, there are three daughters, four grandsons and two granddaughters. The funeral took place March 16, from the family residence to Cote des Neiges church, and afterward to Cote des Neiges cemetery.

Fred Weber.

Fred Weber, one of the most successful of the Beauty growers for the Chicago market, died at his home at 2 a. m., March 23. He was 46 years of age, a native of Germany, but for all his business life a resident in the greenhouse colony north of Chicago. By a coincidence, his death came exactly three years to the day after the death of his brother, Ernst, with whom he started in business.

The Weber brothers came to America while young men. They were masters of the art of plant growing, and, renting what is known as the Grossman place in Chicago, they made an immediate success. The partnership continued for ten years, until 1903. At its dissolution Ernst Weber continued the original business, until his death. Fred purchased nearby vacant property and started with one 300-foot house, planted to Beauties. He soon became known as one of the most uniformly successful growers of this somewhat capricious flower. The plant now is four times the original size. Mr. Weber's death may be attributed to the perils of rose growing—while at work March 15 he scratched his hand, presumably on a rose thorn. The result was an infection which resulted in blood poison. It was not until March 18 that a physician was called, and then it was too late. Erysipelas was an added complication.

Mr. Weber was a stockholder and director in the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago. He is survived by a widow and two sons, one 18 years of age, the other 16. Both sons have recently been critically ill, the elder having just recovered from a dangerous attack of typhoid, and the younger still being in a serious condition with an ailment which threatens to destroy his sight. The funeral was held Monday afternoon, March 25, and was largely attended, most of the growers in the big greenhouse district north of Chicago being present. There were many flowers.

Mrs. Albert F. Vick.

Mabel Given Vick, wife of Albert F. Vick, died March 18, aged 34 years. The funeral was held March 20 and was largely attended, for Mr. Vick is one of the most popular of the younger members of the trade at Rochester. There were many flowers. Interment was at Mount Hope cemetery.

Lancaster, Mass.—R. P. Brydon, lately with E. W. Breed, leaves in a few days for Lake Forest, Ill., where he will have a position on the Cyrus H. McCormick estate.

Waverly, N. Y.—Harvey Tracy, an experienced florist, has purchased a tract of ground on Caldwell avenue and will begin the erection of greenhouses. The location, which is near both the Chemung street and Clinton avenue trolley lines, is said to be an ideal one for the business.

The Review brings results.THE Alabama shippers say wild smilax is extremely hard to get this season, and that orders exceed the supply. The season for huckleberry foliage will open in a few days.NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.THE outlook for a protracted tie-up in the coal fields is not so dark as it was, but some of the big growers, and many of the small ones, who believe it is better to be safe than sorry, have laid in a stock of fuel to carry them until next autumn. Mining will cease next Sunday.
The suspension in western bituminous fields probably will be brief, but an adjustment in the east is not yet in sight.JUST because so many readers have interested themselves in the steady increase in the quantity of white paper consumed in printing The Review, we stop the presses to remark that the stock used for this issue weighs 12,542 pounds, or a little more than six and one-quarter tons.
If the sheets of paper had been laid down side by side the area covered would have been 666,291 square feet, or almost exactly fifteen and one-fourth acres. Or, if the pages, each 8½x12 inches, were laid side by side they would make a strip one foot wide 240 miles, 1,600 feet eight inches long.THE methods of merchandising cut flowers are changing, and they will change still more, in spite of the not extraordinary reluctance of the retail branch of the trade to grapple with the new conditions. One should not jump to the conclusion, just because wholesale markets have been depressed of late, that the business has gone to the demnition bow-wows. Not at all. This always has been a business of ups and downs. But there now is so much stock, ten months in the year, that the older methods of distribution must give way to methods more elastic and hence more effective.AZALEAS for Easter are pretty closely sold up at most of the plant growing centers.CONDITIONS are reversed; there are more Help Wanted than Situation Wanted advertisements.THERE is much complaint as to the quality of the spiraeas this season. The trouble is laid to the hot, dry summer of 1911.THE railroads have decided that 2 cents per mile is to be the minimum rate to Chicago conventions this summer, except where the tourist rates can be used.

DATE OF EASTER.

The date of Easter in 1913 is fifteen days earlier than in 1912, and twenty-four days earlier than in 1911. Not until 1915 does it come so early again.
Here are the dates of Easter for ten years:

1912	April 7
1913	March 23
1914	April 12
1915	April 4
1916	April 23
1917	April 8
1918	March 31
1919	April 20
1920	April 4
1921	March 27

HOW CLASSIFIED ADS PAY

For the grower who has a moderate quantity of surplus stock the classified advertisements in The Review offer an effective means of turning the surplus into cash, and the cost usually is trifling in comparison with the results obtained.Under date of March 23, Zieger & Sons, Philadelphia, report having sold 5,000 vincas through a classified advertisement. They were offered at $80 a thousand, so the sales totaled $400. The cost of the advertisement was $4.20, just about one per cent.Also under date of March 23, Myers & Co., Bluffton, Ind., report having sold or exchanged over 10,000 geranium plants through the use of classified advertisements, which cost $3.70.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

As is usual with Lent, demand is improving as time passes and the latter part of last week found the market doing a quite fair volume of business, pretty closely up to last year, if not fully equal to what was being done then. Supplies have shortened.
There has been no scarcity, but reduced receipts and increased demand have given a better average, because there was less stock to sell at job lot prices. The weather has been unseasonably cold and this has been a restraining factor, both on supply and demand. The present week opened with fair prospect.Beauties are neither abundant nor of fine quality. A few first-class flowers are being cut, but not many. The demand for Beauties, however, has been light for weeks. There are enough good ones to go around. Killarneys are excellent. The supply is not quite so heavy as it has been, but the reduction has not resulted in anything more than a slight stiffen-ing in prices. The medium grades are

LILIES

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—too many that have been forced too hard to get them in, and too many that are short of stem. But our Lilies will be fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even. They will run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for.

KILLARNEYS

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carry the finest flowers of any in this market.

CARNATIONS

Once a user of our Carnations, always a user is almost always the rule—because ours is the best average large lot of Carnations in this market. Send us your order for Easter.

SWEET PEAS

We never have had such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

VIOLETS

The Easter Violets promise to be better than usual this year, because of the late spring. Shall be especially strong on doubles.

OURS IS THE PRIZE-WINNING VALLEY

Our prices are for first-class stock, and it will pay you to buy the BEST even though the price may be a trifle higher than that quoted by some. Buy of us and get the quality—you can increase your sales if you have the right kind of stock to sell.

LILIES FOR EASTER

NOW BOOKING ORDERS

$8.00 TO $12.50 PER 100

These are all true Giganteums, the same stock that has given such good satisfaction in the past. They will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100—packed, mind you, by men who know HOW to pack Lilies, and shipped without rehandling, so that they reach the retailer in the same perfect condition that they came out of the greenhouse. We say without fear of contradiction that any florist who has had these Lilies and other Lilies in past years has found our Lilies not only the best but the most profitable Lilies he has handled. The supply will be larger than ever this year, so that we shall be able to take care of quite a few new customers. Now booking orders.

the ones most in demand. Richmond is fine and plentiful. There are probably a dozen other varieties which are available in moderate quantities, the quality being good in each case.

Carnations are slightly less abundant than a week ago, but prices have changed only a little. The quality is excellent. Better carnations seldom have been seen at this time of year; there are only a few of the soft flowers ordinarily numerous at this date and the proportion of splits has decreased. Prices still are unseasonably low.

The sale of violets has not yet increased to any great extent, largely, the trade thinks, because the temperature continues below freezing. The general supply of sweet peas has been considerably reduced. The quality continues fine and there has been some advance in price in this department. Lavender is the color difficult to move.

Easter Prospects.

Up to March 26 the Easter orders were extremely light, partly due to the fact that the buyers await the arrival of the Easter Number of The Review before placing orders, partly due to the general impression that this is a year there cannot possibly be any shortage. Some of the growers say they will have only light cuts of roses and quite a few assert that carnations will be on the short side, but the buyers refuse to take these reports seriously, declaring that no grower ever has acknowledged that he would have a big crop to send to his commission man. The wholesalers appear to be confident that if any one item runs short there will be plenty of other stock to take its place.

Apparently there will be no oversupply of long-stemmed lilies. Most of the growers are repeating their experience of recent years, when a large proportion of the bulbs gave short stems. The sentiment is that there will be enough medium stems, none too many long stems, but an oversupply of short lilies.

Mr. Bryant Retires.

When Paul M. Bryant purchased the stock interest of Mrs. E. H. Hunt and Charles M. Dickinson in the E. H. Hunt corporation, January 1, a contract was made which, owing to unforeseen difficulties, Mr. Bryant was not able to fulfill. The stock, therefore, has reverted to Mrs. Hunt and Mr. Dickinson, who have returned to Mr. Bryant the moneys paid in on the contract and Mr. Bryant has withdrawn from the business. C. M. Dickinson, who had intended to enter another line, is again in charge of the business.

Various Notes.

Hunt Bros., Park Ridge, who specialize on some of the lesser grown flowers, have had exceptional success with sweet peas this season, but Fred Hunt says that the prices have not been such as to leave much profit. A big bunch of Helen Lewis and Christmas Pink brought to The Review office last week drew a favorable comment from every visitor.

A. Henderson & Co. have moved two carloads of tuberose during the last twelve days and a third car is on the way.

Winterson's Seed Store is preparing for a big retail trade next week, on Easter plants, after which the retail seed season is expected to open.

for the extra deliveries. Other wholesale growers are doing the same, in view of the rumors of a coming coal strike.

Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., paid a flying visit to the east last week, leaving and arriving back at Chicago in three days' time. During that short period he found chance to make New York and Philadelphia.

The store of Kennicott Bros. Co. is spick and span for Easter, having last week received several coats of light green paint. Every other store in the market wears white.

A. Lange finds it necessary to keep his store open until 9 p. m., and to 10 p. m. Saturdays. The new second floor workroom adds greatly to his facilities.

The A. L. Randall Co. is fitting up a new stockroom for ribbons and will remove the department from the second to the third floor, where more space and better light will be had. One loom order now on the road from the mill amounts to $11,000, but is practically all sold.

The latest addition to the Fleischman equipment is a camera and appurtenances. George Wienhoeber is learning to use it. The plan is to work up an album of photographs of their own designs.

Henry Wittbold has his display rooms at 56 East Randolph street open to the trade and has moved in a large quantity of stock. The display rooms included a model house of three rooms, aside from the main display. The rooms give an idea of the finished interior and exterior decoration as well as landscape work. All told, it is unique.

N. J. Wietor says he estimates the increased cost of fuel this long, cold winter as twenty-five per cent over last season. Wietor Bros. never worry over coal. They burn the C. C. B. Pocahontas, always start the season with full sheds and never let them run low.

for undisseminated carnations at the spring show, the judges having reversed their original award to Wodenethe as reported last week.

Peter Reinberg has invested in Sunburst, the only rose he is adding to his list this season. He also thinks highly of Ward.

At Kyle & Foerster's it is said that W. A. Brenneke is in charge of the greenhouses of Frederick Benthay & Co., New Castle, succeeding Otto Benthay, who has gone into business for himself. Mr. Brenneke had been with Benthay & Co. before, but recently had been with the South Park Floral Co.

Miss Eugenia Roddin and Frank Ayers were quietly married at St. James church Wednesday, March 20, and on Sunday their "elopement" occupied half a column in the Tribune. Among those at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar. Mr. Ayers is a brother of Mrs. McKellar and right-hand man in Mr. McKellar's store.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. cut back and dried off some of its Beauty houses right after Christmas. These are once more coming into crop.

The directors of the E. C. Amling Co. held a meeting March 23 to adopt resolutions on the death of Fred Weber, who was a member of the board. Mr. Amling speaks of Mr. Weber in highest terms, as a business man, as a grower and as a friend.

John Kruchten was missing from the store for several days last week. When he came back to business he was feeling well, but was so hoarse he could not speak above a whisper.

Albert Cole is the latest addition to the store staff of the E. C. Amling Co. He took hold March 25 and will handle the Beauties.

C. V. Abeele, who succeeded Charles Penshorn at Sixty-first and Throop streets, reports having cleaned out 2,500 azaleas last week through the use of a classified ad in The Review.

Fischer Bros., at Evanston, are adding a house 25x125 and are building a bulb cellar under their wagon shed.

W. E. Trimble, of the Trimble Greenhouse Co., of Princeton, Ill., which has opened a market at 56 East Randolph street, made a record for ducks March 23 and 24, when he bagged the limit set by the game laws. He was the first member of the Princeton Gun Club to bag the limit.

Phil Schupp reports that the Easter rush is already being felt at Budlong's and that the demand is strong for valley and roses, and all stock moving with more rapidity than at any time since the advent of Lent. Similar reports were heard from A. L. Vaughan and John F. Kidwell, the latter of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

W. S. Garland, of Des Plaines, Ill., received his new touring car last week. It is a 1912 Buick, the same model H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones', drives.

Orders are plentiful, but money is scarce, according to Peter Weiler, of the Superior Machine & Boiler Works.

Fred Lautenschlager returned March 24 from an extended eastern trip in the interest of the Kroeschell boiler.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

A majority of the wholesalers in this city positively assert that the cut flower market has fallen off during the last week. A strong minority assert quite as positively that the market has not fallen off.

The features of this week are the arrival of southern daffodils, and of arbutus, the decrease in the poorer grades of sweet peas, some of the winter crops being over, and the falling off in single violets of finer quality. White, in roses and carnations, is less plentiful than colors, which makes the demand seem better. The rose market generally is in good shape, save only Beauties, which lag. Cattleyas are represented chiefly by Schroederae. Good gardenias are a bit more plentiful. Sweet peas are excellent; the average grade is higher, due to the shortening of the shorts. Easter lilies are coming forward; they promise well for next week. Tulips are in their glory, better than at any time this season. The price of daffodils has strengthened under the influence of the receipt of some excellent Emperor. The short-stemmed southern stock is clean and nice, but not in the same class. Odds and ends are selling poorly. Greens are in fair request.

The Plant Situation.

The advance out-of-town orders for Easter blooming plants are heavy. Much fine stock has been shipped. More is set aside ready for shipping on specified dates. The local demand is slower. The disposition to hold off until a week before Easter is marked. This delay is not practiced in the cases of scarce varieties or of exceptionally well grown stock offered at moderate prices. The fine quality of the stock has attracted many visitors from out of town. Indications point to a big business.

The Spring Show.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall, Broad street below Locust, March 19 to 21. The quality of the flowering plants exhibited by the private gardeners was fine. The lecture room presented a brilliant appearance, filled with many-colored spring flowers. The hyacinths were a feature of the show; unusually large, well colored flowers were there in profusion, their effectiveness increased by length of stem. Lilies and azaleas were not prominent, but there were more spiraeas than one could have expected and a good representation of cinerarias, tulips, daffodils, lilac and valley.

J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., decorated the stairway with evergreens. Henry F. Michell Co. made a strong exhibit of grass seed and lawn mowers. Henry A. Dreer, Inc., exhibited a group of beautiful Cocos Weddelliana and also made a good exhibit of grass seed and lawn mowers.

The competitive classes were well filled with entries for the prizes offered by Henry A. Dreer, Henry F. Michell Co. and Hosea Waterer.

Who Gets the Pie?

Scene—A street in the city.

Little Boy—"Father, who is that poor man over there?"

Father—"That is a great grower; he was the first to discover how to force buttercups under glass in winter."

Little Boy—"Is that rich man who has just stopped to speak to him a grower, too?"

Father—"No, my son, that is the man who makes buttercups fashionable."

It is not the clothes that make a gentleman or the MAT that sells the plant, but a MAT of delicate fabric that brings out the soft colors to the best advantage goes a long way toward selling the plant.

Our BABY WEAVE CHIFFON MATS come in all flower colors; their softness of texture gives them an advantage over the coarser mats ordinarily seen because they are more pliable; easily adjusted and, to use a common phrase, better looking.

WASHINGTON, D. C.The Market.

There was little difference this week to be noted in the condition of the market over what it has been for the month, with the possible exception of American Beauties, which were more abundant than they have been since May or June of last year. While the retail price has not suffered materially, $3 is about the limit at wholesale and finer Beauties were never seen in this city. In the other roses, the price has dropped. Killarney holds the lead, there being perhaps more of these coming in than any other variety. In whites there are White Killarney, Ivory, Bride and Kaiserin, all of which are overplentiful, it being possible to purchase them at this piece of work. It was furnished for the employees of the Naval Gun Factory. The anchor furnished by George Cooke elicited considerable praise. In this piece there were about 2,000 White Killarney roses and where the cross-bar joined the stem of the anchor, and at the bottom of the anchor, were huge bunches of orchids. The chain was entirely of violets. The top of the anchor rested as on a rock, at the bottom of which Easter lilies had been placed. At the bottom a large bunch of American Beauties had been placed. The anchor was made in the round and was over seven feet long. It was the tribute of the men of the U. S. S. Birmingham, which brought the bodies to Washington. The Lone Star, the emblem of Cuba, was carried out by Marche, with white roses as a fill, a center of orchids and the whole outlined in purple sweet peas, a token from the Cuban government. Another handsome piece was a huge broken column done by Thomas & Slye. In addition to these, probably every florist in town had a call for a wreath or other design. Gude Bros. Co. furnished for the United Spanish War Veterans thirty-four wreaths, one for each of the caskets, and a similar number for the Spanish War Veterans of the District of Columbia. Gude Bros. Co. also had the order for the anchor sent by Kalipolis Grotto, a Masonic organization, which was made of roses, gardenias and white carnations on a background of cypas leaves, asparagus and American Beauties. Blackistone and many others were called upon to do their share. In this connection it may be said that many of the caskets, at the start of the parade, were entirely neglected in so far as cut flowers were concerned. This was noticed by some patriotic merchant citizen, said to be Henry Lansburgh, who immediately ordered that a thousand carnations be placed as his mark of respect upon the caissons. Business throughout the city was practically at a standstill during the ceremonies and many of the local retailers attended, accompanied by all clerks who could be spared. It might also be stated that over forty floral pieces accompanied the bodies from Cuba, forwarded by the Cuban government and individuals in that country. Many of these were of metal. Those of cut flowers, of course, were hardly presentable after the long trip. However, the display was most creditable.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Shaffer were last week host and hostess to a goodly delegation of Baltimoreans who came here to witness the cavalry drill at Fort Myer, Va. Following the drill, the ladies proceeded to Mrs. Shaffer's home, where an elaborate supper had been prepared for them, following which they went to the Arcade, where they tried their skill at bowling. The gentlemen were, during this time, the guests of the bowling club of the Washington Florists' Club. A supper was tendered them at the Rathskellar, with a game afterwards. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. L. Kline, Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Moss, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Quick, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boone and Miss Carrie Rett. The local bowling team was composed of William H. Ernest, Robert McLennan, Samuel Simmons, Guy Eiker and George C. Shaffer.

Elmer C. Mayberry left March 23 for New York, where he was one of the guests of the New York Florists' Club at the anniversary dinner. On his return Mr. Mayberry will stop off at Philadelphia to visit his many friends there.

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

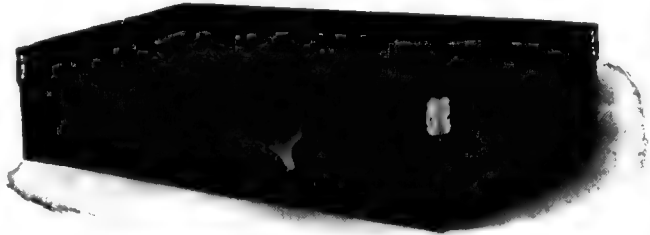

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

Some recommend to plant in a depression and water each plant separately, but I would rather plant on a hill and have the water run away from the plants. Of course, the plants should never suffer for want of water.

In one large house I have installed Skinner irrigation, which I consider ideal for watering in the summer months, as it leaves the soil always in a loose, open condition, so that no cultivation is needed, except weeding, which should not be neglected.

As soon as planting is done, we give the first support, using the well-known wire rings, with two legs stuck in the ground. They keep the plants in a natural, round shape. Soon flowering shoots grow up and we put another support in place. This time we stretch wires lengthwise and twine crosswise. Gradually we put two more on, making four in all, each six inches above the other. Disbudding should commence as soon as the buds are large enough to handle.

Heat, Ventilation and Feeding.

As soon as the nights get colder, making it impossible to keep the temperature at 48 or 50 degrees, with some air on at night, a little heat should be given to keep up the temperature and give the desired results. Throughout the winter months, ventilation should be given as much as possible. Even when the outside temperature goes down to 10 or 20 degrees above, a crack of air should be given to keep the air pure and moving.

In October the plants can usually stand a little feeding and, if no bone or other fertilizer has been mixed with the soil before bringing the plants into the house, I usually put either a sprinkling between the plants and cover with a light mulch consisting of half soil and half sheep manure, or mix the fertilizer with the mulch, the latter way being preferred. This fertilizer should not contain more than three per cent of nitrogen, but can be rich in phosphoric acid and potash. I warn against the use of nitrate of soda, blood, ammonia or tankage, at any time when the plants are in bud or flower, or they will come bullheaded and will not keep. Mulching not only gives nourishment, but prevents the formation of scum and keeps the surface open to admit the air. I usually put it on half an inch thick, and later repeat it several times.

Toward spring, manure watering will be beneficial, but the manure water should not be too rich and should be made with cow or sheep manure. As long as the plants make a heavy growth, with dark and broad leaves, feeding is not needed.

Fighting the Pests.

This is all I can say about the culture of the carnation, but we must not forget our little enemies. The first one in the season we usually notice is the so-called thrips. We cannot see much of him, but suspect his presence when some of the shoots come out twisted and crippled; and when the buds show color, the edges of the petals on white flowers look burned, while on colored varieties they look striped. A few good fumigations or sprayings with tobacco extract in short succession will clean this pest out.

Aphis or green fly appears persistently, but will also be killed by tobacco or other insecticides. As a rule, I have carnations sprayed once a week with tobacco solution during the whole season.

Just after benching, the plants are benefited by a spraying with Bordeaux mixture, as a precaution against both fungi and insects.

One of the worst enemies is Mr. Red Spider, as he will not succumb to fumigation of any kind, not even to hydrocyanic gas, as has been frequently recommended. I know by experience that the plants would have to be killed first and then the spiders starved to death. I find that Aphine will kill all that can be reached, but is a little expensive in bad cases. After all, good and persistent syringing is the best cure.

Various Notes.

Owing to the backward season, trade has not yet shown any spring spirit. A good supply of Easter stock is in evidence among the growers.

H. J. Puvogel, the Grand avenue florist, will rebuild his entire range of glass this summer.

J. Christensen, superintendent for Holm & Olson, is completing a new range of houses, which he has leased to his brother, who will devote the range to summer roses.

The annual dance held in Minneapolis, February 19, was a most enjoyable affair, over 100 couples from the two cities being in attendance.

Chas. Fuhlbruegge has accepted a position with Holm & Olson and will be in charge of the sundries and supply department.

O. R. Eckhardt & Co. have completed the first year of wholesaling and report a good year, with bright prospects for the future.

L. Anderson & Co. have started a new store in the Schubert theater building, with Mrs. Anderson in charge. The Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia, and Harry Balsley, of Detroit, were recent callers on the trade here.

The Twin City bowling teams are rolling a series of games to determine the ownership of a fine silver cup, donated by Harry Balsley. A match was rolled Saturday night, when St. Paul took three straight by a margin of 74 pins. This gives St. Paul a total lead of about 160 pins. The concluding match will be in Minneapolis Thursday evening, March 28.

Mr. Pochelon's House Warming.

Monday evening, March 25, will long be remembered by Detroit florists, their families and employees as a red letter occasion. Invitations were received requesting every member of the Detroit Florists' Club to be the guests of Albert Pochelon in the new store and conservatory of the Bem Floral Co. Lunch was served, delightful music was heard and Mr. Pochelon's new store was given a great send-off. Perhaps in no other line of business has there ever been such a gathering of men all wishing one of their competitors success in every sense of the word and to show the esteem in which Mr. Pochelon is held he was made the recipient of a beautiful Chiara marble pedestal. The question now arises, would all this goodfellowship exist in the trade if we had not a florists' club where we may air our troubles?

Now for a few lines about this new store. Mr. Pochelon has many ideas of his own concerning the requirements of a modern floral establishment and these he has embodied in his new store. The front is in white terra cotta, with panels of Pewabic tile decorations on each side of the large show windows. On entering the store one is confronted by a wide stairway leading to the beautiful conservatory over the store. At the head of the stairway Mr. Pochelon has built what at first appears to be the front of a pretty French cottage, with its large windows. In fact, as one looks up the stairs he is led to imagine that he is looking outdoors, as no part of the conservatory shows. Immediately back of these windows, and on the same floor with the conservatory, is Mr. Pochelon's private office and his show room for pottery, table decorations, etc. An immense fire-place and large, deep bay window are also provided to give an opportunity for showing what can be accomplished in decorations. Instead of being elaborately finished in gold or other decorations, the walls of this new store are finished in plain stucco and the mirrors outlined only in plain white frames. Here another of Mr. Pochelon's original ideas will be worked out. Garlands and empire wreaths of laurel leaves, magnolia, etc., made by his own decorators, will adorn the walls and outline the mirrors. Immense baskets or wall pockets filled with various grasses and prepared greens also adorn the walls and corners. These decorations will, of course, be changed from time to time. A refrigerator divided into three compartments practically covers one whole side of the store, being twenty-one feet long. Mr. Pochelon uses grasses, straw flowers, etc., in his work to a large extent and a complete variety is always carried in stock.

In the rear of the store is a large shipping room and garage and a large electric freight elevator is provided for reaching the four upper floors, which comprise the rear of the establishment.

Various Notes.

Walter Taepke feels quite proud of his new delivery auto. It is one of the neatest little cars in the city. It is painted a royal blue, with pale blue stripes. Asman & Dunn also recently added a car to their delivery outfit.

The Bomb Floral Co. put a new delivery car into service last week.

windows and interior were appropriately decorated for the occasion, tea being served by young ladies who were dressed in Dutch costumes.

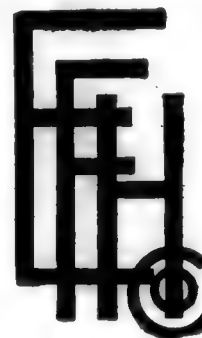

Over fifty members of the Detroit Florists' Club accepted Chas. Plumb's kind invitation to spend Friday afternoon, March 22, at his greenhouses. The afternoon was spent in viewing Mr. Plumb's splendid showing of spring and Easter stock and was a fitting launching of the handsome new show houses and office and shipping room recently erected. Lunch and speeches, especially one by E. A. Scribner, made the whole a most delightful visit. H. S.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies eight pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

Redwood City, Cal.—W. A. Leslie, the landscape gardener, is laying out the grounds at the estate of George Lents, in the foothills near this town.

Spokane, Wash.—J. H. Orme is preparing to open a retail store at 609 North Monroe street in time for the Easter trade. He will do business as the Monroe Seed and Floral Co.

Seattle, Wash.—B. D. Chesnut, of Chesnut's Nursery and Dahlia Garden, says he exterminates moles in his grounds outdoors by putting a little arsenic on pieces of potatoes and placing these in the holes in which the animals burrow.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Funeral work has been the mainstay of the market during the last week, though considerable out-of-town shipping has also aided in preventing a surplus of flowers. Bulbous and spring stocks are still the largest items offered, the later daffodils and narcissi making fine displays everywhere. Of the latter, N. poeticus is most in evidence. There is a scarcity of yellow tulips, but other colors are plentiful and good. Gladioli must still be counted among the scarcer items, though probably by the time these notes appear wholesalers will be able to supply in quantity. Easter lilies are plentiful and good, both in pots and cut, and are principally northern grown. Why the growers in this section allow the San Francisco men to get away with this trade is not easily understood.

Roses are plentiful and good, the bright sun of late having put more life into the plants. Beauties are fair. The Killarneys are better than for some time and there are also fine flowers of Kaiserin. Carnations are equal to the demand, but the quality in some cases leaves much to be desired. This refers principally to the outdoor stock. Orchids are not largely shown in the retailers' windows, but this may be due rather to lack of demand than to any scarcity. If trade growers are short, there is usually a good supply to be had from the amateur element. Violets are becoming poorer and scarcer right along. Valley is abundant and good. An addition to the plant supply is noted in the pretty little specimen tree or Moutan peonies, which are most attractive. Greens of all kinds are more plentiful and cheaper. Adiantum is being shipped in at low rates from growers at a distance, but the local men appear to be holding their own for quality.

Various Notes.

Tulips are in the height of their glory at the Los Angeles Flower Market and a grander lot of blooms were never seen than those now being shipped by this firm. Business is keeping up well here.

The store of the Freeman-Lewis Co., on Fourth street, was closed March 20, the date of the funeral of Mrs. Lewis, mother of C. Lewis, who died at her home that week. Charlie has been most devoted to his mother, especially during her long illness, and everyone sympathizes with him in his loss. Many fine floral pieces from the local trade showed the respect in which both were held.

Tassano Bros. report business in the wholesale end good, much of the stock brought in from outside points never coming to the store at all, but going direct from the soil to their customers. Some splendid adiantum is shown here, as well as choice Easter lilies.

The Easter lilies are fine at Creutz & Co.'s store; large stems, with twelve to fourteen flowers, are shown. Good gladioli are also arriving in quantity.

The H. N. Gage Co. has all its stock in fine condition, but Kaiserin roses were noted as particularly good, as well as the big lots of Narcissus poeticus, ixias and various irises.

knocks but once, but here is your opportunity and it is going to knock twice. If you don't take advantage of it you are certainly "knocked."

We have a few thousand fine two-year-old plants and the engraving will convey a good idea of their character. Each plant will produce not less than 100 cuttings and the original plant can be cut back to between the three and four-foot mark as shown, potted into a 10-inch pot and by pinching the growths during summer and early autumn will make a full, rounded specimen similar to an azalea in form, with dozens of splendid big bracts. We worked this stunt ourselves successfully last season, getting as high as $10 each for single plants.

WHAT WE CAN DO, YOU CAN DO.

fine bulb stock at the city place and there is also a grand display of all classes of conifers in boxes and pots. The nursery at Montebello is always worth a visit, but from now on, during the next three months, it will be at its best. I could not begin to mention the many fine things to be seen, both inside and outside, and can only advise those interested to go and see for themselves.

A fire at the Stimson building, close to the Redondo Floral Co., threw a scare to A. Knopf, but the flames did not reach the store. Funeral work is plentiful here.

O. C. Saakes recently had his window treated entirely with daffodils, which made a pretty and decidedly artistic display.

J. W. Wolters' new store, at 627 South Hill street, is nearing completion and will be a magnificent one. At present the Angelus Flower Shop, on Fourth street, will also be run, but as much as possible of the business will be diverted to the new place.

Three Florists are extremely busy with high-class funeral work.

At the Hayward Floral Co.'s store some beautiful plants have been on display, including magnificent rhododendrons and some fine showy plants of Kalmia latifolia. This makes an elegant pot plant. The Japanese azaleas are also extremely fine here.

Dieterich & Turner are cutting heavily of all classes of roses at Montebello. The quality is fine in all cases. The young stock is in fine shape in the new house. Many thousands of young Beauties, Killarneys and all the popular kinds, as well as novelties, are ready

H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business remains steady, but little of consequence is on the social calendar. There seems to be plenty of stock, with sufficient demand to use the surplus. St. Patrick's day coming on Sunday hurt business to a slight extent, but there was enough to make the extra efforts worth while. Shamrocks and green carnations were the principal sellers and some attractive windows were in evidence.

Spring flowers are in greater variety, with tulips predominating. Rhododendrons, spiræas and ramblers are good sellers, especially the latter.

With Easter almost here, everything is in readiness and there seems to be plenty of stock. Lilies will predominate, yet there will be a variety, although there is a general scarcity of azaleas. With continued bright weather there will be plenty of cut flowers to go around.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Continued bright, warm weather has had the effect of bringing thousands of early spring blossoms into town. This is especially noticeable in bulbous stock, for never have we had a better showing in March. With the warm weather, however, we may expect an end shortly of daffodils and tulips. Narcissi, except a few poeticus, are over for the season. Fruit blossoms of half a dozen kinds are being sent into town in great quantities. Freesias and hyacinths are about a thing of the past and irises are on the wane. Violets have taken a sudden spurt, owing to a few days of rainy weather, but they will not last much longer. Business is only fair, but in comparing it with that of one year ago we find we are not behind.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MARGUERITE PLANTS, "MRS. F. SANDER"

CHRYSANTHEMUM MARGUERITE

SANDER. In this we have unquestionably the most important flowering plant introduced in many years that will not only be grown extensively for cut flowers, but also a subject which will prove invaluable for conservatory and window garden, succeeding in any light, sunny position. Unlike all other Marguerite of the purest glistening white throughout; in size it frequently measures 3 to 4 inches across; the center a mass of closely arranged fringed florets; these are surrounded or edged by the broad, shining white petals forming a flower which reminds one forcibly of a bouquet of Asters. These are produced on long stems with known in other varieties of the Marguerite. If used in floral work or decorations, or for vases, are simply beautiful and the plant will give one pleasure, as there is never a day that this plant is not in bloom. The illustration is taken from plants very, and we consider this plant one of the finest novelties ever introduced of its kind. It has proven a bloomer inside as out.

grumbling among growers or retailers. Prices are not what they might be, but there is a tendency to come a little nearer to normal. Carnations are not so plentiful and the price has gone up slightly. Daffodils are scarce and the demand is good. These flowers seem to be used largely for decorations this spring. Other bulb stock is selling well. The California violets are not so plentiful and there is a big demand for home grown stock. The supply of Easter lilies seems to be adequate and the stocks look as if they would be in fine shape for Easter. The demand for plants for bedding and borders has commenced and of this class of merchandise the supply is plentiful, as usual.

Various Notes.

Emil Burkhart has just completed the erection of a small greenhouse plant at Matthiesen station, his intention being to grow bedding plants, tomatoes, etc.

The Seattle Cut Flower Exchange reports business good in the new quarters on Second avenue.

Risdon & Son have leased two acres of ground adjoining the premises at Holly street, Brighton, where they purpose growing sweet peas, asters and other hardy flowers. This concern is opening a flower stall in the entrance to the Arcade building on Second avenue, April 1. Miss Risdon, who in partnership with Miss Wagner ran the stall at the Savoy hotel, will be in charge.

THE TRADE IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Referring to the extent of the horticultural trades in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, a writer in an English trade paper states that the number of establishments is approximately 3,000, with 4,000 acres of glass—175 million square feet. The land in use is 20,000 acres. The investment in the 500 leading establishments is estimated at $50,000,000; the next 1,000 establishments another $10,000,000, and the remaining 1,500 places hardly $1,250,000, the whole industry therefore representing an investment of some $61,250,000.

There is no reliable data as to the number or extent of the commercial greenhouse establishments in the United States. The government census of 1900 undertook the gathering of the

OUR LINGERING WINTER.

The March wind blows over melting snows,
The air is soft in the woodland glen;
'Tis the time o' year when spring is here—
If it doesn't get cold and snow again.

The song o' the bird again is heard,
And one flits over you now and then;
You say, "Ah, soon they'll be all in tune—
If it doesn't get cold and snow again."

The March sun gleams over flooded streams,
The snow is gone from hillside and glen;
'Tis the time o' year when spring is here—
If it doesn't get cold and snow again.

—B. L. T. in Chicago Tribune.

THE bean growers appear to have had no trouble getting all the acreage they need.

A REPORT from Holland says that the turnips standing for seed in the Groningen district have been seriously damaged by the severe winter.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia, who for many years have handled more sweet pea seeds than any other house in America, are said to be having much their largest season.

IN the cities of the Atlantic seaboard counter trade is reported to have begun in real earnest at the opening of the present week. Too much ice still on the ground to have much doing in the west.

THIS is the week that usually sees the peak of the mail orders, but the season is much too backward this year. This will go on record as the season in which no feature of the seed trade was normal.

THE Milford Trust Co., Milford, Conn., of which Arthur B. Clark is president, opened March 4. A Bridgeport, Conn., paper prints a picture of the handsome new building and a portrait of Mr. Clark.

GERMANY had the same hot summer as the American seed growers, and they have had the same hard winter. It is reported that the biennials, of which the acreage was somewhat less than usual, have suffered considerably.

AT the flower show at Chicago March 12 to 17 there were two exhibits of new strains of Spencer type of sweet peas of winter-flowering habit. Both were a bluish pink in color. The Spencer pea will now be an all-the-year-around possibility.

THERE are reports that the demand for aster seeds is not opening the way it should, probably due to the weather as much as to the fact that the crop was not especially profitable last season. In some of the best varieties the supply of seeds is not large.

OFFICIAL figures of the bulb exports from Holland show that 1909 was the high record year, there having been a falling off in 1910 and another in 1911. The maximum exports to the United States (1909) were 3,500,000 kilos. A kilo is 2.20485 pounds.

JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, have just issued the sixth edition of their highly successful booklet, "How to Grow Asters." It was written by George Arnold, farm superintendent for the Vicks, and has been thoroughly revised since the fifth edition went out of print.

Mt. Airy, Md., Feb. 26, 1912.

Dear Sir:—We have been cutting very fine peas this season from your stock. Stems 18 and 20 inches, with 3, 4 and 5 flowers, and in several instances with 6 flowers to a stem. You deserve and receive great honor from the trade for bringing Winter flowering Sweet Peas to their present high position in the market. You have already done more for the florist than the great Burbank will ever do.

WILL the day ever come when America will produce all its needs in seeds? Many think it is not so tremendously distant.

To judge by the early reports, there is no chance whatever of large seed crops in Europe this year. Optimism is dead in the trade over there.

AN Erfurt seed grower says one of the increased items of expense this season has been cablegrams—used in asking whether to cut orders or fill in full, at higher prices than quoted?

THE German growers of flower seeds note a steady increase in the demand from year to year. This season the supply was short, but prices did not advance in proportion and there was a pretty prompt clean-up.

THE experience of the Holland bulb travelers this season brings into greater prominence the tendencies that have been apparent for several seasons. The growers who have forced bulbs for the larger wholesale cut flower markets are, to say the least, not keen to increase their orders, while those who force bulbs for their own local retail trade are buying fully as many as in any previous season. The Hollander naturally goes where the business is to be had and few towns now go unvisited. At the same time the seed houses are increasing their orders for the popular medium priced bedding varieties of tulips.

MEAN TEMPERATURES.

According to the Century dictionary the mean temperature is the degree midway between the two extremes for the period, but with the baseball season opening April 11 the office boy's definition of the mean temperature is "what we have had lately"—and the seedsman agrees with the office boy. Taking Chicago as an example of what the whole country has had to endure, the following is how last week's mean temperature compares with the normal:

Date.	Normal.	This year.

March 20.....	35°	22°
March 21.....	36°	23°

THE SEASON AT LOMPOC, CAL.

There was rain of two-fifths of an inch or less on six days in December and four days in January, the total fall being two inches. Then there was an interval to March 1 without precipitation. From March 1 to 21 there was rain on ten days, the total being slightly more than four and one-half inches, giving a little more than six and one-half inches since December 1. This is far below the normal or average rainfall for Lompoc, but the fact that in 1910-1911 over twenty-four inches of rain fell, with the ten showers which fell in December and January, aided us materially in the preparation of the land for the reception of seeds, and especially sweet peas. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. had about 150 acres planted to sweet peas about the middle of January, much earlier than was possible in the season of 1910 and 1911, with just enough moisture in the soil to germinate seeds which were not too hard to sprout.

As everyone knows who has had anything to do with sweet peas, the seeds germinate irregularly. This peculiarity is more noticeable when grown under greenhouse conditions, because the stock then comes under more direct observation. Greenhouse and coldframe treatment of sweet peas is only given to choice varieties and selections when seeds of these are few in number. This process is, however, educational and shows conclusively that California grown seed is far superior to that which is received from Europe. The seed produced in Europe shows decidedly better germinating averages for the season of 1911 than it did in 1910. A case in point: The highest priced novelty sent out in 1910 from Great Britain was so low in actual germination that if recorded here it would hardly be believable. The seed of the same variety grown on Floradale the following season was all that could be desired. Everyone who has either lived in the British Islands or has visited there knows how moist it is. Last year, the summer of 1911, was an exception, being unusually hot and dry. In California, or it is better in this connection to speak of Lompoc weather conditions, we had no rain from March 10, 1911, until December 4. It will

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

Not so many years ago you bought soda crackers at the corner grocery, taken from a barrel—just a plain wooden barrel—the cat slept on them at night and they were handed out per pound during the day. If you happened along when the barrel was first opened you got a pretty fair deal, but a little later the crackers tasted as though you had carried them in your back pants pocket during a baseball game. Today you ask for Uneeda Biscuits, put up in trademarked packages, because you know they are the best in the market. In ancient times all personal property bore the owner's trademark—cattle, sheep, books, etc. The emperors stamped their images on the silver coins; the slave owners burned a circle into the palm, or a cross upon the forehead of their slaves, and often the owner's name was tattooed upon the slave's shoulder. So trademarks are as old as the pyramids. Today the manufacturer blows his mark into glass, moulds it into steel and weaves it in tanen-tries—fixes it somewhere, and in some way, on everything he is proud of. The florist trademarks his boxes—the paint man with a label on the can. The men who don't trademark their goods are usually ashamed of them—they have something to conceal. And so the bulb men who are not ashamed or doubtful of their case contents use a trademark on their cases. The Horseshoe Brand trademark is a mark of quality—of reliability—of security, to the buyers in the bulb line. You need have no fear to buy. You may be proud of it, as we are, for it covers the best the crops afford. In lily bulbs and French bulbs it reigns supreme. There are none better produced. They are the best we know of—if we could get them better we would—but we can't. So when you want to be sure to have good bulbs get the Horseshoe Brand. Prices reasonable. Send for the Book of Bulbology and Map of the World. Free to the trade.

therefore readily be appreciated what ideal weather conditions prevail for the thorough ripening of sweet pea seeds. No irrigation is resorted to out here for sweet peas when not less than ten inches of rainfall is had during the winter season. It will be seen by referring to the records in the first paragraph that so far we have not received the requisite ten inches, but when we fully realize that twenty-four inches fell last season it will be apparent we had some moisture left in the soil, which, with the dry farming system practiced here, was conserved.

The crops in general are looking quite promising in Lompoc since the welcome March rains. Mustard, one of Lompoc's staple crops, is looking better now than it did last year at this time, the excessive rainfall of early 1911 causing the plants to assume a decidedly yellow hue. While in some few isolated spots this year it suffered during the recent drought, the belated rains have done wonders in freshening up this as well as other growing crops.

Lompoc valley has the unique distinction of growing more mustard seed than any other locality in the universe. This seed is used principally commercially in the manufacture of condiments, though Fordhook Fancy is grown to some extent for seed purposes.

Beans, another crop well to the fore in Lompoc, will not be sown until May.

Some weather predictors claim we will have rains later this year than we have had the last two years, when the last in 1910 was on Easter Sun-

$2,000.00 for 1000 Gladiolus Bulbs

This is what I am willing to pay for a PURE WHITE variety which possesses all of the attributes which combined make the variety "PEACE" the BEST commercial WHITE GLADIOLUS in existence today.

I am egotistical to this extent, that from the varieties which I have introduced during the past ten years, the majority of which are not only being liberally used by both Florists and Amateurs, but are also demanded and listed by Professional Growers, I have the right to assume that my judgment as to the value of a variety should be worth some consideration, and that I am not a Novice in experimental and trial work. "PEACE" has been grown and increased by me since 1904, and has been planted in all kinds of soil, and under almost every climatic condition, and has never failed to "make good." If this can be truthfully said of any other White variety of equal or superior merit, I want it.

This is the GRANDEST WHITE VARIETY ever offered in the world, and the international title of "PEACE" was selected for this valuable type, which will become a standard variety and secure a permanent place in every country when known.

This variety is not only NEW, DISTINCT and of more than SPECIAL MERIT, but it has WONDERFUL VITALITY, which will insure perfect satisfaction under all reasonable conditions.

The plant is MOST STRIKING and ATTRACTIVE. Its MASSIVE PROPORTIONS, broad heavy foliage of a rich green, erect and vigorous habit of growth, give evidence of the CONSTITUTION AND VIGOR, rare in light colored hybrids. These qualities are further proven by its EXCEPTIONAL REPRODUCTIVE POWERS, by offsets and division.

Matured BULBS ARE LARGE, smooth and practically IMMUNE FROM DISEASE, and produce plants FIVE FEET high, before the bloom spike appears.

The FLOWERS ARE LARGE, of good form and correctly placed on a heavy, STRAIGHT SPIKE. They are a BEAUTIFUL WHITE, with a pale lilac feathering on the inferior petals.

As a CUT FLOWER there is no variety which will develop better, and for the GARDEN I have yet to find its equal.

In placing the price of this variety within the reach of every admirer of the Gladiolus, I do so with the greatest confidence in its future popularity and that it SUPPLIES A LONG FELT WANT, especially TO THE FLORIST.

"PEACE" is NOT an EARLY BLOOMER but rather MEDIUM TO LATE, and planted at the same time with other stock, it is in its BEST CONDITION when most other varieties have PASSED BLOOMING. It is therefore of EXCEPTIONAL VALUE to the FLORIST at this time, when there are few other light-colored flowers in bloom.

"PEACE" (Groff's)

Awarded certificate of merit 1906, by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

LOS ANGELES SEED NOTES.

Since the rains the retail trade has more than doubled and everybody is rushed to the limit. The demand in every line is good; for seed potatoes, especially, the call is quite exceptional.
By the time these notes are printed many thousands of acres will be planted in southern California, which expects to supply the eastern shortage.
One Chinaman turned in an order recently to a local firm for 8,000 sacks of choice seed potatoes at $3 per sack of 115 pounds, and this is only a drop in the bucket. Hundreds of others are planting 1,000 sacks and over, and, calculating on a basis of five bags to the acre, this will mean some potatoes.
Shipping in carload lots to the east will probably commence about May 1.
California cauliflower shipments are over for the season.

BULBS IN SOUTH OF FRANCE.

Francis M. Mansfield, U. S. Consular Agent at Toulon, France, sends the State Department an account of the bulb growing industry in the south of France from which the following will be of interest to the trade:

"According to the statistics of the departmental professor of agriculture, the bulk of the area given over to horticulture is that devoted to flowering bulbs, grown for the bulbs, of which there were exported to the United States in 1911 nearly $200,000 worth, and for their blooms, which, during the winter season, are shipped to the wholesale flower markets of Paris, London and Berlin by special train leaving the coast towns each night.

"The most extensive area noted in 1911 was that devoted to the narcissus, 3,552.54 acres, followed by hyacinths, 717.75 acres, and Lilium candidum, 395.36 acres. This total, which does not take count of the freesia, gladiolus, ranunculus, or the violet, had approximately the same acreage as in 1910, with a certain gain in area of Lilium candidum and about the same loss on hyacinths.

"Immortelles cover an area of 531.25 acres and produce a crop valued at $38,600, of which nearly seventy-five per cent is exported to the United States. Including all the horticultural products of the Department of the Var, of which immortelles and flowering bulbs only are exported to the United States, there has been a steady annual increase, averaging twenty per cent.

"In general, the bulb crop of narcissus, hyacinth, and Lilium candidum was large in 1911, particularly of the finer varieties. Prices at the beginning of the shipping season, July 1, were

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912

This is the most complete catalog published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye O placed after what is known to be the best. In addition full descriptions are given of many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912 contains 148 pages with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalog we have condensed an experience of thirty-four years, both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalog, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Truckee and Florist.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The W. K. Fletcher Bulb and Floral Co. has leased for a long term a tract of 40 acres of land located within the city limits of Des Moines, and especially adapted for the growing of bulbs. The change is made necessary by reason of lack of room to care for our rapidly increasing trade.

While still within the limits of Des Moines, all mail should be addressed to Valley Junction, Iowa, as we are outside the free delivery limits of Des Moines. The latter city will remain our shipping point, as heretofore.

We are sold out of Gladioli for this season's delivery, and the greater part of the coming season's crop is already under contract. However, we will be pleased to quote prices on strong divisions of field-grown clumps of the better sorts of Dahlias upon request.

It is quite possible, however, that a certain part of this overstock was shipped to Holland and may even have found its way thence to the United States later in the season, as Holland-grown bulbs. It is thought by many that for the 1912 season there will be somewhat of a curtailment in quantity of bulbs grown, or at least offered, with the idea that this will sustain market prices, which in a large degree are speculative, because the grower is seldom a shipper.

"At Ollioules and Hyeres many of the small growers reach the market through their 'syndicate,' but with the competitive Narcissus grandiflora offered at $3.50 per thousand by outsiders, the generally-agreed-upon syndicate rate of $3.85 was this season often broken. The Roman hyacinth, which in some instances reached the desired $20 or more per thousand, later fell to $15.50 and even less. The marketing of the bulb crop through the growers' unions or syndicates undoubtedly sustains and even raises prices. In a dozen years this has caused an advance in Roman hyacinths from $5.40 to $15.50 and more, and in Narcissus grandiflora from $2.30 to $3.85.

"These shipping syndicates are an advantage to the buyer in offering a certain implied guaranty as to the quality of the stock shipped, so that claims are seldom made against them for rotted or damaged bulbs. A few years ago unscrupulous individuals made such shipments, their inducements being prices very much below the market quotation. This class of middlemen has practically disappeared, at least so far as they are able to extend relations in the United States.

"A horticultural journal recently referred to a bulb-sorting machine lately adopted in Holland, doubtless a machine similar to the average potato sorter. The subject was mentioned by the writer to various bulb growers and shippers hereabouts, who ridiculed the idea, denying the possibility of any method of mechanical sorting without injuring the stock. There is certainly no disposition on the part of growers here to make use of anything but the inexpensive hand labor of men, women and girls for all operations of growing and shipping flowering bulbs."

OUR FUTURE DUTCH GARDENS.

“Uncle Jim” Wilson has sent out from the Agricultural Department a press notice to the effect that Uncle Sam is in a fair way to become a bulb grower to rival the Dutchman. He wants the country to know all about the garden near the town of Bellingham, Wash., where bulbs are being grown “under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.” For years, we are told, the United States has been sending to Holland and European countries many thousands of dollars annually for hyacinth, tulip, narcissus and crocus bulbs, but that hereafter it is likely that much of this money will be kept at home.

It was in 1908 that the government decided to establish a garden on the Pacific coast for the cultivation and propagation of Holland bulbs. A tract of ten acres was leased and the necessary buildings were erected for the purpose of demonstrating whether or not the industry could be prosecuted successfully. This year 869,000 bulbs were planted, and it is said that the results obtained are superior to those of which Holland can boast.

A comparative test recently was made of the bulbs which had been grown in Bellingham. Fifty bulbs of the same varieties of tulips which are propagated in Holland were planted side by side with an equal number of imported bulbs. Those grown at Bellingham opened their flowers from seven to ten days earlier than those from Holland, and they were declared to be of larger size and finer color. Among the American-grown tulips there was a total absence of disease, while the imported plants not only were diseased in many cases, but many of them failed to flower.

The agricultural chief draws a pleasant picture of future tulip shows in America which shall rival those which now draw annually thousands of visitors to the land of dikes and ditches. Uncle Jim believes firmly that America can produce anything if Americans are only taught to do the necessary cultivation. Somewhere the soil is all right, and both in vegetables and flowers the word of authority is that America can compete with the nations.—Chicago Evening Post.

Vegetable Forcing.

STUNTED LETTUCE PLANTS.

We today shipped to you by express a box containing lettuce, with the roots and soil. Will you please examine them and tell us what was wrong with the conditions? The lettuce was transplanted twice and stood for eight weeks on the bench from which the specimens have just been taken. We kept the night temperature at 50 to 60 degrees, with steam heat. On bright days, with air on, the temperature was about 70 or 75 degrees. Our soil is heavy and black and runs together easily when watered. When transplanting, we manured the soil with good, short stable manure, well worked into the soil. Our two houses are each 28x200 and fourteen feet to the peak of the roof, with three feet of glass on each side. The houses contain sixteen benches, each 5½x95 feet, and there was good lettuce on all of them except four, in which they are like the samples sent you. All of them received the same care. Please let us know what is wrong and what is the remedy.

S. B.

The sample plants arrived in good shape and were not diseased. I hesitate to say just what I think the trouble is with them, as it may be from one or two of several unsatisfactory conditions, but I am inclined to think the soil is not as rich or well prepared as it might be. The fact that other benches in the same houses are doing well would indicate that the trouble is not due to the temperature or ventilation of the greenhouse. Perhaps the soil from these two beds came from a different place outside or was manured differently inside. Were these two benches filled with the last plants that were set out? It is usually the case that the healthiest and best plants are planted first and all sickly or poor ones are put in the last bench if the grower is short of plants. If they were stunted when quite small, they could not be expected to do as well as healthy ones, that had never been checked or held back in any way.

I would advise watering these beds with a solution of nitrate of soda fertilizer. Take about a 3-inch potful to a barrel of water and give them a good watering, that will go well down into the soil, to the depth of the roots. Do not run your houses quite so hot. Ventilate every day. Dig down in different spots and note the different degrees of moisture in some beds where the plants are doing well or not doing well.

Do not water too often, but soak well when you do. If there is any chance to get salable lettuce from these beds, the nitrate will help wonderfully.

Glen Olden, Pa.—M. Bogan ships considerable quantities of carnations, sweet peas and other stock to Philadelphia.

Johnstown, Pa.—T. Malbranc is planning to sell his eighteen greenhouses on Barron avenue, Morrellville, and to build about eight large houses near the four he now has in Upper Yoder township, just back of Westmont. He has no more room for the extension of his greenhouses on his property on Barron avenue and additional ground in that vicinity is too expensive to permit the locating of all his houses there. So he has determined upon the other alternative, removing to the vicinity of Westmont, if he can sell his Morrellville property.

NURSERY NEWS.AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

THE nurseries that have established landscape departments all report plenty of work in hand.

THE Orchard Supply Co. has been incorporated at Logansport, Ind., with a capital of $10,000. The directors are T. J. Plancke, L. R. Sutton, John A. Kuhn, H. H. Lowes and W. E. Plancke.

IRVING W. DIX, who during the last nine years has been associated with the Eastern Nurseries, of Holliston, and the Framingham Nurseries, of South Framingham, Mass., has accepted the position of manager at E. W. Breed's Four Pond Nursery, at Clinton, Mass.

BEN HUDNALL, formerly proprietor of the Floral View Nursery, at Tyler, Tex., has removed to Pittsburg, Tex., where he has purchased a tract of land near town. He will give special attention to the propagation of roses, besides growing a select assortment of ornamental shrubs, trees and small fruits.

THE season holds out no bright prospect for the nursery trade over a large section of the country. With the frost so deep in the ground, it will be another three weeks at least before the soil will be in condition for planting operations, and by that time a quick start of growth will be imminent. It probably will be a short season.

BIG PEACH CROP IN GEORGIA.

Manager H. D. Marks, of the Georgia Fruit Exchange, who is spending this month in the peach belt section of the state, has reported that the peach buds are beginning to swell and soon the trees will begin to fruit. His report as to the outlook for the coming peach crop is most flattering. The Exchange is busily engaged in planning for the season's shipments, which, according to Manager Marks' advance estimate, will approximate 5,000 carloads from Georgia during the season. He reports that never in the history of scientific peach culture in Georgia has such a season of preparation for the ripening of fruit been put in as during the last few months.

FIGHTING THE TREE MOTHS.

An interesting lecture was recently given in Pittsfield, Mass., by State Forester Rane, on "How to Check the Gypsy, Brown-tail and Tussock Moths." Professor Rane said that some twenty years ago a professor in Medford,

Mass., imported the gypsy and brown-tail moths, thinking that by crossing these two insects he could get silk-worms. Through some neglect on the part of the professor, the moths got away from him. He at once waited upon the governor and his council, asking for help to control the deadly moths. The governor laughed and thought it was partly a joke. After a little while some money was appropriated for the control of the moths, but, as it was only a small amount,

C. & J. IMPROVED CANNAS

The United States Government's Department of Agriculture has adopted C. & J. Cannas for planting in masses in chosen beds about the National Buildings at Washington, D. C. This fact clearly shows the esteem in which C. & J. Cannas are held at the Department of Agriculture. The improvement of the Canna has been made a study by our Vice-President, Mr. Antoine Wintzer, for the past 17 years, and he has given to the World a new race of Cannas that are a distinct advance in size of flowers, freedom of bloom and general robustness, over the older sorts. All the experts who have seen them unhesitatingly pronounce C. & J. Improved Cannas far superior to those generally known and grown.

WOULD NOT YOUR CUSTOMERS PAY A LITTLE MORE FOR CANNAS SO SUPERIOR?

the damage seemed to keep growing. During the years of 1900 to 1905 no money was appropriated for the work. During that time the whole eastern part of the state became infested with them and the situation was so serious that every city and town in the state was made liable to pay for the extermination of these pests.

It is generally conceded that every creature is put on earth for some reason, but the only apparent reason for the existence of the gypsy moth is to give jobs to persons who are endeavoring to rid the country of them. Professor Rane stated that the subject in itself was a large one and five years ago the legislature saw fit to place this work under the Department of State Forestry. Paris green did not kill the moths, which were rapidly stripping the leaves from the trees. The state legislature appropriated $26,000 to cope with the work and managed to curb the damage to some extent.

Professor Rane exhibited charts showing the increase of the territory covered by the moths since 1900. Although their gradual spread is toward the western part of the state, the prevailing winds are from the west and their spread is slow. Up to this year the state has appropriated $315,000 for their extermination and each town pays according to valuation, the state also paying a certain percentage of the amount used in excess of the appropriation. An understanding has been reached with the United States government this year whereby the government force will work on the picket line and in that manner check the spread to the west.

Professor Rane then explained the manner in which the work of exterminating the moths is carried on. In some cases creosote is put on the egg clusters and kills the eggs. Strips of burlap are also banded around a tree and the moths are destroyed when they are found underneath. The manner of spraying the trees was fully described and illustrated, together with the various kinds of sprays used.

At the close of the lecture a number of questions were asked and they were ably answered. Professor Rane also showed a picture of a sprayer that was got up through the office of the state forester. It is an auto-truck sprayer and cost about $3,000 or $3,500. It has a tank with a capacity of 4,000 gallons and will spray both sides of a street at one time. Professor Rane stated that at present he has a greenhouse 20 x 100 feet, with ten bushels of gypsy moth eggs to be hatched out. He also has the house planted with lettuce for them to feed on. After they get to growing he intends to have them infected with some disease and then carry them to the woods where the moths are the thickest, so as to try the experiment of imparting the disease to the others and causing their death. He also told of the different parasites that are distributed to feed on the gypsy moth. At present one of his agents is in Europe trying to find out the different pests that live on the gypsy moth.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The beautiful weather we have enjoyed in the last two weeks has helped the flowering plants intended for the Easter trade considerably and, with a continuation of it, the market will be well supplied with orchids, hydrangeas, spiræas, Baby Rambler roses, geraniums, etc. Easter lilies will not be as plentiful with some growers as last year, owing to the extremely cold winter we had and the early season.

All kinds of bedding plants, roses and nephrolepis find ready buyers and the large stock on hand will mostly be disposed of by the end of the spring season.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held an interesting meeting March 21, at Kolb's German Tavern. Claude Ory presided, with C. R. Panter, the secretary, at his desk and a large gathering of enthusiastic members present. The committee appointed for the proposed horticultural and agricultural state fair next fall reported progress and feels much encouraged through the interest shown by the various organizations.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. had a splendid exhibit of cut roses, such as Kaiserin, Maryland, Rhea Reid and Bridesmaid. The blooms, stems and foliage of these varieties were perfect and created a sensation among those present. Harry Dressel, the firm's highly successful rose grower, made a few short but interesting remarks, and was the recipient of hearty congratulations. Harry Papworth, president of the company, spoke of the rose exhibit made at the recent Chicago show and the creditable showing his flowers made against the northern growers.

Richard Eichling, foreman for U. J. Virgin, showed Hydrangea hortensis Otaksa, with fourteen flowers and buds in a 9-inch pot; Adiantum O'Brieni and magnificum, and a collection of pteris. The strong and clean cultivation of all his plants was highly commented upon.

F. J. Reyes and F. Ackermann were elected as members.

Various Notes.

J. A. Newsham is at present busy with the erection of his new range of houses on the new site in the rear of the old grounds. These will be six in number, each 20x150, for the cultivation of orchids, palms, ferns, etc. The material used is Louisiana cypress and all work is done by local factories and builders. The greatly enlarged residence stands now at the entrance to the new addition, and with the old greenhouses removed, the entire place, comprising an area of twelve acres, will be one of the finest in this section of the country.

Mrs. Carrie Rehm has her St. Charles avenue place in fine shape and well stocked. She spoke enthusiastically of the progress the business has been making lately.

Hermann Doescher is moving his entire place of business a short distance from his present location. His immense stock of general greenhouse and outdoor plants is selling freely.

Theodore Betz has an exceptionally fine supply of camphor trees in pots and tubs. He has started to cut his first outdoor grown Marechal Niel roses, which are of good quality.

The Market.

Business continues good, but, excepting a couple of days, the weather has been snowy and bad in general. Funeral work has been quite heavy, several prominent people having died lately.

Carnations, hyacinths, tulips, etc., are plentiful. Roses are a little stronger, but the supply does not equal the demand.

Various Notes.

At Julius Niednagel & Sons' the roses are in excellent condition, with fairly heavy cuts. It is the same with carnations and business is good. Curt L. Niednagel has sold his farm for $8,000, this being the amount he paid for it a couple of years ago. He is again planning to go west and settle on the coast.

The Blackman Floral Co. is cutting heavily of everything except roses. Business is good. This firm started planting the new rose houses last week. Part of the stock is grafted White Killarney.

Henry Seymour has had a good share of funeral work lately. The carnations and other stock look good.

Theodore Kuebler, of the Santa Rosa fruit farm, has been active in organizing the Fruit and Berry Growers' Association, and has been elected president.

Karl Zeidler has the material for two houses, 25x100, which will be erected soon, and he is planning to build two more, 30x300 feet. These houses will be built farther back from the street and eventually the old plant will be torn down. E. L. F.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The supply of stock continued to be abundant all last week, but with the exception of Wednesday and Thursday, during which time we were treated to a fine blizzard, the demand was enough to clean up most of the time.

Various Notes.

Last week was style week with all the large dry goods and department stores and from their standpoint it was a success; but it kept the florists guessing, for in former years the spring openings have covered a period of three weeks or so. It was all crowded into one week this year, making it unpleasant and not so profitable.

Gust Pohl is beginning to cut a crop of sweet peas, which are of fine quality and find ready sale.

While driving down Wisconsin street last Saturday morning the hoof of Wm. Eschrich's horse was caught in the car track and so badly injured that it required an ambulance to convey the horse to a hospital. Mr. Eschrich is located in North Milwaukee, where he grows plants and bulbs.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. has mutually agreed to dissolve partnership. Mr. Schroeder, who resides in St. Louis, Mo., and was not active, has taken over the interests of F. W. Mueller. Mr. Mueller and his son, Gustav, have bought twenty acres of land at Brown Deer, Wis., where they will, as soon as weather permits, erect two 300-foot houses for carnations. The change will take effect April 1.

Chas. Zepnick, who is located out on Chicago avenue, has a fine crop of forget-me-nots on and only hopes the weather will continue cool, so he can hold them for the Easter trade.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports a busy week; lots of stock coming in and moving out. At the greenhouses all hands are rushed packing and shipping pot plants for the Easter trade.

At the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co. they are cutting large quantities of American Beauties of extra fine quality. The Easter plants at the Humboldt avenue houses are all in fine shape and will clean up in a hurry, as many advance orders are on file.

While they have nothing new to report at the store of the G. Rusch Co., they say that last week was a hummer; taking it all around they moved a pile of stock.

The Currie Bros. Co. reports business slack the fore part of last week, but so brisk the latter half that the average is quite satisfactory.

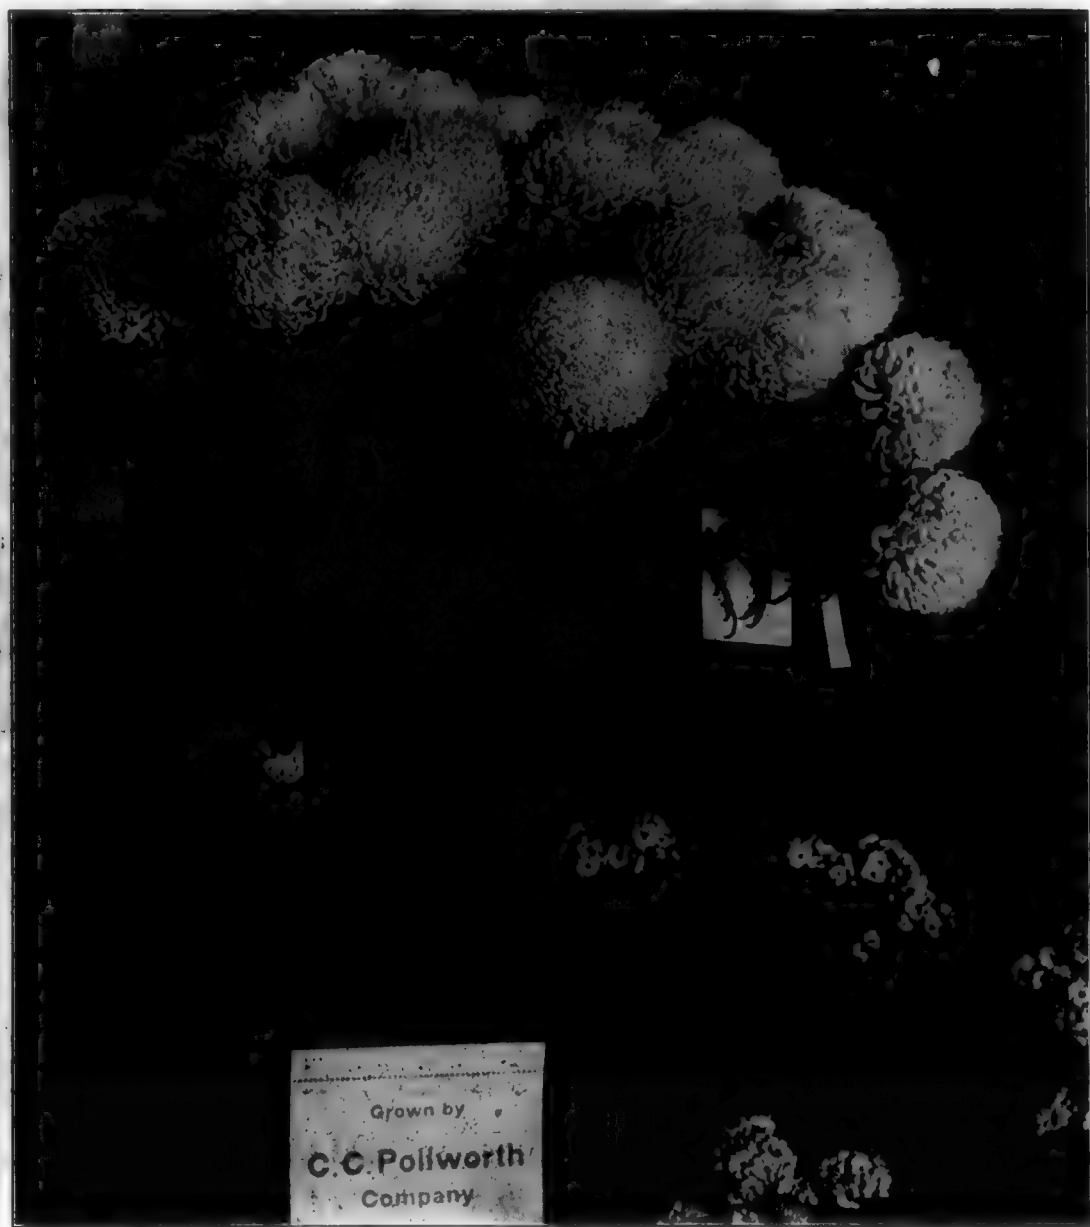

A. F. Kellner had all his decorative plants out last week for the spring openings and had to refuse many orders which could have been taken care of had the custom of former years been followed.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. also got their share of the opening rush last week and are glad it's all over.

John Zech, who has been recuperating in a local sanatorium, has returned to Chicago.

Miss Louise Zimmermann and Walter Halliday are on the sick list.

The Market.

With the exception of one or two days last week, trade has been quiet, but the death of one of our downtown dry goods merchants called for no end of funeral flowers. The weather continues cold and cloudy, with no signs of spring. March 24 we had a fall of six inches of snow. Stock of all kinds is first-class, notwithstanding the cloudy weather.

The outlook for Easter is promising. Roses will be plentiful, while the indications are that carnations will be a little short. Beauties are not what they should be. There will be plenty of lilies, from present indications. In pot plants there will be plenty of rhododendrons, lilacs, lilies, azaleas, ramblers, hydrangeas, spiræas and bulbous stock.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Young Co. experienced no end of trouble at the Cumberland greenhouses for several days last week. Communication by telephone was entirely cut off by the blizzard.

Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., spent a day with the trade this week. Mr. Reukauf was on his way home from a trip to the coast.

John Bertermann sold a lot out of his East Washington street addition this week.

F. Dorner & Sons' Co. is shipping some fine carnations into this market.

Messrs. Steinkamp and Elder visited Lafayette one day last week. They had a fine time, notwithstanding the unusually bad weather they encountered.

MADISON

— The Money-Making Rose —

FLOWERS pure white, resembling Bride; buds fully as large. The foliage is large, does not take mildew, and resembles the foliage of the Holly. The flowers give great satisfaction twelve months in the year. The flowers have splendid keeping qualities. The plants cut as many flowers as the Killarney—stems averaging one grade longer. The plants have very little blind wood.

Crops every five weeks in Mid-Winter, with an intermediate crop, making a continuous cut of flowers all Winter.

Spring, Summer and Fall, the flowers keep their shape and size, and the plants flower most abundantly. The plants can be grown satisfactorily in any Rose House, whether heated by steam or hot water. The plants improve the second, third and fourth year—improving with age.

ST. NICHOLAS

You should plant St. Nicholas next season BECAUSE:-

It covers the whole season with top grade blooms.

It does not crop, nor go off in color at any time from September to July.

It is a great keeper and shipper.

It outsells all other scarlets over the counter.

It has been bringing us from 35 to 50 per cent more all season, than the best Beacon we ever grew.

Many growers have come to see it growing, and then placed their orders.

A number of them placed orders early, then came to see it and doubled the original order.

We can still give you cuttings that will make fine stock for blooming next winter. But let's have your order at once.

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

We have 2000 fine plants of Beacon in 2-inch pots to sell at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Also cuttings in sand, strong and well rooted, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Last week was typical of Lent; plenty of flowers and low prices. Lilies and Beauties seemed to get the worst of it as far as price was concerned, but everything cleaned up by Saturday night at some price.

The retailers are making quite a show of blooming plants, which is not doing the cut flower end any good, as one can get a pretty pot of bloom from 50 cents to $2 and, as they have not been so common, they catch the fancy of the flower buyers.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange is busy moving into its new quarters in Oliver avenue above Wood street.

The flood gave Mrs. E. A. Williams a scare last week. As she had just finished redecorating her store for spring, the promise of a 30-foot flood was not pleasant, but it stopped at twenty-eight feet and did not reach the store, although the cellar was filled.

The John Bader Co. reports having the finest lot of azaleas ever offered for Easter, and they will be just right.

The committee reports arrangements for Prof. John Brashear's lecture as progressing. It will be given in the English room, Fort Pitt hotel, Monday evening, April 15, at 8 p. m. Lunch will be served after the lecture.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Special Premiums.

Chairman C. H. Totty announces that Mrs. D. Willis James, of Madison, N. J., has contributed $500 for special premiums, and Lenox S. Rose, also of Madison, has contributed $50 for the same purpose.

The C. W. Brownell Moss & Peat Co., Walden, N. Y., has offered a first prize of $35 and a second prize of $25 for the best exhibits in Class 98, Section E, covering orchids, twelve plants, distinct varieties.

The governing board is just now preparing a list of special premiums, and any member of the trade who has not been approached and would like to contribute something to the list is invited to do so, communicating with Secretary J. Young, 54 West Twenty-Eighth street, New York, or Chairman C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

J. H. Pepper,
Chairman Pub. Com.

Rates for Exhibition Space.

The rates for trade space at the National Flower Show, in the New Grand Central Palace, New York, April 5 to 12, 1913, will be as follows: Not less than 75 cents per square foot and not more than $1.25 per square foot, and no space will be sold for less than $25.

The rate for space up to fifty square feet will be $1.25 per square foot; from fifty to 100 square feet, $1 per square foot; from 100 square feet up, 75 cents per square foot.

John Young,
Secretary Show Committee.

GARDENERS' ASSOCIATION.

The spring meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Gardeners will be held on Monday afternoon, April 15, at 2:30 p. m. in Horticultural hall, Broad and Locust streets, Philadelphia. This meeting will combine both business and pleasure, the Philadelphia members extending an invitation to all members of the association to attend.

The exhibition committee is making a special effort to bring together a fine display of this season's novelties for the meeting, growers being invited to exhibit. Any exhibits sent to Horticultural hall, in care of David Rust, up to noon, April 15, will be carefully staged by the exhibition committee if the exhibitor cannot be represented in person.

Another interesting feature of the meeting will be the bowling tournament between the members of the winning team which carried off the prize cup at the national show in Boston last year. They will contest for the prize cup. The team is composed of Messrs. Robertson, Dodds, Bachelor and Duckham.

A big attendance of National Association members is looked for.

M. C. Ebel, Sec'y.

THE SPHAGNUM PROBLEM.

Sphagnum moss has been scarce ever since the floods last fall shut off the supply earlier than it ever has been shut off before, but the worst part of the difficulty is that the winter has been so long and snowy that the spring gathered moss will not come onto the market as early or in as good shape as it usually does. Moss, therefore, is not now so hard to get, for the average florist, as it is likely to be in the next few weeks. Good, clean, dry burlap-baled moss is now readily salable at $3 per bale. There is some wet, wire-baled moss coming out of Wisconsin and, although it is stock that the retailer ordinarily thinks he cannot use, this season he is glad to get it and thinks the house that sells it to him has done him a favor in letting him have it. Usually, at that, he is only able to get a few bales at a time.

Wholesale Florists SPRINGFIELD, O.

 The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past, and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

One of Godfrey Aschmann's Lilium Multiflorum Houses (photo taken March 12, 1912). No arguments needed, speaks for itself. The real stuff—The cream of Japan's production. The true Lilium Multiflorum, raised from 9 to 10-inch selected bulbs, $95.00 per 1000. Just look at the picture—they are just right for Easter trade. We sell them cheap too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-inch pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-inch pots.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Vander Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Vander Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tiptop condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each. NOTICE.—A portion of large size Mme. Vander Cruyssen must be ordered in connection with small sizes, because we were able to get only a limited amount of this variety in smaller sizes.

Niobe, double white, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each. Vervaeckiana, double variegated, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. De Schryveriana (double variegated), 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Simon Mardner, double pink, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pes. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo, best red, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Helene Thelemann, Mme. Eichhaute, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Of the varieties left to us, we will give you a good assortment for 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and upwards, just as you say. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Primula Chinensis, in bloom, 5½-in., $2.50 per doz.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Mitchell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Dielytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

HYACINTHS, DAFFODILS, TULIPS.

Bulbs imported by ourselves at high prices from first-class growers in Holland; and cannot be compared with cheap bulbs flooding the market in the fall.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c; 9-in. pans, edged with Asparagus Plumosus, giving them an attractive appearance, 75c; 10-in. pans, filled with first size Grand Maitre hyacinths, 2 to 3 flowers to each bulb, 13 to 15 in. high, also edged with Asparagus Plumosus, $1.00 per pan.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Murillo Tulips, double, pinkish pearl, valued very highly as a pot tulip, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100. Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $2.00 per dozen pots; $15.00 per 100. 9-in. pans, filled with Tournesol or Murillo tulips, edged with Asparagus Plumosus, 75c per pan. Pans nicely packed with excelsior, preventing breakage.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 15c, 25c; 5½-in., 25c.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glaucia and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful ever-green decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, spring 1911 importation, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 3 good tiers, 15, 18 to 20 inches high, 24 to 28 inches across, very handsome, $1.50 to $2.00 each; small size 6-in., $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa Glaucia. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 3, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35 and 40 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5½-in., 3 to 4 tiers, 15, 17 to 20 in. high, 50c to 60c; spring 1911 importation. Can meet all applications.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Latania Borbonica, 6 to 7-in. pots, 30 inches high, 50c to 75c; made up, 50c.

TWO HOUSES DEVOTED TO FERNS.

All in fine condition. The 7 and 8-in. sizes are as large as a bushel basket—some as large as a washtub; ALL POT-GROWN.

Scholzeli and Whitmani ferns, 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Nephrolepis Giatrasii. This is a very handsome fern, resembling the Scottii, but shorter and bushier, with weeping habit, which gives it a very fine appearance and makes it valuable. 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c; 3 to 4-in., 20c to 25c.

Ferns for dishes, 2½-in., assorted, $5.00 per 100.

Asparagus Sprengeri, large 4-in. pots, strong, 10c; 2½-in., strong, $4.00 per 100.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus, spring 1911 sowing, large, bushy 4-in., 10c; large, 8-in., 12 in. high, $8.00 per 100; 2½-in., 6, 8 to 10 in. high, suitable for edging pans of hyacinths, tulips, etc., $5.00 per 100.

Rubber plants, 5½-in. pots, 25c to 30c; 6 and 7-in. pots, 25 to 35 in. high, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

We have no catalogue. Order from ad.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

GODFREY ASCHMANN, 1012 W. Ontario Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
IMPORTER, WHOLESALE GROWER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

AMHERST, MASS.

Florists' day, held at the Massachusetts Agricultural College March 14, in connection with farmers' week, was highly successful. Not as many commercial men attended the exercises as had been hoped and expected, but the fact that Easter was so near and that the florists are exceedingly busy was responsible in a large measure for the small attendance.

The address by H. D. Haskins, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, on "Fertilizers for Glass House Agriculture," was interesting and instructive. Mr. Haskins considered the relation of the fertilizer question to greenhouse crops as compared with outdoor crops, and showed conclusively that in many cases the florists are overloading their soils with fertilizing elements, so that the soil becomes charged with substances which the plant cannot assimilate. He spoke of the best fertilizers to use for securing sufficient nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid in soils for carnations, roses, sweet peas, cucumbers and lettuce.

Dr. H. H. Whetzel, of Ithaca, N. Y., was obliged to cancel his engagement and Dr. J. K. Shaw, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, spoke on the principles of plant breeding. In the evening Dr. H. T. Fernald gave a fine address on some recent investigations in fumigation methods. He spoke principally of the use of potassium cyanide and sodium cyanide in greenhouse fumigation.

The flower exhibit in French hall was the finest ever held at the college and the institution is deeply indebted to the practical men for contributing the newer varieties of flowers so generously to this exhibition. Following is a list of the contributors and the varieties shown:

S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.—Vases of carnations, Pink Delight, Gloriosa, White Wonder and Beacon.

The Westboro Conservatories, Westboro, Mass.—Vase of carnations, Alma Ward.

H. W. Field, Northampton, Mass.—Vases of carnations, new pink seedling, Pres. Seelye, Pink Delight and Winsor.

William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.—Violet Princess of Wales; pansies; vases of sweet peas, Wallacea, Greenbrook, Mrs. Wm. Sim, Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer.

George H. Sinclair, Holyoke, Mass.—Vase of carnations, Alma Ward.

E. A. Richards, Greenfield, Mass.—Vase of carnations, Lady Bountiful.

W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., and Madbury, N. H.—Vases for roses, Killarney, White Killarney, Rhea Reid, Mrs. Aaron Ward, and Mrs. Waddell.

Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.—Vases of roses, Richmond, White Killarney, Dark Pink Killarney and Perle.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.—Vases of roses, Killarney, Radiance, Double White Killarney, Mrs. Taft (Antoine Rivoli) and Double Pink Killarney.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.—Vase of carnations, Benora.

Patten & Co., Tewksbury Center, Mass.—Vase of carnations, Mrs. C. W. Barron.

Montgomery Rose Co., Hadley, Mass.—Vases of roses, Killarney and Lady Hillingdon.

Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.—Vase of roses, Mme. Charles Russell.

Massachusetts Agricultural College—Vases of carnations, Winsor, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress and Beacon; violets, vases of roses, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond; miscellaneous collection of potted cinerarias, cyrtisus, palms and ferns.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that the Curtis Floral Co., 515 South Main street, Hampton, Ia., offers for registration the following geranium. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raiser's description—A seedling geranium, parentage unknown. A strong, compact grower, attaining a height of from twelve to eighteen inches as a summer bedder. Leaves, reniform with slight margin. Color, dark green with dark chocolate colored zone near middle, upper surface densely pubescent. Flowers, irregular, double, outer petals broadly obovate, twice the length of sepals, inner ones narrowed, irregular, stamens three to none, often modified to form petals. Color, brilliant scarlet. Umbel composed of many flowers on long pedicels forming open cluster. Name: Geranium Mrs. K. D. Curtis.

John Young, Sec'y.

WHEN IN PHILADELPHIA Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy. Our Palm sales increased over 44% during the year 1911, over the sales during the previous year. We are strong on the following sizes:

PROVIDENCE.

Trade Conditions.

Business has been fair for mid-Lent and there is every prospect that Easter trade will be in excess of years before. Prices range low. There is a good supply of everything, while violets are almost a drug on the market. The warm weather of the last week sent them shooting ahead at such a rate that a majority of the growers will be off crop for Easter. Reports seem to indicate that there may be a shortage of first-class lilies for this great occasion. There appears to be a large supply of second rate stock, but first quality is reported short.

Various Notes.

Growers are much concerned over the boost in the price of fuel. Coal that was $3.25 a ton a year ago, delivered, is now $6.75 to $7.50 at the yard, and even at these figures the dealers are not willing to book orders of any quantity.

The Dexter Greenhouses, under the new management of John Sharkey Co., report business as being good. Mr. Sharkey was formerly forestry manager for George Johnson & Son, at the Elmwood Nurseries.

E. Huntley, with F. Macrae & Sons, has been enjoying a vacation trip in the south.

A lecture by James Robertson, of Newport, under the auspices of the Greystone Horticultural Society, was held March 25. This is the third of a series that has been held during the winter months. Mr. Robertson took for his topic "Dahlia Culture."

The large plate glass window on the Chestnut street side in Macnair's new store has been wrecked by the severe winds three times during the last winter.

J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, have purchased a new thirty horsepower Pope-Hartford automobile truck for delivery purposes.

Charles Newton, formerly head gardener for I. T. Burden, of Newport, has succeeded Samuel Cunningham as superintendent of the R. T. Wilson, Jr., estate at Palmetto Bluff, S. C.

Arthur R. Magee and W. D. Burt are conducting the Interstate Forestry Co., at 226 Eddy street.

Joseph Kopelman is considering the erection of at least two more greenhouses at his range in Oaklawn.

Eugene McCarron is preparing to begin the erection of a new greenhouse at his range on Hope street.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS.Carnation cuttings and plants are my specialty; not a mere side line. No effort is spared to produce and deliver the best grade of stock. The season here has been one of unprecedented sunlight and my stock is consequently extra strong, vigorous and healthy—in fact the finest I ever produced. Orders booked now for later delivery

...THE... Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Caxton Bldg., CHICAGO.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

few good jobs where the glass is butted, but I am not in favor of this method and I would advise all florists who build greenhouses to bed the glass in putty and lap the joints. Putty makes a cushion for the glass and prevents moisture from getting between the glass and bars. If the best putty is used the glass will not accumulate dirt and make shade, as we find in butted-glass houses.

The Heating System.

The heating system in a greenhouse is an important matter in obtaining the best results. This should be so planned and the coils so arranged that the heat can be equalized. I have always been a firm believer in steam heat for large plants. It is possible with a vacuum system and steam traps to place the boiler on the same level with the greenhouse floor. You will readily see that the expense of a deep cellar can thus be avoided and the cost of taking the ashes out and getting the coal in will be greatly reduced.

My idea of heating a large plant with steam would be to carry a pressure of twenty to thirty pounds and use a reducing valve or a vacuum system. With this plan you always have plenty of steam and your fireman will not have any excuse for not keeping the right temperature in the various houses. This plan is now used in a great many greenhouse plants and has proved to be satisfactory.

The Up-to-Date Builder.

The fact that greenhouse builders can be found in every section makes the planning and building of greenhouses much easier than years ago. The greenhouse builders are always ready and willing to spend their good money to try to improve and build you the best possible kind of a house. This is not always an easy task and I feel that the growers do not realize what this means. The up-to-date builder is always looking out for the best greenhouse material and working out the special details so that these can be standardized, which makes it possible to carry stock so that orders can be filled on short notice. In our private work, where we build small, compact ranges of glass, it is difficult to plan so that the best and most practical arrangement can be had in securing the proper light. We are often limited to small spaces in which to locate private greenhouses. We meet with uneven grades and undesirable exposures.

Palmyra, N. J.—F. R. Matsinger reports that, though trade has been good, this may be his last season in the business, as the ground which he has been renting for outdoor planting will soon be covered with buildings, and his greenhouses are of little use to him without the outdoor space.

Raleigh, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co. say that St Patrick's day "made a hit" with them. They thought they might be able to use a few hundred green carnations and made preparations accordingly. In a few hours these were all gone and it was afterward impossible to prepare the flowers fast enough to meet the demand. This was the first time, they say, in which the day was recognized in this particular manner.

Greenhouse Heating.SIZE OF SMOKESTACK.

I have been using an old 16-inch stack as a chimney for my boiler, but it has rusted out, and I should like to get your advice on the size of a new chimney, to contain a suitable flue for two boilers of the same size as my present one, which is a Castle return tubular, with a grate 36 x 42 inches and a smoke hole 10 x 24 inches. The old stack is twenty-two feet high and has poor draft. What size and height will be needed for the new smokestack?
A. L. B.

The height of the smokestack will depend to some extent upon the surroundings, as it should be higher by five to ten feet than the neighboring buildings. Within certain limits, an increase in the height will permit a reduction in the diameter of the stack. For a return tubular boiler the stack should be at least thirty feet high, and thirty-five or forty feet would be better. A diameter of eighteen inches would be sufficient if the flue is thirty-five feet high.

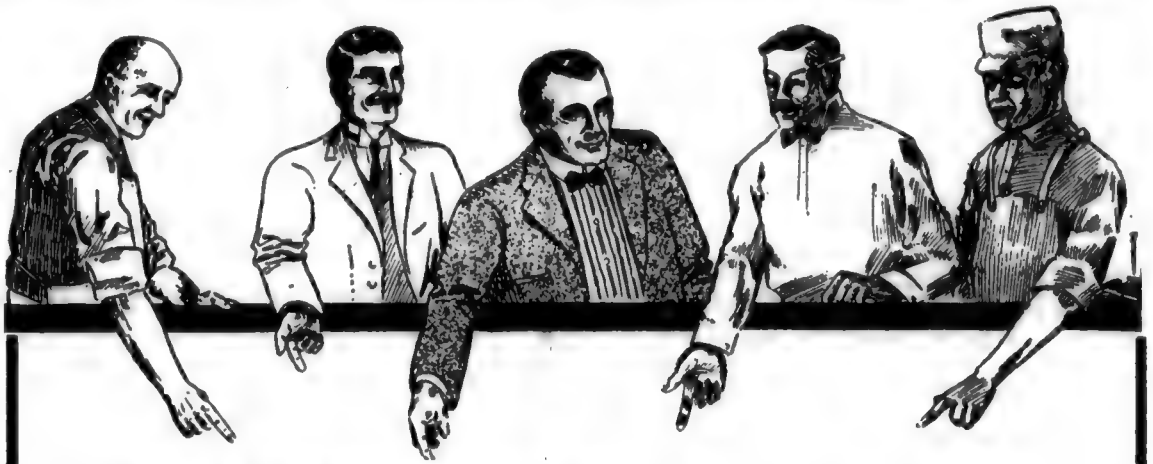

QUANTITY OF FUEL.

We have four houses, each 20 x 150, with 3-foot sides, glass front and boarded back. The houses are well built and tight. With a good hot water system, what should be the temperature of water at the boiler to keep the houses at a temperature of 48 degrees, with the thermometer registering 20 degrees outside and no wind? Under such weather conditions, about how many pounds of coal should be required to keep the water at the desired temperature during the night, using good stove coal? About how many pounds of coal and what temperature of water would be necessary to secure the same results on a night when the outside temperature is 10 degrees above zero? We are located in New Jersey.

W. C. P. & C.

It is not possible to give a definite answer to the questions as asked, as it would depend upon various conditions, such as the size of the boiler, the number and size of the flow and return pipes and the character of the firing. Thus, with a large boiler with a few medium sized pipes, and an elevated expansion tank or a closed system, the water might be kept above 212 degrees by heavy firing, while with a small boiler and a large area of large pipes, the temperature might be 100 degrees or less, especially if the fires were not pushed.

If the radiation and boiler are properly adjusted to the size of the houses, the boiler should have a rating of about 5,000 square feet, and each house should be heated by three 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns, except the Range of Adam Laub & Son, Hughsonville, N. Y. Their letter speaks for itself.

We purchased of you this spring a No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler, which you guaranteed would take the place of three cast iron boilers. Well, the whole thing in a nutshell is this—your word is as good as gold. Night before last we had a severe storm of snow and sleet and a very high wind; we had not the least bit of trouble. We fired the last at 10 p. m. Nov. 24, and the next morning at 7.00 o'clock we looked at the houses and found it only 1 degree less than when we fired the last coal, 9 hours earlier. If this isn't magnificent work and a good test, we would be pleased to hear from any one else that could furnish a better boiler.

We know if parties wishing a boiler would get one from you they never would try any other. We think in five years' running of this boiler we will have the price saved in the difference in our coal bill.

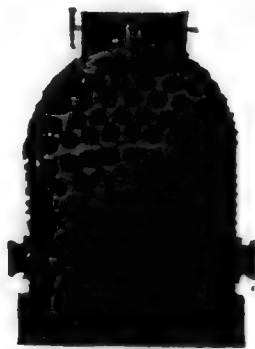

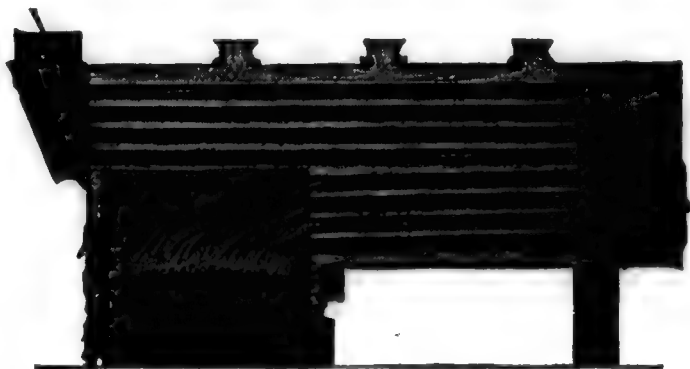

Wishing you the best of success, we remain,

Very truly yours,

one with glass in the side wall, which should have an additional return. Piped in this way, there should be no difficulty in keeping the water in the flow pipes above 180 degrees and in the returns above 140 degrees, with an open tank system.

To maintain a temperature of 48 degrees, with the thermometer registering 20 degrees above zero outside, would require from 500 to 800 pounds of coal, according to its quality, and with an outside temperature of 10 degrees about twenty per cent more would be needed.

HEAT FOR COLD FRAMES.

I wish to use hot water to heat some coldframes, and as I suspect that rules for greenhouse heating will not hold good for frames, I seek advice. The frames are of concrete and are 4x60 feet, inside measurement. The south or low side is twelve inches, the high side eighteen inches, above the ground level. The sashes are 3x4½ feet. I thought of running a 2-inch flow on the high side, six inches from the sashes (this would cast no shade on the ground), with a 3-inch drop to the farther end, and then a drop down to twelve inches below the surface of the soil in the frames, branching into three 2-inch returns. Each frame would be piped in the same way. Lettuce and radishes will be the fall and winter crops, and about April 1 the frames will be bedded to sweet potatoes, for slips or plants. The potatoes will require a soil temperature of 58 to 65 degrees. In this part of Kansas we have many zero days during winter, but after April 1 the temperature is seldom below 35 degrees. Will the foregoing plan give the proper temperature for the crops mentioned?

If I should connect the piping with the greenhouse boiler, will a cut-off valve be required at the head of each frame or only on the flow and return in the boiler room? Can you give the heating capacity of the boiler? It is a round boiler, four feet high above the ash-pit and twenty-two inches in diameter. The fire-pot is twenty-seven inches high and eighteen inches in diameter. There is a 2-inch water leg around the fire-pot. The boiler has two 2-inch flows and two 2-inch returns.

C. H. C.

The plan proposed for heating cold-frames by means of hot water pipes is a good one and there should be no difficulty in keeping up the desired temperature in the frames. It will be necessary, of course, to have the boiler two or three feet below the level of the return pipes. A heater of the size described should be large enough to supply 275 to 300 square feet of radiation. It will be best to have a valve upon each pipe where it enters the hotbeds.

HEAT FOR TOMATO BEDS.

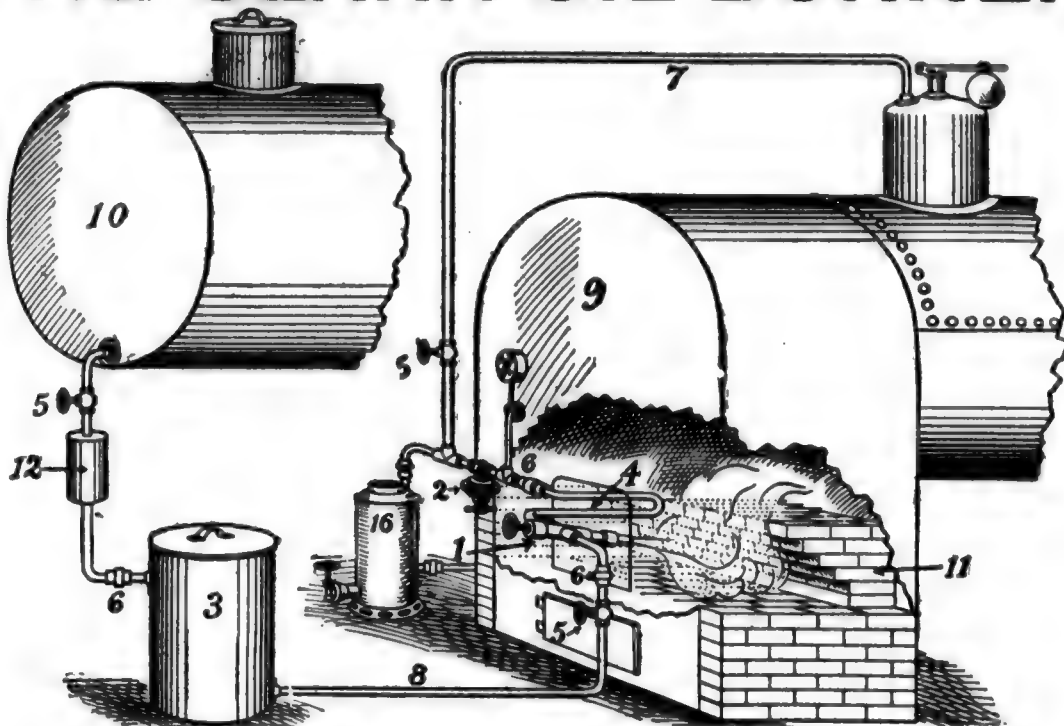

I intend to grow plants for a catsup factory here and I shall build thirteen beds, $5\frac{1}{2} \times 133$ feet. I shall heat with steam, using a tubular boiler. As I am not familiar with steam heating, I should like to get some advice on the matter. I have plenty of 2-inch pipe on hand. My idea is to run a 2-inch pipe through the center of each bed, putting a stop-cock at the farther end and not returning the steam to the boiler, but letting it blow out of each valve. Now, a little advice on connecting the boiler would be greatly appreciated. The ground is almost level. I have to get my water pressure from a storage tank ten feet above ground and 150 feet from the boiler. Would this give pressure enough?

I should also like to get a little information on chemical fertilizers for tomato plants, as the ground is not as rich as it ought to be. The seed will be sown in rows six inches apart and the beds will be ground beds, covered with plant bed cloth in severe weather.

W. S.

The plan proposed for heating the hotbeds should work all right, as it will not only heat the air above the plants but will also furnish bottom heat. The pipes should be given a slight fall, so that the water will not become pocketed. While a greater height for the

THE CLARK OIL BURNER

TRIED AND TESTED FOR THREE YEARS ON STEAM AND HOT WATER.

Mr. Burton B. Crane, Florist, 27 South 16th St., Kansas City, Kan., states:

I have used the Clark Oil Burner in my steam boiler the last two winters and think it far better than anything I know of for greenhouse heating, as it requires but little attention, and is very economical in the use of oil. I have run my boiler continuously for forty-eight hours without attention. I use the heavy fuel oil, which costs me two cents per gallon delivered, and find it fifty per cent cheaper than screened soft coal at $3.30 per ton. Am not counting cost of handling coal and ashes.

Mr. L. C. Fields, Florist, 328 N. 10th, Kansas City, Kan., states:

I have used the Clark Oil Burner in my hot water boiler for the last two winters, and think it the best proposition for greenhouse heating I have ever used. If you could only fix it so it would start itself it would be O. K., as it needs no attention after it is started.

Facts Regarding the Use of Oil as a Fuel. Perfect combustion is the object and can be obtained by thoroughly atomizing and spraying the Oil into the fire box. This is done by the action of steam upon the Oil while passing through an especially constructed atomizer, or oil burner. There are a great many so called Oil Burners being placed on the market, but the majority of them go to the junk pile.

The Clark Suction Feed Oil Burner is adapted for low and high pressure steam boilers, hot water boilers, Furnaces, Ovens, etc. Our system does not require a lot of expensive pumping machinery for forcing the Oil through the Burner to the Fire Box, but by the action of the steam passing through the Burner. The Oil is sucked up from below the burner, passing through the burner it is thoroughly atomized and blown into the fire box, this suction feed insures safety, as when steam is shut off the burner, the oil stops flowing through the burner, while with the pressure or gravity feed burners, if anything should go wrong while the fireman is out, the fire box and probably the boiler room would be flooded with oil, this oil coming in contact with the hot fire box would generate gas, and in all probability an explosion would follow.

Our system automatically maintains an even pressure in the boiler. The flow of oil is not governed by means of a valve in the supply pipe, but by varying the steam pressure on the burner, that is by reducing the pressure on the burner, the flow of oil is reduced, and by increasing the steam pressure on the burner, the flow of oil is increased. The variation of steam pressure on the burner is caused by an especially constructed pressure regulating valve, which is placed in the steam pipe running from the boiler to the burner.

This pressure regulating valve is quickly adjusted to any pressure required in the boiler. After it is set, it automatically varies the pressure on the burner, which reduces or increases the flow of oil as required to maintain an even pressure in the boiler. In other words, if the pressure rises higher than that at which the valve is set, the oil is reduced, if the pressure drops below that at which the valve is set the oil is increased.

Our burner has run forty-eight hours in succession without attention or variation of one pound of steam, bear this in mind when investigating oil burners.

Our Oil Feed Tank is designed especially for our system. In this tank is a float, which maintains a constant level of oil in the tank, the tank is set so the oil level should be two inches below level of burner nozzle.

We have endeavored to explain the theory upon which our system operates, and believe that, after reading the accompanying directions, any steamfitter can properly install; and can be successfully operated by anyone who is capable of firing a boiler.

Further information will be cheerfully given upon request.

Tests made with our burners in both steam and hot water boilers show that 85 gallons of heavy fuel oil equal one ton of screened soft coal. Write us for estimate on your plant.

water tank would be helpful, it will not make any great difference, provided the service pipe is of good size.

As a fertilizer, use upon each bed about twenty pounds of a preparation mixed in the following proportions: Fifty pounds of nitrate of soda, 150 pounds of dissolved bone or acid phosphate, and fifty pounds of sulphate of potash. The fertilizer should be thoroughly mixed with the soil to the depth of six inches.

STOCK FROZEN IN GREENHOUSE.

We met with a loss during the January cold wave. One house was frozen badly. The cold weather was accompanied by a terrific wind and our west house was frozen in spite of all the firing we could do. Now we are sending you a diagram of our houses, showing the arrangement of the piping, and we wish to know whether it should be necessary to put in more pipes, in this Ohio temperature. We are going to put in a larger boiler this summer, and if it will be advisable to put in more piping we shall do so. W. S. L.

The diagram shows one house twenty-two feet wide, with two 2-inch overhead flow pipes and sixteen 1-inch pipes under the benches. The other house is sixteen feet wide, with two 2-inch overhead flows, one flow under the bench and fourteen 1-inch returns. Neither the letter nor the diagram gives any idea of the length of the houses, or indicates whether steam or hot water is used for heating. Neither is there a statement of the temperature required or the class of plants grown in the houses. If steam is used there is ample radiation for 65 degrees or more in each house, and, so far as can be determined, the arrangement should give good results. In case hot water is used for heating the houses, the amount of radiation should be sufficient to maintain 50 degrees in the wider house and 55 degrees in the other house, except that the pipes are too small, and if the houses are more than fifty feet long, there should either be more flow pipes or they should be of a larger size.

For the house twenty-two feet wide, if it is not more than 100 feet long and a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, use three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. In the 16-foot house two 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns should answer. This estimate is based on the supposition that the houses are well built and that there is no glass in the outside walls. There should be an additional return for each two feet of glass. Run all of the pipes downhill and connect the expansion tank to the highest part of the flow pipes.

THE MATHEWS GRAVITY SOIL CARRIER

The Weight of the Soil is What Makes the Carrier Move.

In operation at the establishment of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass.

Saves Time, Labor and Money

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continued until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar. We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

Gentlemen:

Your inquiry regarding our use of the Mathews Gravity Carrier has been received, and we can state that this device has been found very satisfactory by us in removing soil from houses that can be opened at the sides.

This device is made in suitable lengths that can be easily handled in moving from one place to another, is all ball bearing and requires only the rising of one end to convey boxes, in which soil has been placed, to the outside of the house without handling, being carried by gravity. The Mathews people have a photo as we use it and no doubt will give you any information you desire regarding it. The address is Mathews Gravity Carrier Company, Ellwood City, Pennsylvania.

We had used a similar device, with wooden rollers, for a number of years, but must say that the ball bearing and light, though rigid, construction makes the Mathews Carrier a much more satisfactory machine for the reduction of labor.

It is thoroughly practical and pays for itself many times over in its saving of labor.

Very truly yours,

PEIRCE BROTHERS.

LANCASTER, PA.

A meeting of the Lancaster Florists' Association was held on the evening of March 21, with a paper on greenhouse construction, by D. T. Connor, of Philadelphia, as the feature of the evening. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Connor for his paper. In the discussion which followed, many valuable points were brought out, among them the fact that, for greenhouse sides, ashes and cement in the proportion of seven to one make a better job than more expensive combinations, providing the wall is finished with a cement coating before it is dry, both outside and inside.

White and pink sweet peas were on exhibition from John R. Shreiner, daisies and roses from L. Landis and some of the finest golden marguerites I ever saw from Ira Landis, of Paradise, Pa.

In carnations the Wheatland Greenhouse Co. had fine vases of Pink Delight, White Enchantress, and Mrs. C. W. Ward. J. W. Bruckart, of Lititz, Pa., had Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward and two seedlings, one a magenta and the other a cerise pink, both of which attracted much attention. Chas. B. Herr, of Strasburg, had an extra fine vase of Gloriosa, and Amos Rohrer, of Strasburg, who clings to that which is good and grows it just a little better than the rest of us, showed a fine vase of Enchantress. H. D. Rohrer showed another vase of his new red, which holds up its quality right along; this seems to be a good feature, as we can see just how it compares each month with previous exhibits and learn its value as an all-season commercial flower.

Mr. Connor was considerably surprised at the number we had in attendance and at the size of the exhibits, which compared favorably with the special occasion exhibits of the older clubs.

Our next meeting, which will be held April 18, will be devoted to sweet peas and the paper will be read by Chas. Weaver, who is recognized as an authority on sweet peas, not only here in Lancaster, but in other sections as well. Enthusiasts of this flower who may want to send some flowers for this meeting should send them to H. A. Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa. They will find an appreciative audience.

WIZARD BRAND MANURE

An article on page 15 of The Florists' Review for February 22, 1912, after describing a florist's troubles with eel worms, fungus, etc., on carnations, through using cow manure, goes on as follows:—

Last season we found it difficult to procure the cow manure and decided to try pulverized sheep manure, which we did. We had a heavy, sandy loam soil and put on 800 to 1,000 pounds of the manure to the house, 20x80 feet. The results were all that we could ask. We have many thousand plants in the finest condition, producing the finest flowers. We will not worry about cow manure any more for carnations.

BORDEAUX CLOGS THE SPRAYER.

Do you know of a Bordeaux mixture which is made without lime, and which is good for fairy ring on carnations? The lime clogs the sprayer so badly that it is certainly hard to use.

L. M. S. & C.

Lime is an essential constituent of Bordeaux mixture. There should be no trouble with clogging of the sprayer if the solution is strained through a fine wire strainer before putting it in the sprayer. W. H. T.

SAVING ASTER SEED.

I should like to know when is the proper time to harvest early aster seed. Is it better to pull up the plants when they are just done blooming and still a little green, or wait until they are thoroughly dried out late in the fall? W. J. K.

It will not do to pull up the aster plants as soon as the flowers are faded, as the seed is then in an immature condition. Wait until the plants are fairly well dried. Examine one of the flowers, and if the seeds look plump the plants are ready to be pulled up. C. W.

SURFACE SOIL IS GREEN.

Our Easter lilies are green and healthy, with no sign of insects or disease, but the soil in the pots is turning green. Will that do the plants any damage? If so, what shall we do for them? This is our first trial with Easter lilies. L. M. S. & C.

The green growth on the surface of the soil in the lily pots is due to frequent waterings, and is not specially harmful. W. H. T.

CORRECT YOUR LISTS.

Please allow me through The Review to request the trade not to send any more catalogues to the Northside Greenhouse, Mrs. Martin, proprietor, Shelbyville, Ill., as I bought them out nearly five years ago. The name still appears on some lists, and all this mail matter is turned over to me and is nearly all duplicated, so those who use these five-years-behind-the-times lists are wasting postage. I am the only florist in Shelbyville and there is not a foot of glass in the vicinity used for growing flowers except mine. Therefore I would be greatly obliged to several of the concerns if they would quit sending their wholesale price lists to my customers. There is no one else here who is entitled to receive them, or the trade papers, except perhaps two market gardeners, who have no glass, Cal. Sherburn and Cyrus Uhrich.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

IONIA WIRE BASKETS

Lawn Vases and Porch Pots

will be in demand now until after Decoration Day. You should have them filled and ready at your greenhouses, for the warm spring sunshine will soon be with us.

Our wire baskets, like our pots, are the strongest and best on the market. Made of the best heavy galvanized wire, woven or meshed together. No fine wire wrapping to break and ruin the basket. IONIA BASKETS are indestructible and cannot be compared to the cheap, flimsy kinds with which the market is flooded. Each basket is enameled with bright foliage-green paint.

Ionía Lawn Vases

meet the demand of the trade, which requires a medium-priced vase, yet strong and durable. The simplicity of the design adds beauty and dignity to the plants which adorn it. The one here shown is our No. 1, Style B, and is sold to the trade only at $2.50.

Ionía Porch Pots

have been such popular sellers that we were compelled to double our large stock this season. The one here shown is made in three sizes—10-inch, 12-inch and 16-inch—and the price to you is 50c, 75c and $1.00 respectively. Special saucers will be supplied for each size at 25c additional.

Lastly, a Word About IONIA FLOWER POTS

The sales of Ionia pots during the past six months are more than double any previous half-year of our business. There are reasons why our sales are thus increasing:

- 1st. You have no broken pots to pay for, because breakage is unknown.
- 2d. It is the best growing pot.
- 3d. It is light and porous, qualities which you recognize as most important.

Our catalogues of pots, vases, wire baskets and wire designs will be sent for the asking.

IONIA POTTERY CO.

IONIA, MICHIGAN

SCORCHED FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find a sweet pea leaf. Can you tell us what is the trouble? It has affected the snapdragon and geranium leaves, and, in fact, nearly all plants in the greenhouse. We are new at the business. We had grown a crop of lettuce and were told that the ground was all right for our next crop, but it was a failure. We planted it October 12 and some of it is not quite ready now. We have put sulphur on the pipes and watered with nitrate of soda. The sweet peas all seem to be getting affected. F. W.

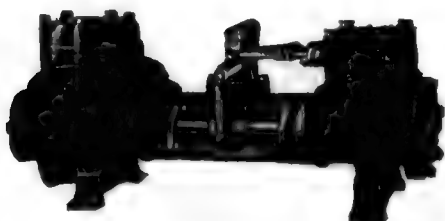

Your foliage was badly scorched and this has undoubtedly been caused by the sulphur on the pipes, which has been too strong. Watering with nitrate of soda is likely to be more injurious than beneficial in winter, unless applied in moderate doses and only when the plants really need it. Liquid cow or sheep manure would be much safer to apply, and is better than nitrate of soda for both the peas and snapdragons. Your house should be kept at 48 to 50 degrees at night, and if sweet peas and snapdragons are in solid beds they will give better results than when in raised benches. C. W.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—A. J. Youngs, formerly in business here as a florist and undertaker, has sold the entire establishment to F. H. Martinie.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—W. S. Hitchcock, Inc., has sold the greenhouses on Drake avenue, but will retain the store on Main street, purchasing all the needed stock.

Canton-Hughes Pump.

This is the fourth article of a series describing machines used in our factory, which are necessary to the production of all high grade pottery.

The one shown here is known as a Duplex Hydraulic Pump. It exerts a varying pressure of about 140 lbs. and by its action the semi-liquid clay, as before described, is lifted and carried from a cistern, through a tube to its next place of treatment, which will be described later on these pages.

A fine illustrated description of the whole scheme will be sent you on request.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

GLAZING.

We notice on our greenhouses, erected three years ago, that the putty is falling out, although the putty when used was supposed to be the best putty made. We propose to make our own putty next time and should be pleased to know what proportions of lead, oil and whitening are best to use. B. G.

From the statement it is not quite clear whether the trouble is due to the nature of the putty used or to the condition of the sashbars. The glazing should not be done until the sashbars have received one good coat of paint in addition to the priming coat. If this is given and the putty is of good quality it should last for many years, if the house is kept properly painted.

It is possible that a part of the trouble may be due to the putty being applied over instead of under the glass. If that is the case, and the putty remaining on the glass is loose, the best thing to do is to scrape it off and, after filling all cracks at the side as well as under the glass, apply a coat of rather thick paint, so as to cover all of the exposed putty.

To make greenhouse putty, mix whitening and linseed oil so as to secure the proper consistency and then add about five per cent by weight of white lead.

In glazing a greenhouse, apply enough putty to fill the shoulders on the sashbars and then press down the glass firmly, so as to squeeze out all surplus putty and fill the space under and at the sides of the panes. Never use any putty over the glass.

SUNBURNT PALM FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find some leaves of what was formerly a fine kentia palm. It is about 10 years old and stands about five and one-half feet tall, with lots of leaves. This particular palm has always been our special favorite, because always green and healthy until about two months ago, when it began to show these discolored spots. Can you tell us what to do? It is in good, rich soil and was repotted last spring. It is kept in a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees, in a moist house, with ferns. About two or three months ago the ferns began to die of rust. Is it possible that the palm contracted this disease from the ferns? These spots look like fairy ring on carnations, while the ferns are rusty all over. Please tell us, also, what is the matter with the rubber plant, a leaf of which I enclose. L. M. S. & C.

The kentia leaflets show no disease, but are badly sunburnt. The injury is caused by a blister in the glass, which acts as a convex lens, focusing the rays of the sun in such a way as to burn streaks across the leaves. The best remedy is to hunt for the worst blisters in the glass (there may be several of them), put a dab of white paint on each blister on the under side of the glass, and then give the glass a light shading on the outside. The ficus leaves have been injured in the same way; the leaf in question shows one old burn and two fresh ones.

...NEWS NOTES...

Binghamton, N. Y.—J. G. Brock, who for the last three years has had charge of the landscape work on the estates of W. S. Kilmer, has opened offices, as a landscape gardener, at 208 Press building. He has had a life experience in the profession.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. is planning to begin the rebuilding of its greenhouses as soon as the spring and early summer rush is over. The old houses, which were erected one at a time as the business expanded, will be replaced with strictly modern structures.

New Rochelle, N. Y.—F. C. Hitchcock, at 39 Birch street, has forced 75,000 bulbs this season. The single daffodils have done splendidly, but a large proportion of the tulips have been blind. "According to my experience with bulbs," he says, "if they are dried out and allowed to rest a month or so before being planted, they force much better."

Rochester, N. Y.—Colin Ogston, gardener at the Kimball conservatories, has a type of Cypripedium insigne that throws two flowers on a stem. A grand lot of seedlings can be seen here, with no two alike in beauty of marking and coloring. Some especially fine laelias were here seen in bloom, including L. superbians, Gouldiana, alba and Stella. In carnations, Scarlet Glow is superior here to Beacon, both in habit of growth and quality of bloom.

Ironton, O.—Weber Bros. have been in business here for nine years and have completely rebuilt the range. The work of rebuilding has been done in a most substantial manner and cement construction has been used as largely as possible. Even the gutters, as well as most of the benches, are of concrete. The range now comprises about 20,000 square feet of glass, and another house, 28x100, is in process of erection. The contract has also been let for a new office and workroom, to be built in the spring. The members of the firm have a feeling of great relief and satisfaction, they say, when they compare the present new and durable buildings with "the old shacks" which they at first owned.

Plan for a U Bar Conservatory

This one we erected in Montreal. See how graceful and attractive it is—how different from the usual run of the "cut-and-dried" kinds you see hitched on so many houses!

U-Bar conservatories are not only attractive, but they are in every way practical. That's saying a lot. It is the U-Bar that makes them so. We are the only U-Bar conservatory and greenhouse builders. The construction is patented. Send for catalogue—it shows a goodly number of examples of each.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A SPRING WINDOW.

The retail florist's window really is his best advertisement, provided, of course, that his location is such that he gets a showing. It would be useless for those on little traveled residence streets to spend considerable sums on windows, for the number of people who would see the displays would justify no more than moderate cost. But the A. W. Smith Co., in Pittsburgh, has a never-ending procession of people passing its portals and makes splendid use of the advertising possibilities in its windows.

The accompanying illustration, prepared from a photograph made through the glass by artificial light, shows a spring window that is typical of their displays. W. A. Clarke, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., who recognized the picture as one of interest to the trade and sent it to The Review, says: "This display was running three weeks and I never passed it, day or night, that there were not a number of people stopping to look, and in the middle of the day I frequently have seen them three deep in front of the window." The window really is about 20x30, but appears much larger, as the background is a canvas carrying a well executed Holland scene. The foreground is laid out in lawn and beds planted with flowering bulbs. The grass was grown in boxes made specially for the work and the bulbs were planted just as the buds were ready to expand, so that the people passing daily could see the garden grow. The display was good for ten days and was then renewed, so that in all it ran three weeks.

EFFICIENCY.

Of Both Employer and Employee.

To be efficient is the aim of all employees worthy of the consideration of an employer and, to their credit be it said, the majority of clerks and decorators in florists' stores strive as hard and succeed as well as those in other branches of business. There are, of course, painful examples of how not to do it in this as in other lines of endeavor, but we need not consider them. They are not the kind that ever read a trade paper or any other, save, perhaps, the so-called "sporting" pages of the yellow journals. We need not write for such, but rather call the attention of those who are doing good work to a few of their own shortcomings and include employers as well as employees.

Possibly it may be well to mention a few failings of employers first. From school days upward, those who have to work for a living have their "duty" drilled into them pretty regularly, so they can afford to wait a little, while we consider how near the average retailer comes to being efficient as a business man and an employer.

The Employer—Is He a Faultfinder?

Some employers seem to have an idea that to get the best out of a man you have always to be driving him, always telling him he is wrong and magnifying his faults, forgetting entirely the few or many virtues he possesses. Now, in a certain type of man this constant faultfinding at first breeds a kind of nervousness, a want of confidence in himself and a feeling that he is not doing himself justice. Then some day the faultfinder overreaches himself and storms at his employee for doing something that he has before recommended him to do. From this time on the reings of one employee to another, while never finding fault openly with any. No type of employer is less respected than this, for employees talk among themselves and, sooner or later, what the "boss" says becomes common property.

Is He Generous or Niggardly?

Again, some employers are much offended if one of the boys asks for half a day off to see a ball game, or to go to a matinee or some other amusement. He forgets entirely the many extra hours put in on Sundays, holidays and at other times when men in other walks of life are free to do as they please and go where they like. Such grasping methods never succeed, for it is not in nature to expect that employee to be always keyed up and anxious for his employer's interest, as the truly efficient employee should be.

Outside of questions of this kind, an efficient employer will always be studying how to increase the efficiency of his force and how to get out of the men the most they are capable of, without either driving or finding fault. When dealing with young men he will at least affect an interest in their welfare, in spect of that individual employee is lost and he takes no more notice of even good advice, which, in justice it must be said, the faultfinder is often capable of giving.

Another type of employer is always talking about the faults and shortcom-their amusements or hobbies, as far as is compatible with proper discipline, and will give them advice on any question that may crop up in the course of life, either in or out of the store. He will strive, in short, to show them that he has an interest in them and that he expects them to take just as keen an interest in him and his business.

Is He Kind and Considerate?

Any man worth his salt appreciates the kindly thought of an employer that leads him to inquire after a sick mother, wife or child. Treat employees as though they were human and had aspirations and feelings on a plane with your own, if you wish for loyal and ungrudging service.

An ambitious, aspiring employee may have notions and ideas that to a more seasoned, experienced man may seem impractical. But listen to him and praise whatever good there may be in his suggestions. At least give him the credit of being in earnest and anxious to help you in your business; do not laugh at him and thereby cause other employees, of the brainless type, who never could imagine anything for your good, let alone advancing it, to laugh at him too. If you do this he will probably shut up as tight as an oyster; whatever he thinks, be it valuable or otherwise, he will keep it to himself in future and he is not to blame.

longer to select a couple of dollars' worth of flowers than you are accustomed to. Have patience and use tact with such customers. The efficient salesman is always the tactful one and would never let his customer know that he was impatient. It is not given to everyone to be able to read character swiftly or to discern, almost intuitively, the class of customer he is dealing with. The salesman who has this power has a valuable asset in his business, while he who has it not will do well to cultivate it, and the testy, fussy customer is often a good medium to practice on.

If suggestions are asked for, make a suggestion, and get into the habit of noting immediately whether your suggestion meets with favor or not. As a rule, there is only an instant in which to determine this in one way or another, and that is immediately after you have made the suggestion. Drop it at once if your customer's face tells you it is wrong, for with some people this is the only intimation you will get.

Is He Willing to "Even Up"?

Another point that makes for efficiency in an employee is interest. A man who has the interest of his employer at heart will never mind working an extra hour or two in the evening when necessary. Even in the best managed and busiest retail stores, there are times when no employee, however anxious he may be to do so, can earn the money he is paid. Slack times come in the retail business and, when these are considered, it ought not to be a hardship to wait on a late customer or help with funeral work after hours, when that is the only way of evening up the slack times and recompensing your employer for the money paid you for time unprofitably occupied from a financial point of view. A man cannot be efficient who thinks otherwise than this, for good work is never done complainingly.

Does He Keep Himself "Fit"?

In the matter of personal habits outside the store, every man has a duty to his employer. A man who, by wrong methods of living, late hours and excesses, dissipates his health and renders his work irksome, is neglecting his duty just as much as one who "solders" during working hours. No employer has a right to dictate to an employee what he shall do or how he shall spend his time after hours, but, on the other hand, there is no loyal worker, no efficient employee, in short, but will so order his methods of enjoyment or spend his leisure hours in such a way that he is physically and mentally "fit" at all times. To be efficient means far more than to be ready to work at a certain hour each day, and there are many more points than can possibly be touched on in the limits of a short note.

FISHER'S NEW STORE.

At Kalamazoo, Mich., the H. A. Fisher Co., retail, has done a steadily increasing business for years, drawing most of its supplies from the Chicago market. Recently increased facilities became necessary and a new store was fitted up. The equipment is shown in the accompanying illustrations. Both the photographs were made looking toward the front of the store. One shows

The Salesman—Is He Courteous?

And now a word to the employees. In a business like that of the florists, which to a great extent depends upon the patronage of people who are able and willing to pay for luxuries, considerable deference must be shown to the likes and dislikes of these patrons. A servile, fawning attitude is not necessary; it is un-American, unmanly and out of date. Nobody who is worth considering looks for it in these enlightened days, but they do look for courtesy and prompt attention. The quietly dressed gentleman who enters your employer's store may be a man whose time is worth far more to him than the $10 or $20 he spends upon the flowers he is sending to a friend. No matter, then, how interesting that conversation may be with your fellow clerks, cut it out quickly and attend to your customer. That is what you are paid to do.

Is He Tactful?

Possibly the next customer may be one who has more time than anything else at his or her disposal, and takes the cut flower display case and the selling space, the other H. A. Fisher's private desk.

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING.

Of late the newspapers have taken to working up special pages of advertising regarding one department of trade or another. The plan has been for the paper to provide a story, perhaps for the center of a page, and for the solicitors to sell the spaces around the story to those who were interested in the special subject to which the page was devoted. A Detroit society journal last week published such a page in the interest of the Easter flower business. The page is photographically reproduced in the accompanying illustration. The two center columns at the top carried "an appreciation of the florists of Detroit," which was as follows:

"Had Dame Nature been endowed with power and authority to designate those who should act as her special representatives in the placing of her beautiful flowers and greens in the homes of the people of Detroit, it seems that she could have done no better than name the very persons who are today engaged in this delightful business in Detroit.

"It requires more than the cold, discriminating business sense to be a truly successful florist. Coupled with this there must be an enduring appreciation of the sublime mission of the bud, the blossom and the bloom—a spirit of co-operation with Nature in bringing the benign influence of the beautiful and the fragrant to bear on the busy men and women of this day.

"This spirit seems to pervade the flower shops of Detroit. Little bowers of beauty—delightful havens of rest—they breathe little of the air of commercialism, but turn one's first thoughts to the simple grandeur of the works of Nature.

"The florists of Detroit have done much to extend the influence of the flower and the green, not only by giving them homes of architectural attractiveness, delivery cars of extreme elegance and other physical appointments of merit and great value, but also by pointing out to us the gladsome message the flower carries to the sick room, to the dining table, to the marriage ceremony, to the friend—and the message of sublime sweetness it conveys to the world on Easter morn.

"The florists of Detroit have prospered. They have added to their material possessions because they have taught well the lesson of the beautiful. They have prospered because not only Dame Nature's handiwork is constantly finding new admirers, new worshipers, but because they, too, are appreciated. Theirs is a delightful calling. They justly deserve the reward it carries with it."

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Blushing Bride, a fine blush pink form of Azalea Indica, with semi-double flowers, three and one-half inches in diameter, exhibited by James Veitch & Sons, Ltd., London, received an award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society. On the same day similar awards were made to Rhododendron Cornubia, with reddish crimson flowers, from R. Gill & Sons, Falmouth, and to Pteris Parkeri, a fern of great promise for market purposes,

The gold medals for trade competitors presented by the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association to the Royal Horticultural Society of England, for collections of hyacinths, were both awarded to R. & G. Cuthbert, Southgate, March 5, one for a collection of 100 hyacinths in twenty named varieties, the other for twelve named varieties, comprising La Victoire, Jacques, Corregio, Schotel, Linnæus, Ivanhoe, City of Haarlem, Mrs. Plimsell, King Menelik, Queen of the Pinks, King of the Blues and Perle Brillante.

Carnations have predominated at recent shows of the R. H. S. W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bray, eclipsed all former exhibits, but Stuart Low & Co., Allwood Bros., H. Burnett, C. Engelmann, Young & Co. and others have also come out strong.

The National Dahlia Society held a conference in London, March 8. J. B. Riding, a well known trade grower of dahlias, contributed an able paper on "Decorative, Peony-flowered and Collarette Dahlias." He singled out Geisha and Liberty as ideal flowers of the peony-flowered section. In speaking of collarettes, he said that we have two distinct types—the round flowers with slightly recurving florets, which are of French origin, and those of the pointed type or star-like form, which hail from the Fatherland. There are two distinct collars—the close fitting, as seen in Maurice Rivoire, and the large, loose collar, as in Baronne Rothschild. He favored the round flowers, on account of their greater substance.

It is reported here that the countess of Warwick is leaving for America on a lecture tour of forty lectures, at $1,500 per lecture. One of her subjects is "Horticulture as a Profession for Women." She was the founder of a horticultural college for women at Studley, Warwickshire, England, which is run on commercial lines. The produce of the gardens and greenhouses, the honey, fruit, preserves, etc., bear a good reputation in English households.

Bee.

SOILS; WHAT THEY CONTAIN AND DO

A ROSE GROWER'S NOTES.

The Origin of Soil.

What is soil? Soil is the home of the roots of the plant. Soil is the storehouse for that part of the food which the plant takes in through its roots. Soil is the laboratory, or kitchen, where the food is prepared. And this work goes on unceasingly. Lastly, soil is a support to hold the plant firmly in its place.

But what is soil? Soil is finely divided rock, as can be readily seen with a microscope, clay being the finest and sand and gravel the coarsest of the divisions. In between the sand and the clay we have what are generally known as loamy sand, sandy loam, loam, clayey loam and loamy clay. These divisions are based upon the size of the soil grains and the different percentages of each size in a given soil. They are, of course, not arbitrarily fixed, there being unnumbered variations of soils.

Now, if we consider soils as broken and decomposed rock, the first question that comes to our minds is: How and when were the rocks which originally covered the face of the earth converted into soil? Certainly ages and ages before man appeared on the earth. In fact, before animal life of any kind could exist there must have been vegetation; and vegetation of the higher forms could not exist on bare rock. Probably the commencement of the disintegration was coincident with the appearance of plant life in the lowest form.

Geologists tell us that the earth was once a molten mass; also, that the water which now composes the oceans was probably in the form of a dense vapor which surrounded the red-hot earth. Naturally, the earth began to cool and, as it cooled, it contracted. The result of this was that the surface subsided in some places and wrinkled in others, thus producing the sea basins, valleys and hills. When the surface had cooled sufficiently (and this cooling was hastened by the vapor in the air) the vapor condensed and fell as rain or snow, and thus began to wear or weather the rock. Frost and heat assisted the water in disintegrating and breaking up the surface. Some time after the surface had cooled sufficiently, vegetation began its existence. First came almost microscopic forms, the mosses and lichens which are able to extract nourishment from almost any rock. These by their death and decay formed a thin film of vegetable matter on the rock and a stronger growth took place, which in turn died, decayed and gave way to a still stronger and higher form of vegetation; and so on till grass, shrubs and even trees were able to exist. This decayed vegetable matter in the soil is called humus. And this humus helps to disintegrate the rock by holding moisture and by supplying acids which increase the solvent powers of the water on the rock. When a soil contains much of this humus it is called a vegetable mold. Rich garden soils are good representatives of this class. A soil that contains vegetable matter that has only partly decomposed under water is called a peaty soil. Such soils are found in swamps and bogs and are generally sour and need to be aerated and limed before using.

Importance of Humus.

While organic matter, or humus, is by no means indispensable to plant life, and though it is a debatable question whether plants derive any nourishment from it direct, it is of great importance in enabling the soil to hold water, in making the soil more friable and easily worked, and in supplying carbonic acid, which feeds the plant and acts on the soil, dissolving and making available other foods, such as soda, potash and magnesium, which are held in an insoluble state in the soil. Humus also gives the dark color to the soil, which enables it to absorb the heat rays of the sun more readily and thus warm up more quickly in the spring.

True clay is composed of silicate of alumina, but the term clay in agriculture is employed rather loosely, being given to soils that contain a large percentage of impalpable rock dust with little of the true clay present. Some authorities give the following percentage composition of the various soils:

	Clay or impalpable matter.	Sand.
Heavy clay	75 to 90%	10 to 25%
Clay loam	60 to 75%	25 to 40%
Loam	40 to 60%	40 to 60%
Sandy loam	25 to 40%	60 to 75%
Light sandy loam.....	10 to 25%	75 to 90%
Sand	0 to 10%	90 to 100%

Light and Heavy Soils.

These percentages are by weight of the dry soil.

We hear the terms light and heavy applied to soils. These terms have no reference to the weights of the soil, but are used in reference to the mechanical condition. A light soil is one that contains considerable sand, falls apart and works easily. A heavy soil is one that is stiff and tenacious, with more clay than sand. It is a fact that a heavy soil actually weighs less than a light one.

A tenacious or adhesive clay soil can be greatly improved by the addition of sand, lime or vegetable matter, which tend to separate the particles of clay. It is this adhesiveness of clay which causes heavy soils to crack when drying. Clay expands much more than light soils when wet and shrinks upon drying and, owing to the adhesiveness of the particles of which it is composed, the shrinking causes the cracks to appear. These cracks are, naturally, injurious to the roots of the plants, breaking and pulling them apart. Sand does not change its bulk by wetting or drying. Likewise, a sandy soil can be improved mechanically by the addition of clay, lime or vegetable matter. Lime has the peculiar power of lightening heavy soils and also of making light soils hold together better, bringing the two extremes to a happy mean, as it were.

The Composition of Soils.

The general chemical composition of soils is extremely similar, owing to the general mixing of the soil ingredients that has been going on since soil first began to form, through the action of water dissolving and carrying material from place to place, through the action of streams, floods and glaciers, of burrowing animals, worms, etc., of the wind and even plants.

Flowers are More than Mere Merchandise.

Silica or quartz, because it is so hard and insoluble, is the chief ingredient both by volume and weight of all soils. It is a combination of silicon and oxygen. Aluminum probably comes next in abundance, being a fundamental constituent of true clay, feldspar and mica. One of the other elements in the soil is oxygen, which occurs free and in combination with nearly all the other elements. Carbon occurs as part of the humus, also united with calcium and magnesium in the form of carbonates; also as carbonic acid gas, which plays such an important part in the solution of plant food. Sulphur occurs as sulphates. Hydrogen is united with oxygen in the water. Chlorine occurs in limited quantities, generally in the form of common salt, sodium chloride. It seems to be in some way essential to plant life. Phosphorus is never found in nature in a free state, but always combined with some other substance. It is generally distributed through the soil, but in small quantities, and is essential to plant life.

Nitrogen is found in the soil in a combined form in the humus and the vegetable and animal matter, which upon decaying give up the nitrogen in the form of ammonia, which is turned into nitric acid by bacteria. The nitric acid unites with potash, soda or other soil ingredients and is taken up by the plant as a nitrate. Nitrates are extremely soluble and easily washed out of the soil. Calcium and magnesium, in the form of carbonates, compose the limestone beds of the earth. Both calcium carbonate, or lime, and magnesia are necessary plant foods, and both are generally present in the soil in sufficient quantities to supply the plants with the required amount. Potassium is another element found in soils which is very necessary. It is widely distributed as a constituent of some feldspars and micas. Sodium, which is the base of common salt, is also widely distributed. It resembles potassium as a chemical element, but can in no sense take its place in plant life. Iron is always present in the soil in sufficient quantities for the plant.

It would be supposed that, to find what foods are necessary for soils, all that would be necessary would be chemical analysis of that particular soil. Then if any element was found to be lacking in sufficient quantity, the addition of this or these elements would give the desired results. But chemical analyses of the soil as they have been made, unfortunately, can and do throw but a dim and uncertain light upon either the condition or the amount of plant food a soil may contain.

Futility of Chemical Analysis.

It is true that the results of these analyses show a marked difference in soils, but, from the data at hand, these variations may reasonably be supposed to be due more to the relative size of the soil grains than to any chemical differences in the composition of the soil. Taking an average of different analyses of soils, the following has been stated by one writer: On a farm where a three-year rotation composed of corn, clover and oats was followed, the corn and oats being sold and the straw, fodder and clover returned to the ground, there would be potash enough to last 1,521 years; soda, 4,050 years; magnesia, 3,300 years; lime,

4,387 years; phosphoric acid, only 542 years; sulphuric acid, 292 years; soluble silica, 17,650 years.

These amounts of plant food are what chemical analyses have told us were in the top foot of soil, and we know that plants send their roots foraging two, three and four feet down. And the subsoil is sometimes richer in certain ingredients than the surface or top soil.

Seeing these figures, a man taking up farming who was not familiar with agricultural or horticultural pursuits would think it superfluous to add any more of these elements to his soil. When his fields contained already nearly two tons of P_2O_5 in each acre, and over three tons K_2O , of what earthly use would it be to add a paltry twenty-five or fifty pounds more? Why, it would be lost. A chemist with the most accurate and careful analysis could never find it. It would be money thrown away.

But we know from practical experience that ninety-nine times out of 100 his crops would be increased more than enough to pay for the manure or fertilizer added. We know that, in spite of these figures, which there is no reason at all to doubt, soils do need fertilizing, that they do play out, that farms do run down and become unproductive. And only by feeding can the soil be kept up to its full fertility.

So we cannot be governed by a chemical analysis as to the different elements our soils need. The only way is by experiments and careful observation.

PALMER SUES NEW YORK STATE.

Admitting that the dread gypsy moth was found in two azaleas in his greenhouses at Lancaster, N. Y., but denying that it was in other azaleas and rhododendrons that comprised a shipment which was destroyed by the State Department of Agriculture, William J. H. Palmer has instituted suit against the State of New York for $12,000.

Mr. Palmer has applied for a writ of mandamus for State Commissioner Calvin J. Huson, to determine the value of the boxes, containers and plants destroyed. The commissioner declares that the dread moth, last October, got as far as Lancaster, so near Buffalo, it is said, that City Forester Filer got an attack of chills, and that former Commissioner Person, who was then in office, notified Mr. Palmer that the plants were infested and, on failure to destroy them, the state did the work. The commissioner further charges that Mr. Palmer, contrary to the law governing plant shipments from foreign states, unpacked the shipment, and that thereby the pest spread to the entire shipment. Mr. Palmer denies all that and declares that the state wantonly destroyed valuable nursery stock.

Hartford, Conn.—Spear & McManus, the Asylum street florists, have purchased a Ford delivery car. It is said that the firm has heretofore had heavier cars in use, but has lately arrived at the conclusion that the light Ford delivery car is preferable and that the future for such vehicles is in light weight, especially where concerns do not care to deliver over 800 or 1,200 pounds.

SOILS; WHAT THEY CONTAIN AND DO

A ROSE GROWER'S NOTES.

The Origin of Soil.

What is soil? Soil is the home of the roots of the plant. Soil is the store-house for that part of the food which the plant takes in through its roots. Soil is the laboratory, or kitchen, where the food is prepared. And this work goes on unceasingly. Lastly, soil is a support to hold the plant firmly in its place!

But what is soil? Soil is finely divided rock, as can be readily seen with a microscope, clay being the finest and sand and gravel the coarsest of the divisions. In between the sand and the clay we have what are generally known as loamy sand, sandy loam, loam, clayey loam and loamy clay. These divisions are based upon the size of the soil grains and the different percentages of each size in a given soil. They are, of course, not arbitrarily fixed, there being unnumbered variations of soils.

Now, if we consider soils as broken and decomposed rock, the first question that comes to our minds is: How and when were the rocks which originally covered the face of the earth converted into soil? Certainly ages and ages before man appeared on the earth. In fact, before animal life of any kind could exist there must have been vegetation; and vegetation of the higher forms could not exist on bare rock. Probably the commencement of the disintegration was coincident with the appearance of plant life in the lowest form.

Geologists tell us that the earth was once a molten mass; also, that the water which now composes the oceans was probably in the form of a dense vapor which surrounded the red-hot earth. Naturally, the earth began to cool and, as it cooled, it contracted. The result of this was that the surface subsided in some places and wrinkled in others, thus producing the sea basins, valleys and hills. When the surface had cooled sufficiently (and this cooling was hastened by the vapor in the air) the vapor condensed and fell as rain or snow, and thus began to wear or weather the rock. Frost and heat assisted the water in disintegrating and breaking up the surface. Some time after the surface had cooled sufficiently, vegetation began its existence. First came almost microscopic forms, the mosses and lichens which are able to extract nourishment from almost any rock. These by their death and decay formed a thin film of vegetable matter on the rock and a stronger growth took place, which in turn died, decayed and gave way to a still stronger and higher form of vegetation; and so on till grass, shrubs and even trees were able to exist. This decayed vegetable matter in the soil is called humus. And this humus helps to disintegrate the rock by holding moisture and by supplying acids which increase the solvent powers of the water on the rock. When a soil contains much of this humus it is called a vegetable mold. Rich garden soils are good representatives of this class. A soil that contains vegetable matter that has only partly decomposed under water is called a peaty soil. Such soils are found in swamps and bogs and are generally sour and need to be aerated and limed before using.

Importance of Humus.

While organic matter, or humus, is by no means indispensable to plant life, and though it is a debatable question whether plants derive any nourishment from it direct, it is of great importance in enabling the soil to hold water, in making the soil more friable and easily worked, and in supplying carbonic acid, which feeds the plant and acts on the soil, dissolving and making available other foods, such as soda, potash and magnesium, which are held in an insoluble state in the soil. Humus also gives the dark color to the soil, which enables it to absorb the heat rays of the sun more readily and thus warm up more quickly in the spring.

True clay is composed of silicate of alumina, but the term clay in agriculture is employed rather loosely, being given to soils that contain a large percentage of impalpable rock dust with little of the true clay present. Some authorities give the following percentage composition of the various soils:

	Clay or impalpable matter.	Sand.
Heavy clay	75 to 90%	10 to 25%
Clay loam	60 to 75%	25 to 40%
Loam	40 to 60%	40 to 60%
Sandy loam	25 to 40%	60 to 75%
Light sandy loam.....	10 to 25%	75 to 90%
Sand	0 to 10%	90 to 100%

Light and Heavy Soils.

These percentages are by weight of the dry soil.

We hear the terms light and heavy applied to soils. These terms have no reference to the weights of the soil, but are used in reference to the mechanical condition. A light soil is one that contains considerable sand, falls apart and works easily. A heavy soil is one that is stiff and tenacious, with more clay than sand. It is a fact that a heavy soil actually weighs less than a light one.

A tenacious or adhesive clay soil can be greatly improved by the addition of sand, lime or vegetable matter, which tend to separate the particles of clay. It is this adhesiveness of clay which causes heavy soils to crack when drying. Clay expands much more than light soils when wet and shrinks upon drying and, owing to the adhesiveness of the particles of which it is composed, the shrinking causes the cracks to appear. These cracks are, naturally, injurious to the roots of the plants, breaking and pulling them apart. Sand does not change its bulk by wetting or drying. Likewise, a sandy soil can be improved mechanically by the addition of clay, lime or vegetable matter. Lime has the peculiar power of lightening heavy soils and also of making light soils hold together better, bringing the two extremes to a happy mean, as it were.

The Composition of Soils.

The general chemical composition of soils is extremely similar, owing to the general mixing of the soil ingredients that has been going on since soil first began to form, through the action of water dissolving and carrying material from place to place, through the action of streams, floods and glaciers, of burrowing animals, worms, etc., of the wind and even plants.

Flowers are More than Mere Merchandise.

Silica or quartz, because it is so hard and insoluble, is the chief ingredient both by volume and weight of all soils. It is a combination of silicon and oxygen. Aluminum probably comes next in abundance, being a fundamental constituent of true clay, feldspar and mica. One of the other elements in the soil is oxygen, which occurs free and in combination with nearly all the other elements. Carbon occurs as part of the humus, also united with calcium and magnesium in the form of carbonates; also as carbonic acid gas, which plays such an important part in the solution of plant food. Sulphur occurs as sulphates. Hydrogen is united with oxygen in the water. Chlorine occurs in limited quantities, generally in the form of common salt, sodium chloride. It seems to be in some way essential to plant life. Phosphorus is never found in nature in a free state, but always combined with some other substance. It is generally distributed through the soil, but in small quantities, and is essential to plant life.

Nitrogen is found in the soil in a combined form in the humus and the vegetable and animal matter, which upon decaying give up the nitrogen in the form of ammonia, which is turned into nitric acid by bacteria. The nitric acid unites with potash, soda or other soil ingredients and is taken up by the plant as a nitrate. Nitrates are extremely soluble and easily washed out of the soil. Calcium and magnesium, in the form of carbonates, compose the limestone beds of the earth. Both calcium carbonate, or lime, and magnesia are necessary plant foods, and both are generally present in the soil in sufficient quantities to supply the plants with the required amount. Potassium is another element found in soils which is very necessary. It is widely distributed as a constituent of some feldspars and micas. Sodium, which is the base of common salt, is also widely distributed. It resembles potassium as a chemical element, but can in no sense take its place in plant life. Iron is always present in the soil in sufficient quantities for the plant.

It would be supposed that, to find what foods are necessary for soils, all that would be necessary would be chemical analysis of that particular soil. Then if any element was found to be lacking in sufficient quantity, the addition of this or these elements would give the desired results. But chemical analyses of the soil as they have been made, unfortunately, can and do throw but a dim and uncertain light upon either the condition or the amount of plant food a soil may contain.

Futility of Chemical Analysis.

It is true that the results of these analyses show a marked difference in soils, but, from the data at hand, these variations may reasonably be supposed to be due more to the relative size of the soil grains than to any chemical differences in the composition of the soil. Taking an average of different analyses of soils, the following has been stated by one writer: On a farm where a three-year rotation composed of corn, clover and oats was followed, the corn and oats being sold and the straw, fodder and clover returned to the ground, there would be potash enough to last 1,521 years; soda, 4,050 years; magnesia, 3,300 years; lime, Alfred Burton.

4,387 years; phosphoric acid, only 542 years; sulphuric acid, 292 years; soluble silica, 17,650 years.

These amounts of plant food are what chemical analyses have told us were in the top foot of soil, and we know that plants send their roots foraging two, three and four feet down. And the subsoil is sometimes richer in certain ingredients than the surface or top soil.

Seeing these figures, a man taking up farming who was not familiar with agricultural or horticultural pursuits would think it superfluous to add any more of these elements to his soil. When his fields contained already nearly two tons of P_2O_5 in each acre, and over three tons K_2O , of what earthly use would it be to add a paltry twenty-five or fifty pounds more? Why, it would be lost. A chemist with the most accurate and careful analysis could never find it. It would be money thrown away.

But we know from practical experience that ninety-nine times out of 100 his crops would be increased more than enough to pay for the manure or fertilizer added. We know that, in spite of these figures, which there is no reason at all to doubt, soils do need fertilizing, that they do play out, that farms do run down and become unproductive. And only by feeding can the soil be kept up to its full fertility.

So we cannot be governed by a chemical analysis as to the different elements our soils need. The only way is by experiments and careful observation.

PALMER SUES NEW YORK STATE.

Admitting that the dread gypsy moth was found in two azaleas in his greenhouses at Lancaster, N. Y., but denying that it was in other azaleas and rhododendrons that comprised a shipment which was destroyed by the State Department of Agriculture, William J. H. Palmer has instituted suit against the State of New York for $12,000.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gladioli.

With sweet peas and asters, gladioli are among the most important of outdoor crops today. The improvement in varieties is as remarkable as the increase in their culture. During the extremely hot weather we can always depend on getting gladioli of good quality. The indoor plantings will give us fine spikes until the middle or end of June and, to provide a succession for these, it is necessary to plant a batch outdoors just as soon as the frost is out of the ground and it has dried sufficiently. Plant the bulbs six inches deep. They will not blow over then, as when planted shallow, and will have their roots in moist earth when the hot weather arrives. Do not use fresh manure for gladioli. The older and more rotted it is, the better. All the popular large flowering indoor varieties, such as Shakespeare, Augusta, Baron Hulot, Dawn, Mrs. Francis King, the peerless America, the brilliant Brechleyensis, Independence, Klondyke and others, do well outdoors, but be sure to plant them deeply.

Hydrangeas.

Now that Easter stock is out of the way, we should give the much needed bench room to the hydrangeas for Memorial day. These plants will have been standing quite close together and a liberal spreading out will be much needed. Water freely and supplement this with doses of liquid manure, which can be given more frequently and stronger from the time the flower heads show until they show color. Keep the plants clean, and to accomplish this a spraying with nicotine or a fumigation every eight or ten days will be necessary.

Memorial Day Bench Crops.

While Easter is an important flower festival, the demand is each year relatively stronger for pot plants than for cut flowers, while at Memorial day the reverse is the case. Often at Easter cut flower prices, except for a few specialties, are disappointing, while at Memorial day practically every flower, no matter of what color, will sell, as everyone is buying. It means the making or losing of many good dollars to hit it right with Memorial day crops, and every care from this time on should be given the crops in beds or benches, of ten weeks' stocks, double feverfew, snapdragons, candytuft, gladioli, spiræas, etc. Weather has a great influence on these crops and, as we can never tell in advance what we are to get, we should plan to have the crops sufficiently advanced so that they can be kept cool and well aired for a few days before the date for cutting.

Caladium Esculentum.

There is no advantage in starting Caladium esculentum too early, as they grow fast and take up a lot of valuable space. Big roots are neither necessary nor desirable, but be quite sure to start them in a brisk heat. They can be placed singly in pots, but in flats of sand and leaf-mold they are more easily and expeditiously handled. Once they are well started into growth they can be given rather cooler quarters.

Clivias.

Clivias, or imantophyllums, are attractive and showy spring flowering plants, which are seen to a rather limited extent in the retail stores. Now, when the flowering period is passing, is a suitable time to do any repotting. Large plants can be carefully broken up and strong individual growths, containing as many active roots as possible, be placed singly in 6-inch to 8-inch pots. The drainage must be ample. For compost, fibrous loam, lumpy dried cow manure, coarse sand and broken charcoal are suitable. Keep the plants rather close and warm for a few weeks; then give them ordinary greenhouse treatment. Clivias are easily injured by too much water at the roots, and it is always safe to under rather than oversupply them with moisture. In summer they can be kept in a shady spot outdoors. The trouble always is that torrential rains will sodden the plants and cause many to rot off at the collar. For these reasons a shaded greenhouse is to be preferred for summer culture.

There are now many fine hybrids of clivias and the old C. miniata was long ago outclassed.

A frequent inquiry at this season is, "What shall I do with my left-over azaleas?" Pick off all the flowers and seed pods, keep them in a cool house and, as soon as danger from frost has passed, plant them outdoors where you can reach them with the hose and syringe them freely during hot, dry weather. You can give them a mulch of old, decayed manure to prevent the soil drying out so much. Any good garden soil will suit azaleas. They are particularly fond of leaf-mold and should not be planted in ground recently limed. Plants treated in this way will be much more heavily set with flower buds than those you import. They can be lifted and potted about the end of September.

MR. DOOGUE ON LAWNS

THE CARE OF LAWNS.

The old-fashioned catalogue was merely a price list—it described the goods, perhaps with a picture, and told the cost, but it stopped there. The modern method, however, is to tell how the goods are used, or even to provide a fund of general information with regard to the subject to which the merchandise is related. So, when the Dunham Co., of Berea, O., planned a booklet on lawn rollers it secured from Luke J. Doogue a comprehensive discussion on the whole subject of the care of lawns. Mr. Doogue is widely known in the trade as the superintendent of the public grounds in Boston. What he has to say on the care of lawns is, in part, as follows:

In the spring, one of the questions most frequently asked of horticultural people is: "How can I make a lawn?" or "How can I remake a lawn, and afterwards keep it in good condition?" The answer to such a question, without going into details, should be: By using good seed, sown with a seeder; good loam, a hose, a good lawn mower, an abundance of "sticktoitiveness," and last, but not least, a good roller.

This question and reply naturally suggest another question, which is: "What is a good lawn?" And the reply to this is: A satisfactory lawn is one with a smooth surface, of evenly colored grass, with a sod that is strong and elastic to the tread, and on which the grass grows so fine and close that weeds cannot find an entrance there.

These inquiries about making lawns come mostly from people who, while fully realizing the commercial and artistic value of a well-kept grass plot about a dwelling, have, either through carelessness or lack of persistence, never been able to attain the much desired end. Investigation of the inquiries has shown that the land conditions surrounding such places may be divided into two classes: One where there is sufficient depth of good loam on which the grass has gradually petered out, allowing an ever increasing mass of weeds to push in and take its place, and the other a poor, gravelly soil, without possibilities, regardless of what might be done to it.

The treatment for the first example cited is simple. It will not be necessary to spade up the ground and reseed, for just as good results can be produced by a simpler method and in much shorter time.

Take a sharp iron rake, sharpen the teeth if necessary, and after first digging out the weeds, scratch deep into the soil, breaking it up as fine as possible. After doing this, sow grass seed liberally. After sowing, roll the ground. After this water, and when the water has soaked in use the roller again. You need not be afraid of hurting either the seed or the loam, for it was because of a lack of this heavy rolling that the land and sod petered out. If you have been so fortunate as to use first-class seed it will not be long before an improved condition will be noticed.

Treatment for the second condition mentioned above should be radical. There is nothing to do in such a case but to dig out the gravel, or poor soil, and put in that which is suitable. There is no short cut to success through such conditions. Don't deceive yourself by thinking that good soil can be brought about by the addition of fertilizers and patent grass foods. Of course, if you are striving for a temporary growth of grass it can be accomplished by fertilizers, but for a permanent lawn the loam conditions must be right. Fertilizers are very useful at times, but to apply them to gravel or poor soil with the expectation of supplying plant food, will only spell failure.

After you have taken out the poor soil, put in a foot and one-half or, better, two feet of the best loam you can find. On this sow your seed, and the results will surely be satisfactory.

Making a lawn is no work for a lazy man. It takes a hustler, and one that is willing to stick to the work until success comes. Lawns do not happen; they are the results of intelligent and hard work.

THE MADISON ROSE.

Elwood Brant and Henry Hentz, Jr., who compose the Brant-Hentz Flower Co., of Madison, N. J., are extremely enthusiastic over their new rose, Madison, said to be a seedling of Bride crossed with Perle des Jardins, shown in the accompanying illustration. Madison was shown at the Detroit exhibition of the American Rose Society, but has not been seen at many places outside of New York, so that the picture will be of special interest. The raisers say that their novelty will be tried out next season in all parts of the country. If it makes good on all the points of merit claimed for it, an important addition to the list of forcing roses will have resulted, for Messrs. Brant and Hentz use strong terms in describing both its growth and selling qualities.

ASTERS.

The earliest sowing of asters has now produced strong plants in flats. These will in a few days go into benches in a house now occupied by miscellaneous Easter stock. The variety chiefly grown is Queen of the Market, but some Early Wonder and Comet are also grown. However, the first named proves to be most generally useful for indoor culture, especially where undisbudded flowers are desired. The giant Comets are good for forcing to single stems, or reducing to a small number of flowers per plant, but these fancy flowers must be sold at a good price to make them as profitable as the smaller flowers of the reliable Queen of the Market. A compost which will grow good sweet peas, mums or roses, will produce equally good asters. Give it a dressing of air-slaked lime, as at least a partial preventive of stem-rot. Allow the plants 10x12 inches where all flowers are to be left; where disbudded and staked they can go much closer, but the undisbudded flowers will suit the average retail florist the best. Asters like a cool, airy house, not over 50 degrees at night. Treatment such as mums enjoy will suit them.

The end of March is an opportune time to make a good sowing of late asters, such as Victoria, Crego and Vick's Branching. The seed may be sown either in flats in the greenhouse, or in rows in a gentle hotbed; by utilizing the latter, the pressure on the greenhouses is relaxed a little and the aster seedlings will be finer than those produced with fire heat, besides being less liable to succumb to the several aster diseases.

Asters are an important outdoor crop, and a thorough preparation of the ground is necessary where the best results are to be achieved. We like to plow, after manuring liberally, in late fall, leaving the ground rough; then, in the spring, when the soil has sufficiently dried, we harrow it well and keep stirred until planting time, using the smoothing harrow just before setting out the plants. There is, of course, ample time yet to make additional aster sowings. Some growers prefer to sow nearly all their late batches outdoors, as it is a proven fact that outdoor raised seedlings are stronger and far more immune from disease than greenhouse raised seedlings. Overcrowding in the flats before transplanting, careless watering and burying the stems too deeply are all potent causes of many of these early plants going off in the field before flowering time.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of Executive Board.

The board of directors of the S. A. F. met in Chicago, in the Auditorium hotel, March 13, 14 and 15. There were present President Vincent, Charles H. Totty, E. Allan Peirce, H. A. Bunyard, John A. Evans, W. N. Rudd, George Asmus, Robert Craig, August Poehlmann and Secretary Young. The board was in session practically the whole three days and accomplished a vast amount of business.

The sum of $50 was placed at the disposal of Prof. H. H. Whetzel, of Cornell University, to cover the expense of an exhibit embracing the diseases of the various staple productions of the florists, to be made at the Chicago convention.

A request from I. S. Hendrickson, president of the American Gladiolus Society, that arrangements be made for space in which to exhibit gladiolus blooms at the Chicago convention and that such arrangements allow of a competitive class for amateurs, was granted.

A request of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Society, in the same line, was, upon motion, refused for the reason that the board believed it to be for the interest of the society that division or multiplication of such societies should not be encouraged, and, further, that the allotment of space for another display of gladioli was not feasible.

The committee having in charge the matter of life membership badges was continued, and the committee was empowered to make arrangements with manufacturers for a supply of badges, to be offered at a stated price to members wishing to purchase; thus finally disposing of this matter.

Mr. Poehlmann reported that the Coliseum in Chicago had been engaged to house the August convention of the society, under the terms considered at the meeting of the board in Detroit, and the action of the officers in taking a lease was approved.

A committee was appointed to formulate a plan looking to the affiliation of sister societies of the S. A. F., such plan to be presented at the first executive meeting to be held at the August convention and finally submitted to the convention for decisive action.

The sum of $100 was appropriated to the use of the committee on school gardens, to be used in the preparation of a text-book for school teachers of America, outlining methods of teaching gardening to elementary school children. A further appropriation of $50 was made to the committee on school gardens, for use in its work.

A request from Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, secretary of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, that her society be given a place on the convention program for its annual business meeting and a reception and dance, was granted.

The rules governing the trade exhibition of this society in previous years came in for much consideration and several amendments were made.

An advisory committee was appointed, to which all the matters relating to the trade exhibition and exhibits are to be referred.

It was arranged that the Auditorium hotel be selected as headquarters for the society during the convention, it being understood that the management of that hotel was willing to furnish a room in which the president's reception could be held.

It was decided to recommend certain amendments to the by-laws of the society, chief among which is one covering the election of the secretary, the recommendation in this case being the amendment of article 11, section 2, by adding, "The secretary shall be elected by the directors at the annual mid-Lent meeting, and shall serve one year; seven (7) affirmative votes shall be necessary to elect and nine (9) to re-

The program for the August convention involved a good deal of discussion, which resulted in a skeleton program being formulated.

It was decided that the rate for space in the trade exhibition should be 40 cents per square foot, and that the smallest amount of space to be sold should be fifty square feet.

A resolution, covering the thanks of the board, was passed to the Chicago Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of Chicago for entertainment and other courtesies extended to the board during its stay in Chicago.

On Thursday morning the board visited the Coliseum building in a body, to inspect the same and decide upon a plan for the arrangement of the trade exhibition.

Treasurer William F. Kasting was unable to be present at the meeting, on account of sickness. A message of sympathy was dispatched to him at Hot Springs, Ark., where he was undergoing treatment. John Young, Sec'y.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market continued in an overloaded condition last week. Everything was plentiful and of extra fine quality. As in the week previous, the wholesalers had a hard time cleaning up. The store men report that the retail trade fell off considerably and about the only thing that was doing was work for funerals.

At the opening of the present week there was a great deal of speculation as to the supply for Easter, and the prices. The wholesalers seem to think there will be plenty of good stock and

Various Notes.

Lincoln Pierson, president of the Pierson U-Bar Co., New York, was here last week perfecting plans for the erection of the conservatories to be built at the Missouri Botanical Garden, his company having the contract. The work will begin at once and will cost approximately $150,000.

J. F. Ammann spent March 28 in the city as one of the reception committee to entertain ex-President Roosevelt.

The employees of the four local wholesale houses will give an entertainment and dance sometime this month. Frank Windler and Al Gums are working on the plans.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres had the family order for the funeral of Gen. Noble last week. The casket cover was in the shape of an American flag.

From reports, most of our growers will have plenty of Easter lilies in pots. Will Young says his firm will have nearly 15,000. The Bourdet Floral Co. will have 20,000; Sanders, 10,000. A. Jablonsky will also have nearly that many.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold the regular monthly meeting Monday night, April 8, in the Knights of Columbus hall. President Sanders wants a large attendance.

The Windler brothers are now in three branches of the florists' business. George B. is proprietor of a greenhouse plant. Robert and Joe are in the retail business, and Frank B. is vice-president of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. They work independently of each other and all are hustlers.

Grimm & Gorly sent a large bouquet of roses to ex-President Roosevelt, with a card saying that the roses were named Mrs. Roosevelt, at the recent Chicago spring flower show.

W. C. Smith has purchased a new Mitchell touring car.

The many friends of James Arado, who is head of the cut flower department of C. Young & Sons Co., extended their sympathy to him in the loss of his father, who died March 31.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, April 11. E. W. Guy will lead a discussion on summer cut flowers. In this he will be assisted by Chas. Hecht, F. J. Fillmore and W. J. Pilcher.

During the last week quite a few of our suburban florists were in town. Among them were Wm. Winter, W. J. Pileher, F. Wade, W. J. Edwards, Hugo Gross, Gus Hartmann, A. G. Ahner, N. Scheidegger, R. Wolfsburger, all of Kirkwood; H. Emmons, Belleville; H. Johann, Collinsville; A. G. Fehr, Belleville, and E. Denker, of St. Charles.

little advance in prices is expected on the eve of Easter. There will be plenty of lilies and an abundance of bulbous stock. As to roses and carnations, as we have had an oversupply for the last few weeks, there should be enough for all demands.

Some of the leading retailers have prepared for a great run on blooming plants, with lilies having the first call; so indications point to a big Easter business and all we need is that the weather remain bright and warm.

Three-ton Truck Used by a Leading Firm of Los Angeles Florists and Nurserymen.

HOWARD & SMITH'S NEW AUTO.

The accompanying illustration shows the latest addition to the auto delivery service of Howard & Smith, the well known florists and nurserymen of Los Angeles, Cal. It is built on the most up-to-date lines and has a capacity of three tons. This firm's principal nurseries are at Montebello, about eight miles from the center of the city, and consequently the auto trucks are found to be great time-savers. With these prompt deliveries can be made over a wide expanse of territory and the delivery equipment, like everything else connected with this firm, is as up-to-date and complete as it is possible to make it.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business was fairly good last week, being the best at its close, and the present week opens with quite good sales and considerably decreased receipts. Growers are evidently, in many cases, holding back their cut for the latter part of the week. Whether this policy will pay is doubtful. Easter is not like Memorial day, and while there is still a strong call for flowers, the market is essentially one for plants and is increasingly so each year. There is little likelihood of any big advance in prices of cut flowers, except it may be in the case of violets, sweet peas, gardenias and lilies. Roses have been moving rather sluggishly of late and little over a normal price is expected for them. On the other hand, carnations are at last lifting their heads a little with a material shortening up of supplies. A slump near Easter is not improbable if too many are held back. Violets will not be plentiful. Singles are over with some growers and few of those arriving are of good quality. On the other hand, there is a good crop of doubles, and will be for a month yet.

Lilies are making $10 to $12.50 per hundred, cut or in pots. Some extras are going at $15. The general complaint is that giganteums are too dwarf, multiflorums have too small flowers, and Formosas are too tall and erratic. Sweet peas are of superb quality and selling at better rates. Dutch bulbous stock is temporarily in shorter supply and cleaning up better. A few Spanish iris are obtainable. Victoria is popular among narcissi. Marguerites are unusually fine, yellows making as high as $4 per hundred if of best quality. There is a good supply of miscellaneous flowers. Valley is in good demand. Gardenias are in rather short supply. The only cattleyas now seen are Schrøderæ. Green goods are in brisk demand.

Pot plant specialists are having the most strenuous time of their lives. All report being well cleaned out of stock, the leaders being lilies, rambler and hybrid roses, genistas, azaleas, spiræas and Dutch bulbous stock. Lilacs are also selling well. Prices do not vary greatly from those of preceding years.

Various Notes.

The Italian garden exhibit of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at Horticultural hall, closed March 31. The attendance has not been so good as expected. In fact, since the national show there has been a decline in numbers of exhibits and visitors at practically all exhibitions. People got so much for their money at that time that they seem to expect too much from our regular shows.

Frank J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has 5,000 giganteum lilies in fine shape for Easter. He is cutting a splendid lot of Cattleya Schrøderæ and gardenias.

The Dartmouth Flower Shop, MacDonald & Askell proprietors, is doing a nice trade.

Penn's, on Bromfield street, is equipped for a big Easter business and is advertising heavily. They have leased a store at 258 Tremont street, near Keith's theater, for their immense plant trade. They have a big decoration for April 8, at the opening of Bigelow, Kennard & Co., and will use White Killarneys heavily. William H. Diehl will have charge of the decorations.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, among lilies have extra fine Formosas, giganteums, candidums and white speciosums. They now have fine Spanish iris and a tremendous cut of narcissi and tulips in many varieties. They are holding all their gladioli back to flower in May.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, is showing some extra good clivias and amaryllis. He has a fine line of Easter plants and is already busy.

D. F. Lamy, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is handling extra fine candytuft for Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, and fine Campbell violets for John F. Gale, of Tewksbury. Mr. Gale will pick 60,000 for Easter.

E. J. Ahearn, of Wellesley, and M. B. Dallachie, of Newton, are handling splendid lots of English primroses at the Boston Coöperative Market.

James Wheeler, of Natick, in addition to his grand carnations and snapdragons, has now a fine lot of yellow marguerites.

F. H. Houghton, on Park street, supplied numerous costly and artistic designs for the funeral of the late ex-Mayor Richardson, of Lowell. April 3

he decorated the Unitarian church, Marlboro, for the wedding and reception of Miss Ellis and John D. Rice, with his usual taste.

M. L. Terrell, of Randolph, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is strong on callas, snapdragons and carnations.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are extremely busy with Easter business. They report green goods as scarce, hardy fern particularly so.

A. F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, has a capital lot of genistas, aspidistras and nephrolepis for Easter.

J. Streiford & Son, of Weymouth, and John McFarland, of North Easton, have each a fine lot of giganteum lilies for Easter.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, has several thousands of giganteum lilies, an even, well-grown lot for Easter, also excellent gardenias, genistas, azaleas and other plants. Trade with him is excellent.

J. Newman & Son have a tastefully arranged store for Easter and are showing their usual excellent line of plants and flowers. Business with them is quite brisk.

I am pleased to report Manager Thomas Pegler, of the Flower Growers' Sales Co., is much improved in health by his rest at Wilton, N. H.

A. L. Silloway, of Maynard, and Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham, are each marketing extra good pink snapdragon now. About every grower now has a special shade of pink snapdragon, but the one Mr. Richwagen has is distinct and of a rich color.

J. R. Leach & Son, of North Easton, have 10,000 of their gilt-edged valley for Easter and a fine crop of the new Pink Supreme carnation.

W. H. Wyman, of the Bay State Nurseries, has purchased a fine new touring car. The spring rush is on in earnest at the nurseries.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, has a grand Easter crop of high grade carnations, also marguerites and snapdragons of splendid quality.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers, on Summer street, has an attractively arranged store for Easter. At this season she does a considerable business also in flower seeds.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. is having a heavy rush of business. Their show windows contain a fine assortment of hyacinths, tulips and other Easter plants.

Albert E. Robinson, formerly manager for the New England Nurseries, has left that concern and joined the A. E. Robinson Co., of Lexington, Mass., dealing in all kinds of nursery stock and making landscape gardening a feature. Mr. Robinson was formerly manager at the Bay State Nurseries and is well and favorably known in the trade.

J. T. Butterworth easily leads all others when it comes to valley in pots for Easter. He is cutting good Cattleya Schröederæ and still has fine dendrobiums.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

This is a cut of the new medal of the American Gladiolus Society. It shows the face side. The reverse side is a simple wreath of gladiolus blooms, with space in the center for engraving. The design is unique and original. One is made in sterling silver, colored silver gray, and the other is finished bronze. Both are sand-blast finished. These medals will be given to representative horticultural societies that will offer them in their schedules to be competed for by amateur exhibitors of gladiolus blooms at their summer shows. The silver medal is for first prize, and the bronze medal for second prize. The following societies have been given a set of these medals: Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Newport Horticultural Society, Southampton Horti-

The Market.

Business last week was good, the best this month, although low prices prevailed generally. Inasmuch as the stock moved well, there was but little left over on Sunday and this balance was in good shape. Prices are on the advance, as is usual at this season, and white carnations, for which dealers were glad to get $2 per hundred last week, brought $3 per hundred on Sunday. It will probably be impossible to purchase the same grades at the end of the week for less than $7. Prices on other goods advance in about the same proportions. The demand for pink and red carnations will not be so good, as these colors are not so desirable at Easter. Sweet peas have been plentiful and have sold well, although they did not bring anything in the way of fancy prices. Valley has been exceptionally plentiful, with no special demand except by street fakers. Roses of all kinds sold well at moderate figures. The market was crowded with Richmonds and there were more of these left over than any other variety.

Cut Easter lilies were offered at $1.50 in dozen lots, but by the thousand they could be had at about $10. There were enough greens to be had to fill the demand. Violets have been quite plentiful and the asking price has been 40 cents per hundred or $3 in thousand lots. It is expected that the supply of violets will decrease considerably and by the end of the week it will be hard to get them at less than $1.25 per hundred. There are some mighty good tulips coming in; especially good are the Murillo doubles, which are bringing in the neighborhood of $3 per hundred, while singles are offered at $2, and in large quantities at $1. The supply of indoor jonquils is nearly exhausted and the southern crop is coming in, Princess being the most plentiful. Large quantities of potted Easter lilies are being brought into the market, but many of these are not of good quality. Cattleyas are bringing $5 and $6 per dozen, but good ones are not plentiful. These will advance in price, however, before the week is over.

The week is bound to be a good one, even though it is believed that there has been an overproduction of potted stock. The streets are filled with street vendors, who are selling goods at low prices. This is not going to hurt business as much as would be expected, and will more likely stimulate the demand and desire for flowers. The local department stores are also after their share of business and one firm is offering potted lilies at 17 cents per bloom, against 25 cents asked by florists.

Various Notes.

E. C. Sutton, of Greenville, S. C., who has for some time been in the employ of Z. D. Blackstone, has left the city to accept a position with Mills the Florist, in Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Nichols, who was with Blackstone about two years ago, is taking Mr. Sutton's place.

One of the visitors in town during the week was J. W. Grandy, of Norfolk, Va., who came here to make his Easter purchases.

J. G. Schattmier was in Philadelphia last week.

Mrs. Super, who for some time has been in the employ of George C. Shaffer, has accepted a position with J. H. Small & Sons, and is now located at the new store at Fifteenth and H streets, N. W.

Local florists are much interested in the effort being made to have the law providing a wheel tax on automobiles rescinded. At present automobile owners are subject to a wheel tax, personal tax and license tax on each machine they own and the whole amounts to a goodly sum.

Otto Bauer, manager of the Washington Florists' Co., was laid up last week with an affection of the throat.

OBITUARY.

Emil O. Borrmann.

Emil O. Borrmann, one of the pioneer florists of Buffalo, N. Y., died at his home, 336 Jefferson street, March 22, after an illness of three months. Death was due to a complication of diseases. He had been in business at 338 High street for forty years. He was born in Germany fifty-eight years ago and came to this country at the age of 8, settling in Buffalo, where he lived nearly all his life. He attended the public schools until 16 years old and began the business of florist at the age of 18, gradually increasing and widening his work until about three months ago, when he was compelled to retire on account of ill health. At the time of his death he was a member of the Men's Club of St. Jacobi Church; Court East Buffalo, 1184, I. O. O. F.; the Harugari Frohsinn and the Happy Fifty Social Club. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Regina Borrmann, and by eight children, Mrs. Jacob Bauer, Chas. A., Emma, Emil R., Theodore, William, Agnes and Clara Borrmann; also by five grandchildren.

Michael Smith.

Michael Smith, employed by the Douglas Nursery Co., at Waukegan, Ill., for forty-eight years, died recently at his home in Waukegan, at the age of 85 years. He removed from New York to Waukegan in 1854 and started to work for Robert Douglas, continuing in his employ until October, 1911.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

Pontiac, Mich.—A recent fire at the greenhouses of Harry Tyre, 490 Auburn avenue, caused a loss of over $700.

Elmira, N. Y.—H. H. Hoffman was at Syracuse March 12 to give the amateur gardeners in the Syracuse Rose Society a talk on rose growing.

Martins Ferry, O.—Davidson Bros., whose greenhouses are at this place, opened a store at Wheeling, W. Va., for the Easter rush.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Rachel M. Rebstock Co., with store at 614 Main street, has a branch at 292 Connecticut street for the Easter rush.

Newburgh, N. Y.—Mrs. Max Pushman found her husband, a florist, and Michael Cavigan, a fireman, dead in a greenhouse on the morning of March 23. They had been suffocated by gas from a coal stove.

Kansas City, Mo.—Two greenhouses of the Rock Flower Co., Sixty-third street and Troost avenue, were crushed by the weight of the snow that fell March 24. The glass was broken and plants worth $2,000 were ruined.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Wm. F. Snyder, formerly sole proprietor of the establishment at North Main and Fourth streets, has taken Geo. D. Harned into partnership and has added a grocery department to the business. The store has also been enlarged, so as to make space for two more rooms. At the greenhouses a large workroom has been built and a new boiler has been installed. Two more greenhouses will be erected this summer. The firm name is now Snyder & Harned.

Corning, N. Y.—A. H. Woeppel says the begonia will continue to be a popular plant for holiday trade. When hardened off previous to selling time, the plant gives satisfaction. He will grow Glory of Cincinnati extensively. His carnations were never better; the old favorite, Enchantress, seems hard to beat, though Pink Delight and Mrs. C. W. Ward are popular, being excellent keepers. Mr. Woeppel is much interested in the new varieties being offered. Rush of business kept him from being at Detroit.

Raleigh, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co., of this city, and H. C. Smith, of Goldsboro, N. C., have leased their greenhouses at Goldsboro to S. A. Starr, for a period of four and one-half years. O'Quinn & Co. report business as exceedingly good. Though the winter has been the coldest in twenty years, requiring the consumption of almost double the usual quantity of coal, yet trade has been good enough to compensate fully for this extra expense. The firm will tear down two old greenhouses and replace them with new ones, using concrete for the walls and benches.

Norristown, Pa.—Wm. H. Catanese has opened a branch flower store in Pottstown. It is located at 13 North Hanover street and will be known as the Century Floral Shop.

Norristown, Pa.—William Yeager, formerly in the florists' business here, but for the last few months an inmate of the State Hospital for the Insane, escaped from that institution at a late hour on Saturday night, March 23, in company with three other patients. At last report, he had not been found.

Albion, Mich.—During the last year M. & S. L. Dysinger have made such improvements at their place as have put it in first-class condition for business. They have built additions to their chrysanthemum and carnation houses, repaired and painted the whole range and installed a new steam boiler. Their trade during the winter was heavy. They have again secured the contract for the cemetery work and also the G. A. R. order for Memorial day.

East Walden, N. Y.—W. C. Hart, the dahlia specialist at Sycamore Place, has built a cellar, 32 x 56 feet, for the storage of the clumps. The cellar is so arranged that a team and loaded wagon can be driven through its entire length. There is ample room for the sorting and packing of shipments. The walls are of cement, studded and wainscoted inside, then papered and wainscoted again with ship-lap lumber. The ceiling is studded and lined in the same way. A large cistern pipe supplies an abundance of filtered rain water.

Lake Forest, Ill.—E. Bollinger, the landscape gardener, has delivered some unusually interesting illustrated lectures at Evanston in connection with the Y. M. C. A. gardening course. Mr. Bollinger is a native of Switzerland, and studied at the botanical gardens at Geneva. He has laid out the grounds of several wealthy persons, and was with Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Co., for five years. He organized the Lake Shore Horticultural Society, and is a member and lecturer of the Illinois State Horticultural Society.

Greencastle, Ind.—John Eitel & Son have purchased what are known as the Troxell & Shake greenhouses, at the corner of Vine and Franklin streets, and have removed their offices and retail department to the new location, where they will make such alterations and improvements as seem desirable. The firm's greenhouses on Melrose avenue will be retained, but will be used only for wholesale business in the future. The Troxell & Shake place had been conducted for a year by Geo. D. Reid, who has bought the Howell establishment, at Danville, Ind., and gone into business there.

Pekin, Ill.—George A. Kuhl, who has been ill for a long time, is getting along nicely at the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago, but probably will be there for several weeks longer.

Marysville, O.—Snow drifted onto one of the greenhouses of the Marysville Floral Co., March 24, to the depth of eighteen inches, the weight causing the concrete walls to spread and the roof to collapse. Manager C. O. Coder estimates the loss at $600. The house will be rebuilt at once.

Kansas City, Mo.—William L. Rock and associates have this week been holding an opening reception at their new store, 1106 Grand avenue, where they have fitted up one of the handsomest establishments in the west. Engraved invitations were sent to those in the social set and the store has been thronged. A large Easter trade is certain.

Muscatine, Ia.—Fire that destroyed a greenhouse and several small outbuildings occurred on the property of Arthur Kleist, a resident of the Island, March 24, causing a damage estimated at about $200. A unique feature of the blaze was that no inkling of the fire had been received until the mass of debris and smoking ruins met the owner's gaze next morning. He had slept throughout. No intimation that his property was endangered had been received by him during the night. None of his neighbors saw the flames.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—The stock in the greenhouses of Fred L. Lainson, on Canning street, was seriously damaged recently by gas that had been escaping from one of the gas company's mains. The plants had been suffering for several weeks, and no explanation could be given until experts from the State Agricultural College at Ames looked over the place and found the leak. Later the gas company began work for the purpose of discovering the exact place of the leakage. The vegetable section of the houses was the most affected. The total damage was estimated at $10,000.

Durham, N. C.—Fred Roll has built another Lord & Burnham house, 20x75, and has planted it with carnations, of which he has a fine crop. He has tried a few hundreds of Dorothy Gordon, C. W. Ward and Alma Ward, and thinks they have "made good." The January cold wave was the severest here in fourteen years, with the temperature as low as 6 degrees above zero, but he succeeded in keeping all his stock in good condition. He thinks that southern growers have not so much of an advantage over their northern brethren in regard to heating as might be supposed, since fuel is more expensive here; hard coal is $9.50 per ton.

he decorated the Unitarian church, Marlboro, for the wedding and reception of Miss Ellis and John D. Rice, with his usual taste.

M. L. Terrell, of Randolph, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is strong on callas, snapdragons and carnations.

Reid, who has bought the Howell establishment, at Danville, Ind., and gone into business there.

Pekin, Ill. George A. Kuhl, who has been ill for a long time, is getting along nicely at the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago, but probably will be there for several weeks longer.

Marysville, O. Snow drifted onto one of the greenhouses of the Marysville Floral Co., March 24, to the depth of eighteen inches, the weight causing the concrete walls to spread and the roof to collapse. Manager C. O. Coder estimates the loss at $600. The house will be rebuilt at once.

Kansas City, Mo. William L. Rock and associates have this week been holding an opening reception at their new store, 1106 Grand avenue, where they have fitted up one of the handsomest establishments in the west. Engraved invitations were sent to those in the social set and the store has been thronged. A large Easter trade is certain.

Muscatine, Ia. Fire that destroyed a greenhouse and several small outbuildings occurred on the property of Arthur Kleist, a resident of the Island, March 24, causing a damage estimated at about $200. A unique feature of the blaze was that no inkling of the fire had been received until the mass of debris and smoking ruins met the owner's gaze next morning. He had slept throughout. No intimation that his property was endangered had been received by him during the night. None of his neighbors saw the flames.

Council Bluffs, Ia. The stock in the greenhouses of Fred L. Lainsou, on Canning street, was seriously damaged recently by gas that had been escaping from one of the gas company's mains. The plants had been suffering for several weeks, and no explanation could be given until experts from the State Agricultural College at Ames looked over the place and found the leak. Later the gas company began work for the purpose of discovering the exact place of the leakage. The vegetable section of the houses was the most affected. The total damage was estimated at $10,000.

Durham, N. C. Fred Roll has built another Lord & Burdham house, 20x75, and has planted it with carnations, of which he has a fine crop. He has tried a few hundreds of Dorothy Gordon, C. W. Ward and Alma Ward, and thinks they have "made good." The January cold wave was the severest here in fourteen years, with the temperature as low as 6 degrees above zero, but he succeeded in keeping all his stock in good condition. He thinks that southern growers have not so much of an advantage over their northern brethren in regard to heating as might be supposed, since fuel is more expensive here; hard coal is $9.50 per ton.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

It is stated that the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., have decided to disseminate their new rose, Mrs. Russell, next season.

THE Massachusetts Horticultural Society has issued a pamphlet giving the schedules of all the shows for the year 1912, eleven in number.

THE florist who writes on plain paper is like the one who declines to talk to the representatives of Dun and Bradstreet—he stands in his own light.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
the bother of annual renewal by sending
The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

It is proposed that the Illinois State Florists' Association meet at Rock Island next year at the same date that the Iowa State Florists' Association meets across the river in Davenport.

IN spite of repeated statements that no attention can be paid to anonymous inquiries, they are of almost daily receipt. All inquiries that bear the full name and address of the writer are given prompt attention, but it is a waste of time to send questions unsigned.

ONE of the signs of the commercial awakening of the south is the increased quantities of galax that are reaching the market. The prevailing low jobbing prices are not due to any decrease in the consumption of galax, but to an increase in the quantity picked by the mountaineers.

ONE of the special features of the exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society, to be held at Boston July 13 and 14, which is attracting much attention is the proposed display by school children. A leaflet has been issued showing the schedule of some twenty-four classes open only to school children, and carrying simple suggestions for the successful growing of sweet peas. Harry A. Bun-yard, secretary, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York city, has distributed a large number of these through school superintendents in Boston and vicinity and an interesting exhibition is anticipated. Seed stores note a considerable call for seeds because of these school children's prizes.

NO FABLE.

"Very soon after I became associated with the old Morning News, I made the discovery," says George Ade of fable fame, "that if you want to make a real impression on a big and indifferent public, you must hit forty-two times in the same place."

This is no fable, but it points a moral:
Use The Review and hit your public fifty-two times in the same place—once a week for a year.

Correspondents are urged to mail Easter trade reports not later than Monday, April 8, so that they may be published as news rather than as ancient history.

IT FINDS THE BUYERS.

The season of the year now is approaching when the Classified Department of The Review runs heaviest, in spite of the promptness with which those who have only moderate quantities of stock sell out. Like this:

Please discontinue our advertisement of Dra-cena terminalis and poinsettias, as we are sold out. We have had orders from as far as Washington, Oregon and California. The Review certainly "finds the buyers, no matter where they are."— Avenue Floral Co., New Orleans, La., March 28, 1912.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

March ended much better than it began, but the improvement in business was not enough to put the market on anything better than the normal level for the week preceding what always has been called the greatest flower festival of the year. April started well, but the Easter business had not begun when this issue of The Review went to press. Prices were firming up. There was no shortage of anything except, possibly, single violets, and the strength of the market was rather anticipatory than because of any exceptional demand in the first three days of the week.

While a few Easter orders went out April 3, the real Easter business does not begin until April 4, with April 5 as the big day for shipping and April 6 the big day locally. Monday morn-ing's mail brought a big run of orders, but it is noticed that year by year Easter orders are later and later in reaching the wholesalers. One explanation of this is that the out-of-town buyers have confidence that there will hereafter be plenty of stock in this market to meet any ordinary Easter demand, so that the protection of early ordering is no longer necessary. Another explanation is that the retailers prefer first to push their plants, taking hold of the cut flowers in earnest only after the pot stock has been cleaned up. It was the general report that orders on file April 1 were not so numerous as they usually have been on the Monday preceding Easter, but quite a number of the wholesalers stated that such customers as had been heard from had ordered larger quantities of stock than ever before. The general impression is that the business will come with a tremendous rush the last three days of the week.

Single violets have pretty nearly reached the end of their season and there may not be enough to fill the orders this week. Doubles are abundant. Cattleyas also are on the short side. If anything else is scarce its absence has not been noted. Beauties have been coming in much more plentifully and of improved quality in the last few days. Other roses have been, and are, in good supply and of fine quality. Possibly there is no special Easter crop right at its height, as has been seen at some other Easters, but there promises to be enough roses for all who are willing to pay a fair price. Stock has been so cheap the last few weeks

Hurry-up Orders

No matter what you find yourself running short of, wire us your order and we will rush the stock to you on the first train. Our facilities for handling rush orders are the best that experience can devise.

Easter Lilies

Really good Lilies are not plentiful this Easter—too many that have been forced too hard to get them in, and too many that are short of stem. But our Lilies are fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even. They run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and are packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for.

Medium length.....	12.00 " "	100.00 " "
Short.....	10.00 " "	80.00 " "

KILLARNEYS

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carry the finest flowers of any in this market.

CARNATIONS

Once a user of our Carnations, always a user is almost always the rule—because ours is the best average large lot of Carnations in this market.

SWEET PEAS

Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

VIOLETS

The Easter Violets are better than usual this year, because of the late spring. Especially strong on doubles.

that buyers are reluctant to pay the usual Easter values.

Have the growers ceased to hold back carnations? In years gone by there would be a pronounced scarcity a few days before Easter. This year there has been plenty of stock for all demands. Some of the wholesalers have been wondering about the lily crop. Usually there is a lot of early stock that comes onto the market just before Easter, but in the last few days the receipts have been light. Some argue that this means that quite a few growers must be late with their lilies, but another explanation is that they have moved them into cold quarters to await the end of the week. Much nice, clean stock is seen with short stems.

The miscellaneous items never are in great request at a holiday until after the big staples have been well cleaned up. Of the bulbous and miscellaneous flowers there has been enough for all, with the prospect that the supply will be adequate through the week.

Smilax is scarce, but asparagus strings are more plentiful than they have been. The price of ferns is going up, for eastern holders advanced their prices again April 1 and report that their waste this season is heavier than usual.

Amling Is Bank President.

At a meeting of some sixty Oak Park business men who are the stockholders in the new Oak Park State Bank, April 1, E. C. Amling was elected president. Mr. Amling is president of the wholesale cut flower commission house that bears his name. His residence is in Oak Park. The new bank starts out with a capital of $100,000 and $25,000 surplus, the oversubscription having been over fifty per cent. It is understood that Mr. Amling is considerably the largest stockholder. The bank will put up a handsome building at Marion and Lake streets in Oak Park.

Albert F. Amling, brother of E. C.

Amling, is vice-president of the Maywood State Bank, a highly successful institution in the next town west of Oak Park.

The Trade in the Council.

Our trade lost its representation in the city council at the election April 2, Peter Reinberg being defeated by a republican named Pretzel, who received 1,043 votes more than the wholesale florist. The ward is strongly republican, but three times Mr. Reinberg, a democrat, succeeded in carrying it. Mr. Reinberg was a close friend of Mayor Harrison and the opposition to Harriding was a member of the Florists' Club for some years.

Cook County Association.

At a meeting of forty-six members at the Union restaurant March 28 the Cook County Florists' Association was organized by the election of the following officers: President, A. C. Kohlbrand; vice-president, George Wienhoeber; secretary, Aaron T. Pyfer; treasurer, John Zech; sergeant-at-arms, Mike Fink; trustees, Walter Scott, A. Henderson, W. J. Keimel, N. P. Miller, A. T. Hey. The trustees were instructed to draft a constitution and by-laws for presentation at the next meeting, to be held the third Thursday in April.

After Twenty Years.

After more than twenty years as foreman and superintendent for Peter Reinberg, George Collins resigned his position March 30. Mr. Collins has seen the plant grow from a small range to its present large proportions and has missed scarcely a day on the job. He has saved his money, is alone in the world, except for a son 25 years of age, and will take a good rest before going into anything else. Emil Reichling, a young man who had his training on the place and at Wietors', has been placed in charge by Mr. Reinberg.

The Weather in March.

The month was the coldest March since 1872 and following, as it did, the record-breaking cold of January and February, the winter closes with the lowest mean temperature on record. The precipitation was practically all in the form of snow and fell chiefly in three heavy storms. These storms were, moreover, accompanied by high winds, especially the last one, when the maximum wind of forty-three miles from the northeast was recorded. The mean temperature was 29 degrees, against 39 degrees last year and 49 degrees in March, 1910. The sunshine averaged six hours and thirty-six minutes per day, which was fifty-five per cent of the possible number of hours and compares with fifty-two per cent as the normal for March.

Home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Pearce, on Clybourn avenue, Wednesday, April 17. Mr. Tegelmaar, who is the American representative of Speelman & Sons, bulb growers at Sasenheim, Holland, arrived April 1 from Hoboken, where he makes his headquarters. With his bride he will sail from New York May 7 for a summer in Europe.

P. J. Foley, J. C. Vaughan and M. Barker were the principal speakers March 28 at the annual banquet of the Tri-City Florists' Association at Davenport, Ia.

W. O. Johnson, who is connected with the shipping department of A. L. Vaughan & Co., met with an accident last week when he fell down the elevator shaft. While loading the lift someone on one of the upper floors pulled the elevator up and Johnson, not knowing, walked into the open shaft, falling to the basement from the main floor. No bones were reported fractured, but he has not been able to resume his work. Will Timme has returned to the services of A. L. Vaughan & Co.

Window display is one of the big factors of the retail end of George Walther's business at 435 West Sixty-third street. His display greenhouse, with seventy-five feet frontage on Sixty-third street, is probably as attractive as any in the city this week. Fully 1,000 Easter lilies are exposed to view, tastefully banked back of assorted colors of smaller potted plants. A passer-by can hardly resist the spectacular arrangements. He never complains of lack of business.

Anton Then, treasurer of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has returned to Chicago after a trip to the south. Mr. Then asserts that Mobile oysters cannot be excelled.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is using the old store at 82 to 34 East Randolph street as a lily annex this week.

Eric Arlt, 3653 Dickens avenue, has a big lot of tulips and other bulb plants in fine shape for the Easter retail trade. His lilies, however, failed to come up to expectations.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The most trying market reports are those immediately preceding a holiday, because of the general anxiety to know what happens at Easter and not what happens during the week before. At such time the only thing to do is to saw wood while reflecting that work worth doing is worth doing thoroughly.

The market has shown improvement during the week ending April 3. There has been heavy trading at prices that ranged from moderate to low. The supply of flowers was large, too large to admit of any advance in prices, excepting on carnations. The southern daffodils are more numerous. So far they had broadened the market rather than lowered the price on any other flowers. In fact, greenhouse grown daffodils are bringing more today than for many weeks. Violets have shortened from the local growers. The Hudson river district doubles are available to meet any deficiency. Calla lilies did not advance much for Palm Sunday. The supply of so-called cut Easter lilies, as distinguished from those grown to sell as plants in pots, is not large. These lilies usually come with two to three flowers to a stem, making them much better value than the many-bud pot lilies, where it is necessary to pay either in full or in part, according to the abilities of buyer and seller, for un-realizable futures, so to speak. Daisies drag badly, but pansies are in fair favor, or shall I say, favor with the fair? There is nothing doing in cat-tleyas. Snapdragon is active at low prices. Sweet peas are generally good; they receive much attention. There is no change in the rose situation.

for the best arranged exhibit at the National Flower Show, to be held in New York next spring. The first silver medal will be offered at the national sweet pea show, to be held in Boston next July. The bronze medals will be offered, for instance, for a youths' corn growing competition and sometimes as a second award where the silver medal is offered for first. Easter Discussions.

Scene.—The Conservatory of Pennock Bros.

First expert.—Those are Jacob Becker's lilies. Aren't they fine?

Second expert.—I have seen a batch that would put them in the shade.

First expert.—Nonsense! I know good lilies. Just look at their finish. Where can you find better?

Second expert.—At Edward A. Stroud's at Overbrook.

N. B. This is a sample of the pre-Easter talk that is in the air and on the street in all parts of the city.

A Visit to Mr. Wintzer.

It was 1 o'clock on a bright, spring-like afternoon in March and Antoine Wintzer was preparing an attack on Maman Cochet, with a view to increasing the number of that variety, when his visitors appeared. Mr. Wintzer cheerfully gave up his work to act as guide through the greenhouses under his care, remarking, by way of making it seem less of a favor, "I have been here like a sentinel since the convention in Baltimore; I shall enjoy a rest."

He made a bee line for the end of one of the houses, where were some plants of his darling, the pride of Concord & Jones, American Pillar, that beautiful cluster rose whose fame is world-wide. There has been some difficulty in forcing American Pillar for Easter, so Mr. Wintzer tried his hand, just to see. The plants had been pruned hard and had thrown up strong shoots of just the right height, which were well topped with heavy clusters of buds that will be a sight at Easter.

There were only a few of them, merely as an experiment; they were fine.

Then came the cannas, such cannas as you can see nowhere else; with a season gained by winter cross fertilization and an unusually successful greenhouse season, the varieties brought into flower have done exceptionally well, affording just what was needed for the experiments. Mr. Wintzer is confident that these experiments will result in an unusually fine lot of seedlings, giving promise of new shades with rare pedigree.

Then came the roses, between 400 and 500 varieties, mainly for distribution through the mail. There were teas and hybrid teas, and climbers and Chinas and Wichuraianas, and hybrid perpetuals and what not. Many of them were sorts that our grandparents knew and loved, side by side with many of the rarest novelties, some of them not yet seen outside of a few favored spots. Sunburst was there, looking remarkably well. Mr. Wintzer had a kind word for the soil and roots of the stock sent out by his old friend

Mr. Hill, and Jonkheer J. L. Mock, medal-winner of last season's Bagatelle competition. Mr. Wintzer facetiously terms this the Mockrose, a sort of pet name for the outrageously un-English selection of our friend from Holland. The hybrid teas have a place, but not the whole place at Mr. Wintzer's disposal; he believes in hybrid teas, but also believes there is plenty of room for all the other classes and means that they shall have a place as long as the variety deserves it.

The propagating season is waning, but there are still beds sand-filled and cutting-topped here and there—notable among them long benches of hardwood cuttings that looked well. Most of the stock was in small pots, successive batches timed for shipping early, mid-season and late, to keep up a succession from the beginning of April until the end of May, the period that covers planting-out time from the south through the middle states and far north.

Rowland C. Satterthwaite, secretary of the C. & J. Co., was hard at work selecting material for the early orders. The shrubbery is an important factor indoors as well as out, for here all the small stock that it will save time to propagate and root early is being started for planting outdoors in May and June. Mr. Wintzer's knowledge of the varieties of roses and shrubs and of their history is extraordinary; he can tell at a glance, without label consultation, almost every variety of rose among the four or five hundred, its introducer, its history and its habits—a knowledge born of love for his work and close observation. Few florists who have not thought about it realize the immense amount of detail work connected with the cultivation and successful propagation of the great number of varieties that must be furnished at any given time to meet the requirements of the mailing demand.

Allentown, Pa., and E. A. Seidewitz, Baltimore.

August Muller, Sixty-seventh and Elmwood avenue, West Philadelphia, and William A. Leonard, Lansdowne, Pa., have fine blocks of lilies.

Robert A. Craig says that Easter plants have sold wonderfully. It is hard to keep up with the orders.

Frank J. Farney, Arthur Zirkman and Robert Shoch are all at M. Rice & Co.'s this week. Mr. Zirkman has a new story: "Crossing the Hudson on the ice at nine o'clock at night."

Great crowds visited the growers to see the Easter plants on Palm Sunday. The Robert Craig Co., W. K. Harris and J. William Colflesh's Sons were popular places that day.

Walter P. Stokes had a fine collection of fancy hydrangeas that were both novel and pleasing.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have had a great Easter.

Maurice Fuld is the author of a well written pamphlet on cannas, dahlias and gladioli that is full of interest.

Edmund G. Bowers is the author of the Riceogram.

Emil Lieker's car makes frequent trips from Lansdowne to Sansome street laden with fine flowers.

Alfred M. Campbell is getting splendid Emperor in quantity from the Collingdale Greenhouses.

Paul F. Richter reports an avalanche of orders, that he hopes will continue for six weeks.

The Whilldin Pottery Co. announces with sorrow the death of its president, William S. Emley, March 11.

Samuel T. Freeman & Co. sold at auction a valuable consignment of imported shrubbery and rose bushes Monday, April 1.

J. B. Coles, of Woodstown, N. J., was killed by a trolley at Wayne and Mannheim square, Germantown, on the evening of March 30. He was 55 years of age. Phil.

The many friends and customers of John S. Hay, who represents Henry A. Dreer, Inc., will be glad to know that he is making satisfactory progress towards recovery. The nature of his operation was such as requires considerable time for complete recovery, but he is looking forward with pleasure to the time when he will again be making his regular calls upon the many customers of the firm he represents.

HARDY HERBACEOUS BORDERS.

Any mulch on the hardy perennial borders should be removed at once, if it has not already been cleared away. Quite a number of plants are now starting to grow quite vigorously and before growth becomes too strong it is an excellent plan to stir up the soil well about the plants. When they are in nursery rows, a hoe or cultivator can be used, but in mixed borders it is better to use a common digging fork to loosen the surface; there is less danger of injuring any bulbs or other plants just below the surface of the ground. If you gave the plants a good dressing of rotted manure late last fall, they will not need any additional feeding, but where this was not done a dressing of dried cow or sheep manure or a good complete chemical fertilizer before stirring up the soil will be beneficial. In the case of peonies, a somewhat heavier dose can be applied than for other perennials, but do not use forcing stimulants, such as nitrate of soda, except when the plants are starved and need a powerful tonic.

While autumn is the best time for planting the large majority of hardy perennials, there are probably twice as many set out in spring as in the autumn and the sooner planting can be done after the frost leaves the ground, the better will the perennials thrive. There are a number of plants which, while hardy in the warmer states, are not quite ironclad farther north, and now is a good time to plant these out. This list would include Japanese anemones, pompon chrysanthemums, incarnations, foxgloves, Canterbury bells, etc. Do not allow the roots of perennials to become dry; they might not take any serious injury from such a condition, as would evergreen trees and shrubs, but the drying out process is one every florist should guard against.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Trade was pretty brisk last week. Roses and carnations have been arriving in fairly large shipments, but have been rapidly disposed of. Sweet peas are exceedingly scarce. Some of the finest forget-me-not ever seen is being shipped in by Fred Breitmeyer and is selling well.

Various Notes.

Thos. Browne sent a vase of his beautiful seedling carnation, Magnificent, to Mr. Pochelon's opening March 26, where it created quite a sensation.

The firm of Klang & Rockelman has dissolved, John Klang having bought Mr. Rockelman's interest.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has been having a heavy demand for its antique baskets. This company now does a big business in supplies, of which a large stock is carried.

Conspicuous at the opening of the new store of the Bomb Floral Co. were beautiful baskets sent by W. B. Brown and the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, also a horseshoe of lily of the valley planted right into the frame in moss. A. Miller, of Chicago, also remembered Mr. Pochelon.

B. Schroeter has been supplying many lilies to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Chas. Plumb finds his new shipping room a great convenience in handling his large Easter business.

No meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held on the regular meeting night, April 1, it being so close to Easter that all were busy. H. S.

Grand Rapids, Wis.—Paul C. Beasa, of Merrill, Wis., has closed a deal here for a considerable tract of ground and will start work as soon as the weather moderates, erecting a modern greenhouse plant. The present plans include 3,000 square feet of glass, which he expects to ultimately extend to about 10,000 square feet. Mr. Beasa has been connected with the N. Greivelding greenhouses, of Merrill, for several years.

The Market.

Spring at last, and wonderfully welcome to the plantmen who are shipping and delivering in the city.

Last week was a dull one in the cut flower market. There was an abundance of everything and many a sacrifice was made until Saturday, when the first signs of improvement appeared. American Beauties did not go above 25 cents, and 50 cents is predicted as top for Easter. All other varieties of roses have risen slightly, but there will be no unreasonable demand or advance, and retailers will have opportunity once more of reviving the goose that used to lay the golden eggs. This big city, if prices are reasonable, will absorb everything of merit that is offered in plant or flower.

Carnations are plentiful and last week showed no improvement in value until near its close. The quality of the carnations leaves nothing to be desired. Violets last week sold from 10 cents to 30 cents per hundred. They were scarce on Saturday for the first time in many moons, and the specials touched 50 cents. This figure is likely to be high water mark for the holiday, and after that the deluge!

There are plenty of orchids; never so many sources of supply or so many wholesalers handling them. Their popularity increases with their abundance, and the reasonable prices. They have completely crowded out the violet with the 400. These and gardenias and valley seem to be all society recognizes and wears.

Cut lilies fill the center of every wholesaler's window. The best of these have been booked at 12 cents, though 10 cents is expected to be the average and most of the orders have been taken at that figure. Callas are fine and the selected sell at $1.50 per dozen. Southern daffodils have arrived. Only the best tulips command mentionable quotations. Sweet peas are in great demand, when long-stemmed. Of spring flowers there is no shortage. Only fine weather is needed to make this an Easter long to be remembered.

Various Notes.

Monday, April 8, is the date of the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. There will be a display of sweet peas and several addresses by Anyone not in a position to accompany his exhibit may send same to the exhibition committee, care of Traendly & Schenck, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city, to arrive there before 5 p. m., Monday, when the exhibition committee will see that it is properly staged. J. S. Hendrickson is chairman.

July 3 to 6 the Elberon Horticultural Society will hold its third annual summer show at the beach auditorium in Asbury park. The society cleared a goodly sum last year and is offering some seductive prizes, $686 being devoted to sweet peas alone, with $200 as a first prize for the collection of thirty varieties, open to private gardeners and amateurs only.

The attendance at the auctions has been crowding the rooms away ahead of any year to date. There are few familiar faces, the florists not seeming to realize their opportunities. One of the largest buyers last week was A. N.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE Gregory Farm Seed Co., Bay City, Mich., has increased its capital stock from $6,000 to $12,000.

J. W. RATEKIN, of Ratekin's Seed House, Shenandoah, Ia., has purchased a farm of eighty acres just outside that town, to be used as trial grounds.

THE government seed distribution for 1912 is being closed up rapidly. Everything will be out before the end of April. Of radish seed 142,000 pounds has been packeted.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture intends to distribute free next season at least 75,000 tulip and hyacinth bulbs grown at the government station at Beltingham, Wash.

GLADIOLI of the larger sizes on some of the varieties most in demand are sold out of first hands and a good many of the growers are all contracted up for the 1912 crop of the big sellers.

THE first three months of the year have been record ones for the wholesale seedsmen, so far as orders go, and only limited as to sales by the size of the supply. Of course the heaviest demand has been for the scarcest items.

COUNTER trade is active in the cities along the Atlantic coast, for even as far north as Boston the present week sees the ground sufficiently open and dry for the beginning of gardening operations. Farther west conditions are not so forward, or, rather, are more backward.

RETAIL mail orders for March have not, with most of the catalogue houses, been up to previous years. With the average run of small buyer the scarcity of seeds did not seem to lead to early ordering in sufficient volume to counterbalance the handicap imposed by the severe cold, deep snows and late spring. April starts with the mail order seed trade on the jump.

THE trade press on the other side of the Atlantic comments favorably on a recent circular issued by John Lewis Childs in which it is explained that as the cost of labor has gone up thirty per cent it is necessary to make a corresponding advance in the prices of gladiolus bulbs. The editors welcome this as a pleasing change from the usual custom in the horticultural trades, which is stated to be to lower prices as expenses increase.

Mann, of Illinois, strongly urged the committee to take favorable action with regard to a bill which he has framed for the purpose of regulating foreign commerce in adulterated seeds. The committee expressed strong interest in the bill and various members made suggestions and criticisms, which Mr. Mann undertook to meet. He proposes to reintroduce the bill with these modifications embodied in it. The principal changes will relate to the time when the bill is to take effect, which will be regulated in such a way as to exempt this year's crop from the operation of the measure.

OUR SWEET PEA CATALOGUE GLADLY SENT ON REQUEST

Owing to the backward season in California, all Winter and late Sweet Pea Seed will be late in maturing. To avoid late deliveries, I will send all early orders of Winter Sweet Pea Seed directly from our ranch in Lompoc, Cal. These will reach my farthest customers not later than August 10th, saving over four weeks' time. Send all letters of importance to Lompoc, Cal. We will have all the leading colors and many novelties. Orders booked now. New complete list will be sent out in May.

Here is a testimonial from one of many satisfied customers:

Mt. Airy, Md., Feb. 26, 1912.

Dear Sir:—We have been cutting very fine peas this season from your stock. Stems 18 and 20 inches, with 3, 4 and 5 flowers, and in several instances with 6 flowers to a stem. You deserve and receive great honor from the trade for bringing Winter flowering Sweet Peas to their present high position in the market. You have already done more for the florist than the great Burbank will ever do.

JESSE P. KING.

We have also only the best Spencer and Unwin late Sweet Pea Seed on hand now, also other Florists' flower seed. Send for list.

NEW ROCHESTER CORPORATIONS.

The secretary of state at Albany, N. Y., reports applications for charters for the following corporations:

Vick & Dildine Co., Rochester, to deal in seeds, plants, bulbs, trees, etc.; capital, $150,000; incorporators, H. W. Allen, W. H. Dildine, H. F. Remington, all of Rochester.

Crosman Bros. Co., Rochester, to deal in seeds, bulbs and garden requisites; capital, $200,000; incorporators, C. W. Crosman, G. F. Crosman, D. T. Crosman, all of Rochester.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS.

[Night letter telegram.]

Santa Cruz, Cal., April 2, 1912.—Crop conditions continue favorable in the seed growing districts. The season's rainfall in the San Joaquin valley has now reached seven and eight-tenths inches and this, with the ordinary spring showers, will be sufficient to assure good crops. Several growers report considerable damage to lettuce by the cutworm.

BUCKBEE HAS HIS WAY.

There are a good many ways of beating the devil around the bush, but it has remained for H. W. Buckbee to devise a way of meeting a draft attached to a bill of lading and still hold back the money. This is how. It is from a Rockford paper of March 27:

"H. W. Buckbee, through his attorney, Bruce H. Garrett, yesterday instituted an attachment suit against T. S. Rice, of Waterloo, Neb. A levy was made on $1,700 in a local bank to the credit of the defendant.

"Although only the praecipe was filed, the action was started to safeguard the defendant against possible loss on a carload of seed corn purchased from the westerner. Mr. Buckbee desires to test the germinating quality of the seed before handing over the $1,700, but to this proceeding the Nebraska man would not listen. As the car had been shipped on a bill of lading and draft, the consignee paid the draft, secured the bill of lading and then attached the money. In the meantime the corn will be tested and if it is up to expectations, the proceeding will be dismissed and the money released."

SEED STORE PUBLICITY.

With so skilled a literator on its staff as is Maurice Fuld, it is in the natural order of things that the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, should recently have issued a number of exceptionally attractive pieces of literature. The Michell Co. first attracted attention to its campaign of publicity by instituting a series of public horticultural lectures, held weekly in its store. The innovation was widely commented on and has proved extremely successful. Supplementing the course of lectures, a number of pamphlets have been issued. These contain nothing of an advertising nature except the statement that they are issued by the firm. Those who read and are interested are referred to the firm's catalogue for further information and prices.

In 1803 Thomas Jefferson bought Louisiana from Napoleon for $15,000,000. A lot of money at that time. It figured up 2½ cents an acre, made about 14 states, and was probably the greatest real estate transaction ever known. Jefferson saw ahead. Next, in 1822, James Monroe bought Florida from Spain for $5,000,000, a very small part of the assessed value of Jacksonville today. Then, just after the civil war, Uncle Sam bought Alaska for $7,200,000, and was severely criticised for thirty years. Today it pays for itself in gold about three times per annum. Then, after the Spanish war, we paid $20,000,000 for the Philippines because we had whipped Spain and could have had it for nothing, but thought better to smooth it over with money. The profit of this purchase is yet to come. And the last purchase was the Panama Canal site, costing nearly as much as all the others combined—$40,000,000. Profits yet to come. All this work is foresight into the future. Foresight in man is a very valuable asset—a good deal more so than hindsight. Some men have foresight to a moderate degree, but lack the initiative to use it. About one in ten have both, and that one is always the leader—the rest common herdmen—followers of the star. Of course leaders are criticised, as are all men who do things. Criticism is praise in disguise—real glory masquerading before men of the wooden variety; and when these wooden men wake up to the reality of the thing it is too late, the time has passed and they are still herdmen; and so they continue, most of them, plowing in the same old rut and grunting because the other fellow is whistling at the top. So also with florists—plenty of herdmen—some leaders—a sort of Jack and Jill down-the-hill proposition. Look ahead, reason out what you do, plan your growing and selling campaign as a general plans a battle. Do something and be somebody. Don't hesitate after you have determined upon a thing—go at it. In handling lily bulbs foresight is a large part of the battle. Plan ahead—buy ahead—and when the season rolls around be on time. Plant some Horseshoe Brand Formosas for Easter next year, because they are profit-makers. Order them now. Look ahead. Write for the Book of Bulbology, which contains prices. A Map of the World free, too, if you want it.

WINTERSON'S "Worth-While" DAHLIA ROOTS

Florists and dealers generally will find a big sale for Dahlia roots, providing they place before the public stock that is of good appearance and such as is not divided up into small pieces. We furnish large, undivided clumps of all of the varieties listed herein; furthermore, the sorts named have been specially selected for early blooming, which is an important factor in the northern country, where early autumn frosts frequently occur. Those varieties marked with a * are particularly recommended to growers of cut flowers.

DECORATIVE DAHLIAS

- Jack Rose—Color a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing.
Delice*—Brilliant crimson-pink, extra fine. Each, 20c; doz., $2.00; per 100, $15.00.
Perle de la Tete d'Or—Pure white, extra.
Clifford W. Bruton*—A fine, bright yellow.
Souvenir de Gustave Doazon—Pure red, very large.
Kaiserin Augusta Victoria*—Pure white, extra fine.

SINGLE DAHLIAS

- Pink Century—Delicate soft pink. Each, 15c; doz., $1.50; per 100, $11.00.
Alba Superba—Large white, with a dash of canary-yellow at base of petals.
St. George—A pretty primrose-yellow.
Gorgeous—Brilliant scarlet.
Jack—Varies from a reddish salmon to a bright scarlet.

CACTUS DAHLIAS

- Master Carl—Color bright amber, very large.
Country Girl—Base of petals suffused with salmon-rose, which is deepest at the points.
Ambassador—Pure white, one of the best.
Cockatoo—Lemon-yellow shaded with rose, with pure white center petals.
Mme. A. Lumiere—Pure white, with violet points.
Countess of Lonsdale*—Rich salmon-tinted apricot.

PEONY-FLOWERED DAHLIAS

- King Leopold—Semi-double cream yellow.
Germania—Brilliant strawberry-red.
Queen Emma—A charming shade of mallow, or artificial pink. Inner petals banded with gold.
Queen Wilhelmina—Pure white, with yellow center.

PRICE, except otherwise noted:

Each, 15c; doz., $1.25; 100, $10.00

The latest pamphlet from Mr. Fuld's pen, just issued, is entitled "Cannas, Dahlias and Gladioli." It is written for the amateur gardener. Detailed instructions as to culture are given, with many valuable hints as to how the non-professional grower may obtain the best results. The pamphlet of sixty-four pages is handsomely printed, though not illustrated. The character of the text seems to make it certain that the booklet will do much to stimulate the public interest in the flowers described.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Henry Wittbold, 56 East Randolph street, is being pushed with rush orders for decorations this week, while advance wedding orders for the week following Easter Sunday already number over a half dozen. Four of them are scheduled for the same day and call for unusually elaborate work.

M. A. Dziadul, 1514 West Chicago avenue, says that his retail trade has held up to normal through Lent. His hopes for the future have been strengthened by the erection of a large new Polish church one block away, which is to throw open its doors next month.

Carl Thomas, who has spent the winter with the A. L. Randall Co., will return to his summer home at West Springfield, Pa., March 7.

J. Beaver has been added to the retail store force of Lubliner & Trinz at 23 East Randolph street.

Harry Manheim spent Sunday, March 31, at Des Plaines, sizing up the Easter cut of Hoerber Bros.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports having moved two carloads of sphagnum moss in the last few days.

E. Kitzinger, who runs a retail establishment at 2852 Fullerton avenue, has been going through a prolonged siege of sickness during the winter and is still confined to his bed. Mrs. Kitzinger is in charge of the business, which has been steadily growing.

A visitor at The Review office March 27 was G. L. Miller, Newark, O.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., looks upon the passing of Easter as the opening of the peony season.

Winterson's Seed Store is busy re-tailing Easter plants.

Kyle & Foerster say they expect April, May and June to be exceptionally good months.

John Kruchten has sold a large number of pot lilies from samples this Easter.

North avenue has made rapid strides during the last two years and Mrs. Hannah Thielman reports that retail trade at her store at 2508 West North avenue has increased by leaps and bounds. She expects the Easter trade this year to be the biggest she has yet done.

Actions and reactions of the market sometimes give the wholesalers food for thought. C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, is trying to figure out why the Otto Wittbold says the Easter lilies at the Edgebrook greenhouses developed rather better than expected and he is getting a fair proportion of medium and long stems. Teaming is difficult on account of the rains and melting snow, some of the roads being almost impassable.

On his roses Adam Zender tried the fertilizer they are said to use in growing lily bulbs in Japan. It proved to be hot stuff, and burned his plants.

Limousine baskets are said to be the latest with the Raedlein Basket Co. They appear to be perfectly adapted for the purpose.

Fred Lautenschlager is asking for S. A. F. and Florists' Club news from nearly everyone he meets. During his recent long trip for Kroeschell Bros. Co. he lost track of developments.

Leopold Koropp is just recovering from a two weeks' illness as a result of blood poisoning and says he is lucky to pull through. Mr. Koropp had intended to entirely redecorate the store before Easter, but his sickness forced him to postpone the work till after the holiday.

CHRISTMAS TREE INDUSTRY.

Answering a question, H. J. Smith, the Hinsdale green goods dealer, says in the Rural New Yorker: "Regarding the Christmas tree industry, will say that it seems to be on the increase every year. There are no farmers now who cut the wood clean off their lots. They usually cut the unsightly trees and leave the more symmetrical ones to grow larger, both for timber and wood. As regards the Christmas trees, they are thinned out in like manner; only those unsuitable for Christmas trees have the boughs cut off. We bale them up and send to different dealers to be used as background in halls and churches for decorating, and in gardens and parks for covering plants and shrubbery in winter. Then when we require Christmas trees they cut those of a suitable size and bring them to us in large loads, which nets them a good sum per load. Around a large spruce of twenty-five to thirty feet the seed falls and is carried several rods from it, and a great quantity of small spruce spring up. These are thinned out and used for table decoration. Lots that were cut over six or eight years ago have better Christmas trees growing on them now than were cut then. For instance, a tree that is two feet now will reach a height of ten to fifteen feet in six to eight years. This gives the farmer a good return for his labor and gives him a revenue on land which otherwise he does not use

HOTBED FOR SWEET POTATOES.

Please tell me how to make a hotbed for sweet potato plants. I am going into business in southeastern Kansas and I expect you will be troubled quite frequently with letters of inquiry, as I have not been in touch with any of the work for eight years. C. B. G.

To make a hotbed for sweet potatoes, take good, fresh, hot stable manure and make a flat pile about eighteen inches deep and about eighteen inches wider on each side than the frame you are to place on the pile, on which to lay the sash. See that the manure is well shaken out if lumpy, and then smoothed over and packed down firmly and evenly. Then take the frame and place it on top of the manure and put two or three inches of loose, sandy soil on top of the manure, inside the frame. It will heat violently for a few days and then gradually cool down. After two or three days you can place the sweet potatoes on this, as close together as they can be without touching, so as to permit the sandy soil to go down between them. They may then be covered over about an inch deep with soil that is about half sand and not lumpy. Water them; then level off after the soil settles and put the sash back on top of the frame. They will need watering frequently and a little ventilation every day if the sun shines. They will quickly sprout and be ready to pull and sell.

When pulling, hold the potatoes down with one hand and pull gently with the other, catching hold down at the surface of the soil. Wrap them in bunches with moss, like rooted cuttings, and tie them up in papers with the tops exposed. The potatoes will keep on making plants for many weeks, if carefully handled.

The frame should be tall enough to allow the plants to grow six or eight inches before touching the glass. A

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies seven pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mrs. R. E. Darbee has removed from 1974 Bush street to larger and more convenient quarters at 1036 Hyde street, and has opened a retail department in connection with her wholesale business. This step was taken for the purpose of being able, without difficulty, to maintain a perfect quality of stock for shipping, as she will now have a better home market than formerly for any stock that might be slightly too mature for long-distance shipping.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Preparations for Easter are going on briskly and the increased supplies of fine pot lilies show its near approach. Business generally has not been quite up to the mark during the last week, but Lent, on the whole, has been away beyond expectations. Advance orders presage an excellent Easter and, as there is plenty of stock of nearly all kinds, retailers should reap a good harvest.

Outdoor stock, in all varieties except sweet peas, is good, but the late sown rows will not be in for Easter. Tulips and hyacinths are plentiful and daffodils are good, though not by any means in too great supply. A few violets of fine quality come along occasionally, but most of those coming in are poor in quality and small. Carnations are a mixed lot, those from outside being small and poor, while the indoor ones are much better. There are plenty of good cut Easter lilies and valley. The poeticus varieties of narcissus are extra fine now. In roses, local grown Killarney and White Killarney are better, but still not so good as My Maryland. Local Beauties are also good, but Mrs. Jardine and Bridesmaid are the best of the northern stock. Richmond is excellent, with long stems and rich color. Harry Kirk is practically the only yellow shown, Mrs. Aaron Ward being conspicuously absent. Orchids are scarce and of poor quality.

In plants, rhododendrons are seen in the best stores. Japanese azaleas and kalmias are also extremely well flowered and pretty. Easter lilies, tree peonies and wistarias are also more or less shown, the last named being imported from Japan and flowered here. Greens are shortening up, growers of asparagus being busy taking their seed crop. There is plenty of brake fern and Mexican ivy, but hardly any smilax. Artificially colored foliage is offered, but is not in particularly good demand.

Various Notes.

The grounds of the Diamond Hill Nursery, at Stephenson and Boyle avenues, will soon pass out of the hands of Max Keppel, but it is pleasant to know that they are not to be cut up into building lots. Instead, they are to be used as school grounds and this means the retention of the many fine trees. Among these is a magnificent specimen of Ficus macrocarpa, forty feet high, with a spread of about seventy-five feet, and there are others that nearly approach this size. Mr. Keppel has not yet decided on his new location.

Miss Knapper, at the Floral Exchange on Pico street, is handling a good deal of stock and reports business fine.

Tom Wright is all smiles over his fine batch of Easter lilies and he has reason, for they are a magnificent lot and timed to the minute. A splendid grade of Richmond roses is also being sent in from the Gardena greenhouses, where everything is in fine trim.

Hubert Morton, brother of Charles, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, has six men gathering seed of Asparagus plumosus nanus at the Signal Hill ranch. The seed is a little later than usual, but the quality is first-rate and the whole of the immense crop is handled at the Los Angeles Flower Market.

The Hayward Floral Co. is making a specialty of splendid pot and cut flower stock in the windows. I never like to make comparisons, but a competing retailer said they were "the best windows in Los Angeles," and I certainly could not contradict him. Taste and originality, coupled with the use of high-class stock, have led to this excellent result.

We have a few thousand fine two-year-old plants and the engraving will convey a good idea of their character. Each plant will produce not less than 100 cuttings and the original plant can be cut back to between the three and four-foot mark as shown, potted into a 10-inch pot and by pinching the growths during summer and early autumn will make a full, rounded specimen similar to an azalea in form, with dozens of splendid big bracts. We worked this stunt ourselves successfully last season, getting as high as $10 each for single plants.

The Los Angeles Flower Market is handling grand pot lilies in large quantities, as well as big stocks of all classes of bulbous flowers. The demand is first-class.

Fine outdoor roses are a special offering at Tassano Bros.' place. Big lots of Easter lilies, both pot and cut, are moving out daily.

A rather unusual order was that given to Morris Goldenson by the Mason Opera House. During the run of "The Pink Lady" the big fountain was decorated with pink carnations and huckleberry, and pink carnations were also given away as souvenirs each night to the audience.

Speakman Bros.' new greenhouse, 27x335 feet, is about ready for planting and the stock in the other houses is in excellent shape.

Among the fine stock now being handled by the H. N. Gage Co., I noted grand Gesneriana tulips. These fine reds contrast well with the lutescens (yellow), and both are of the brightest and best in their color. These will be on hand for Easter, as well as large lots of pot Easter lilies and cut valley.

The Cherokee rose is beautiful hereabouts just now, the large, pure white single flowers making a fine show. There seems to be no limit to the amount of space this fine old species will cover and it never fails to flower with the greatest freedom.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MARGUERITE PLANTS, "MRS. F. SANDER"

CHRYSANTHEMUM MARGUERITE

SANDER. In this we have unquestionably the most important flowering plant introduced in many years. It will not only be grown extensively for cut flowers, but also a subject which will prove invaluable for conservatory and window garden, succeeding in any light, sunny position. Unlike all other Marguerites, the purest glistening white throughout; in size it frequently measures 3 to 4 inches across; the center of mass of closely arranged fringed florets; these are surrounded or edged by the broad, shining white petals of a flower which reminds one forcibly of a bouquet of Asters. These are produced on long stems with long leaves. In other varieties of the Marguerite, the flowers are small and the plant will give one no pleasure, as there is never a day that this plant is not in bloom. The illustration is taken from plants grown in California, and we consider this plant one of the finest novelties ever introduced of its kind. It has proven itself a bloomer inside as out.

Shipping trade in plants has been heavy during the last few weeks at the Dieterich & Turner plant at Montebello. Large kentias and Boston ferns, philodendrons and aspidistras are the principal foliage plants now being sent out, and there is also a big call for small rose stock.

H. R. Richards.

GOLDENDALE, WASH.

Land values in the Goldendale section reached a top-notch price in the purchase of a seven-acre tract just outside the city limits, known as the Woods tract, by Peter Nicholson, of Portland, Ore., an expert gardener and florist. Mr. Nicholson paid $500 an acre for the land. He will convert it into a garden tract and will also build a greenhouse, making a specialty of growing violets, as he believes that the sunshiny weather of the Klickitat valley will be just the thing for violets. In addition to gardening and flower culture, Mr. Nicholson will raise fancy chickens. The establishment of a greenhouse at Goldendale will supply a long-felt want in the community, as heretofore all greenhouse flowers have been obtained from Portland and The Dalles.

NURSERIES AT RIVERSIDE, CAL.

F. M. Borden, owner of the Borden Nurseries, at 370 West Eighth street, says he intends soon to engage in the work of propagating more extensively than heretofore and will enlarge his stock considerably. Mr. Borden has been in this city for twenty-two years and was formerly manager of the Jurupa Nurseries.

The Mission Nursery, on Seventh street, between Lime and Lemon streets, is one of the leading establishments of the kind in Riverside county. The business has greatly expanded under the skillful management of George Sawahata, who has owned the nursery for the last four years.

J. N. Zillman, proprietor of the Riverside Nurseries, at Seventh and Market streets, says the time is fast approaching when it will be necessary for him to enlarge his salesyards and he is already making plans with that end in view. The present yards are cramped for space and all available room is in use. Mr. Zillman has a lot and a half at Seventh and Market streets, with a nursery on North Orange street, where he grows deciduous fruits, and another nursery near Gage canal, where he has orange trees planted. He also carries a general nursery stock.

J. W. B. Merriman, of Tetley, Merriman & Childs, at the Citrus Nurseries, says it will soon be necessary to enlarge the grounds, in order to supply the demand for stock. The firm of Tetley, Merriman & Childs is located in attractive offices at 415 West Eighth street and the members of the company include Frank A. Tetley, A. E. Childs, Theo. Childs, J. W. B. Merriman and H. I. Merriman. The business has been

Mechanical Condition Important.

The most important thing in considering a soil, to my mind, is the mechanical condition. Is it too stiff or too light for your purpose? Has it enough humus or organic matter incorporated in it? The proportions of clay, loam and sand can be readily ascertained in a laboratory with a simple apparatus. The percentage of humus can also be ascertained by analysis. But a practical man can judge a soil closely by feeling it and observing how it works. Fortunately for the florist, he uses a comparatively small quantity of soil, measuring it by the load instead of the acre, and can afford to amend or ameliorate his soil and so change its mechanical condition as to suit his particular needs.

In all probability the greatest necessity will be humus. The cheapest way to add this is by plowing under a growing crop. Legumes are always preferable for green manuring, as it is called, because they increase the quantity of nitrogen in the soil, and nitrogen is the most expensive element of plant food we have to buy. It is well to lime the soil before sowing a crop to be turned under, as adding a large quantity of green material is apt to sour the soil for a little while; also, the legume family do better in a soil that contains lime. It seems to be necessary for the proper development of the bacteria which cause the nodules to appear on the roots of clover and the other legumes.

Soils Can Fix Plant Foods.

Soils, generally, have the power of fixing the plant food added to them. By fixing we mean holding the food in such a state that it cannot be washed out by the rain. This is true of phosphoric acid and potash, but nitrogen is easily lost by leaching in the form of nitrates and under certain conditions escaping into the air as free nitrogen. The best way to hold the nitrogen is to keep the fields filled with growing crops, catch crops, as they are called. These make use of the nitrogen and return it to the soil when plowed under. But it is only the clovers and others of that family that add more nitrogen than was originally in the soil. Clays hold the plant food more firmly than sandy soils, and the same is true of moisture. Humus also helps to hold the moisture by absorbing it in the same way a sponge does, while clay holds it by surrounding it as though it were in a cup.

Oxygen, or fresh air, is necessary to the soil to promote the growth of the innumerable bacteria that are always present in a fertile soil and to assist the chemical reactions that are continually going on. When the water in the soil evaporates or is used by the plant, air rushes in to take its place. When more water is added, air and any injurious gases which may have been formed are driven out and, when this water is gone, more fresh air is taken in. Also, fresh air is taken in to the soil at night. When the evening comes on, the soil cools and shrinks and air

BEHRE'S IMPROVED MODEL STEM-ER

Patent applied for.

A time-saver to the extent of lessening over 50% of the labor, together with the grace in which the leaves and flowers can be set by the firm hold the Stemmer has upon them, making them an article of perfection. They are now being used by leading designers.

This is what E. Woerz, of Enid, Okla., thinks of my Stemmer: "Please ship at once 5000 Stemmers; I am out and cannot get along without them. Yours truly, Eugene Woerz."

Prices: From 1000 to 5000 at 75c per 1000; 10,000 lots at 70c; 25,000 lots and over at 65c. At your dealer's or direct from the factory.

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

Write for prices on your requirements.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Everything is in readiness for Easter and all florists are looking forward to the best Easter trade they have ever had. There is an abundance of flowering plants and prices are about the same as last year on nearly everything. There is also a big supply of all kinds of cut flowers.

Roses of all kinds are in excellent condition; so are carnations, violets and bulbous stock. Sweet peas and pansies are arriving in greater quantities. Gardenias are quite scarce and bring a big price, but cattleyas are not as plentiful as they have been.

Florists' Banquet.

More than 100 florists and their wives were present at the annual banquet of the Rochester Florists' Association, held March 26 at Powers' hotel. The room was beautifully decorated with palms, and the tables were decked with daffodils. One of the speakers at the dinner was George S. McClure, president of the Buffalo Florists' Club. Mr. McClure delivered the keynote speech of the evening, pleading for a higher sense of civic duty among florists.

Music was furnished by the Fifty-fourth Regiment, which played behind a screen of palms. The committee that had charge of the banquet included F. W. Vick, George B. Hart, J. M. Keller, F. J. Schlegel and Colin B. Ogston.

The next meeting of the Florists' Association will be held April 8. John Dunbar will give a talk on "Fall Pruning."

Various Notes.

Mrs. Walter R. Siebrecht, of New York city, is visiting relatives in this city.

James Bishop is again at work after several weeks' sickness.

F. W. Vick has withdrawn from the firm of Vick & Hill, and is now in business for himself at 223 Flower City Park.

Miss B. Trenham and Miss C. Nellis are now working for H. E. Wilson.

Harry P. Neun's store window in North street is proving a big attraction downtown. The Easter display, executed by Felix Alberts, consists of a miniature park with lake, cascades and brooks, with spring settings of pussy willows, daffodils, shrubbery and a few

PROPAGATING EVERGREENS.

I should like to have some sugges-tions about the propagation of arbor-vitæ and other evergreens. J. L.

Thuja occidentalis, the common American arbor-vitæ, can be propa-gated by seeds, either sown in the spring in prepared beds outdoors, with lath protection, or in flats. It is also readily increased by cuttings of well ripened wood, which can be placed in beds, flats or pans of sandy loam in early fall, in either a coldframe or a cold greenhouse. The soil must never be allowed to get at all dry, and, of course, the cuttings require shading. Some forms of arbor-vitæ require to be increased by means of grafts in a cold greenhouse.

The retinosporas, such as obtusa, plumosa, plumosa aurea, pisifera, fili-

PROPAGATING EVERGREENS.

plants than can be secured by grafting. Buxus, or box, roots easily from cuttings. The variety sempervirens, used so much for edgings, can be pulled apart and planted in nursery rows quite deeply. If well watered and pounded hard after planting, the majority will root, unless extremely dry weather should prevail. The evergreen forms of ilex, or holly, are propagated by seeds, which should be stratified in sand over winter and sown in spring. Germination will not take place until the second season. Kalmias, or mountain laurels, are most easily raised from seeds sown in flats of sandy, peaty soil in a coldframe or greenhouse. Rhododendrons, while they can be raised from seeds, are commercially only increased by grafting. Euonymus radicans and E. Japonica, excellent as climbers or bush plants, are propagated most easily in summer in a shaded frame, from cuttings made the same season. Leucothoe Catesbaei can be propagated by cutting the wood in short lengths and placing these in flats of sandy soil in a cold greenhouse over winter.

The various pines, spruces and firs are, except in a few special cases, such as Picea pungens glauca and the variety Kosteriana, started from seeds sown outdoors and protected by lath coverings on the tops and sides. Wire netting is also used in many cases to exclude birds and animals, which would scratch up and eat many of the seeds. A light mulch of leaves over the seed beds helps to preserve the moisture, but it must be carefully removed as soon as the seeds germinate. C. W.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.A New Horticultural Society.

A general meeting of all those interested in horticulture was held in the Board of Trade rooms on Thursday, March 21, for the purpose of organizing a society to be known as the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society. James Duthie was appointed temporary chairman and J. T. Ingram temporary secretary.

After a general outline of the aims of the proposed society had been given by the chairman, the following officers were elected: President, James Duthie; vice-president, Joseph Robinson; treasurer, H. G. Vail; financial secretary, John Devine; secretary, J. T. Ingram.

An executive committee was chosen, as follows: William Eccles, Alfred Walker, Thomas Roberts, Alfred Lahodney, Floyd Blowers, Chester Painter and R. Raynor.

The following were elected as trustees: James Goldsmith, John Millar and Edward Grobel.

It was decided that the meeting nights be the third Friday of each month.

A committee on by-laws was appointed, as follows: John Thomson, J. Kyle, Duncan Beaton and Chester Painter.

Enrollment being in order, some eighty-two gentlemen placed their names on the roll as charter members, which promises well for the advancement of the young society.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

BALTIMORE.

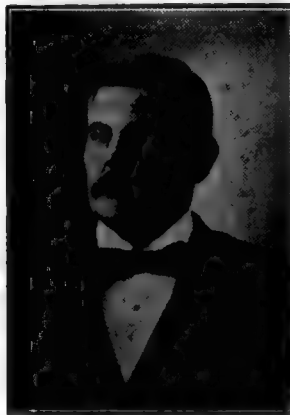

A petty swindler is working Baltimore and vicinity. Among the things he does is to collect an occasional subscription to The Review—of course he never sends them in. His victims are few, for practically all florists in Baltimore and vicinity are old subscribers and have read the frequent warnings not to pay money to strangers for The Review. They are not caught.

The subscription swindler usually hooks his victims by an offer of a premium with the paper. The Review gives no premiums and never did. When people will not buy a paper for itself they are not likely to read it when it comes with a "gift" and are pretty nearly valueless from the advertisers' point of view. When some easy-talking stranger offers a book of any kind, a knife, or any other premium to those who will subscribe to The Review, know thereby that he is a swindler and call the police. Tell your neighbors in the trade.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its regular meeting and smoker March 26. The prize offered by President Wittlinger was awarded to John Heeremans, for a vase of gardenias, and honorable mention to W. Jamieson, for cinerarias. C. Barson, Ossining, N. Y., placed on exhibition a vase of handsome pink seedling carnations, which was awarded a certificate of merit. W. Scott, R. Grieve and J. Mooney acted as judges. W. Gomersall read an instructive essay on "Soil and Fertility" and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. After the business session had been disposed of, the balance of the evening was devoted to entertaining the members of the neighboring societies, of whom quite a number were present. The social was thoroughly enjoyed, the refreshments, songs and violin selections being heartily appreciated.

The Market.

The crisis is passed, and the great glut which existed three weeks ago is no more. There is still a good supply of all kinds of stock, but most of it is being disposed of in some way, and the loss is only a fraction of what it was. Special sales of carnations on Saturdays have made an outlet for an abundance of stock, and, although the price was comparatively low, it saved paying for hauling the flowers to the dump.

American Beauties are scarce in all grades, but noticeably in the medium lengths. There are a few more tea roses than are absolutely necessary.

Whether this year's Easter business will be as good as in previous years is the prevailing question. For about two months everything has been exceedingly dull with most of the retailers, and they are depending almost entirely on their Easter trade to straighten up the bills that have accumulated since Christmas.

Various Notes.

The Elitch-Long Greenhouses are supplying the cut flowers and plants used in the store at Fifteenth and Arapahoe streets, which opened three weeks ago.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary B. Gillis, mother of B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co., took place March 21. Mrs. Gillis was in her eighty-first year, and was loved by all who knew her. The sympathy of the trade is tendered Mr. Gillis.

Theodore Loken has become a partner of Thos. McDonald, and they will together operate the flower store at Fifteenth and Cheyenne streets, where they expect to do a large plant business this spring.

The Elitch-Long Greenhouses held their annual exhibition of Easter plants in the theater at Elitch's Gardens on Palm Sunday. Cards were sent by mail inviting the recipient to meet the "Misses Easter Lily, Hydrangea, Azalea, Spirea, Tulip, Hyacinth, Daffodil, Lily of the Valley, and other spring debutantes."

Visitors: L. J. Reid, Fort Morgan; S. Knudsen, Boulder; D. R. Gwillim, Victor, Colo., and C. H. Garwood, Cheyenne, Wyo.

DAVENPORT, IA.

That florists should wear a boutonniere of any flower from a carnation to an orchid as a boost for trade and a badge of the profession was the recommendation made by President P. J. Foley, of the Chicago Florists' Club, at the annual banquet of the Tri-City Florists' Association, held in the Outing Club March 28.

Following a sumptuous repast the speaking program commenced, President Theodore Ewoldt officiating as toastmaster. President Foley, who told of several ways in which the profession might be advertised; J. C. Vaughan, who complimented the local association on the harmony prevailing among the members; Michael Barker, who told of the activities of the florists' publications in promoting greater harmony among flower growers, and Wesley Green, of Des Moines, formerly of Davenport, and one of the oldest florists in the state, were the speakers from outside of the Tri-Cities. J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, one of the speakers expected, was unable to be present. J. W. Davis, John T. Temple and President Ewoldt were among the local speakers.

The floral decorations were among the most elaborate and beautiful seen here in many years, all of the members of the association sending donations of their best flowers and many floral firms outside of the Tri-Cities having exhibits. The tables, at which covers were laid for over fifty, were arranged in the form of a horseshoe and so crowded with flowers that there was scarcely room for the service. Noteworthy among the exhibits of outside florists was that of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, who displayed St. Nicholas carnation.

Following the banquet and the speaking, dancing was enjoyed.

Schnectady, N. Y.—J. E. Felthousen, a prominent grower of bedding stock, will have his usual extensive stock in fine shape for spring. E. V. B. Felthousen is a large grower of lilies and reports an unusually clean stock for Easter trade.

WHEN IN PHILADELPHIA Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

Our Palm sales increased over 44% during the year 1911, over the sales during the previous year. We are strong on the following sizes:

CAMPANULA MEDIUM.

Can you tell me if Campanula Medium will bloom this year? I have a lot of plants with eight or ten leaves on them. They were planted late last autumn and have been kept so cold they have not grown any. Would they bloom if planted in the greenhouse after the violets are taken out?

J. A. L.

If Campanula Medium, or Canterbury bells, as they are popularly called, were not sown until last fall they will be too small and weak to flower this year. In order to secure sufficiently strong plants for flowering the succeeding year, seed should be sown not later than May, and April would be better. Start the seeds now in a flat and prick off in other flats, later planting the seedlings out a foot apart in nursery rows, lifting them in October.

C. W.

SPLIT LILIES.

Will you please tell us the cause of our Easter lilies splitting? M. & C.

Sudden drops in temperature, such as moving the plants from a temperature of 65 degrees to one of 45 degrees, are liable to cause splitting. Excessive feeding will also cause more flowers to come split. If you keep your plants from the start at as even a temperature as possible, water carefully, feed moderately and gradually lower the temperature for the plants as they start to open, there should be few or no split flowers.

Greenhouse Heating.

COAL mining is largely suspended for the present. An agreement has been made between the western operators of soft coal mines and their men which, if approved by the vote of the unions, will cause an early resumption of work. In the eastern anthracite fields there is no prospect of a settlement.

GREENHOUSE AND RESIDENCE.

Kindly advise me how to heat a greenhouse, 17x40 feet, six feet to the eaves, with three feet of glass, and eleven feet to the ridge. The house runs east and west. The temperature required will be 50 degrees at night and 65 degrees in the daytime, in zero weather. There will be three benches. How many pipes should there be, and of what size? Should they be under the benches or above? I expect to grow carnations and bedding plants. I also expect to heat my dwelling, which is connected with the northeast corner of the greenhouse and stands at the north side of it. The dwelling has about 225 feet of radiation. What size of boiler will be needed to heat both? I expect to use the Ideal boiler. My location is northwestern Ohio. E. L.

For heating a carnation house, 17x40 feet, having three feet of glass in the side walls, with hot water, it will be well to use three 2-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns. One flow could be upon each of the plates and the other under the ridge. The returns should be in three coils of three pipes each, one of which should be under each of the benches. The boiler for heating the greenhouse and dwelling should have a rating of 650 to 700 square feet.

THE WATER BOILS OVER.

Will you kindly inform me where the trouble lies in my heating system? I have not been able to maintain much more than 40 degrees at night during the cold spell we have had, when the outside temperature sometimes went down to 20 degrees below zero. The boiler and piping would indicate that it might be possible for me to obtain plenty of heat, except for this one thing: Just as soon as I put on extra draft and fire more heavily, the system boils over. I usually check the draft in the chimney pipe and also raise the check in the furnace, leaving the front draft open as far as I dare, but in spite of this it boils over frequently. It would seem to me that, by using the above method of draft, I might get a better temperature, but I am afraid to leave the front draft open.

Gentlemen: In reply to yours of the 4th inst., will say that your No. 4 boiler has given entire satisfaction. I consider this boiler a great improvement over the other style boilers in my place, of which I have two. For quick results it has them all beat. I have never been so well satisfied with any change I have made as I have been with the change from the other style boiler to the Superior. Anyone wanting to see this boiler can see it working on my place, and I will only be too glad to show them.

My house is 20 x 29, with a 3-foot double-boarded wall. The roof is glazed with butted glass and the rafters go down to the plate on the wall. There is no glass in the sides. I want a greenhouse temperature of 55 degrees at night. J. O. S.

The letter and diagram show the arrangements quite clearly except in one particular—the relative elevation of the boiler and the returns—and that is where the trouble most likely lies. The diagram shows a 2½-inch main which runs with a slight upward pitch to the farther end of the house, where it branches and supplies two coils of five 1½-inch pipes running along the end and sides of the house back to the boiler. The boiler has a 20-inch grate and is evidently able to heat the house readily, and there is no reason apparent for the trouble mentioned unless the returns are below the top of the heater.

It would be better, however, if the flow were given a slight fall and the expansion tank were connected with the highest part of the flow, instead of with the return, as seems to be the case from the diagram. If the returns are much below the top of the heater, this would not do away entirely with the difficulty, although it would lessen it to some extent. Aside from raising the boiler end of the flow pipe so that it will have a slight fall, it will be necessary to lower the boiler so that it will be as low as, or lower than, the lower part of the returns.

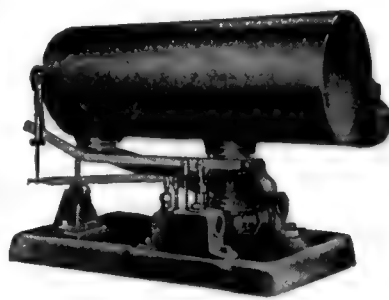

Instead of lowering the boiler, the same effect could be obtained by placing a mercury generator on the expansion pipe.

STEAM FOR THREE HOUSES.

Kindly give me a few hints about the heating system that I am going to install. I have three connected houses, each 27 x 200. The boiler pit is eight feet deep and is at the center of the houses, on the north side. I shall use two No. 36, 8-section Ideal steam boilers. My heating engineer advises me to place the main supply pipe in the same way as the return, in a trench in the ground. Would this method give me perfect circulation in the system? I should not like to have a steam trap attached to it. What would you advise? I am located near Brooklyn, N. Y. C. T.

While the data furnished are not sufficiently definite to warrant anything but general suggestions, no good reason is apparent for not following the advice of the engineer. The main supply pipe may be carried in a trench directly across the three houses. From this two or more supply pipes for each of the houses may be taken off and connected with the coils. Most of these should be upon the walls, but, if benches are used, it is generally advisable to have at least two 1¼-inch pipes under each of them. The coils can be carried to the farther end of each of the houses, with a slope of about one inch in ten feet, and can there be connected with the returns. One return can be used for each house, or all of the coils in the three houses may be connected to a common return.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Alderman W. E. F. Weber, proprietor of the Soo Greenhouses, is planning to make extensive improvements as soon as the weather will permit this spring. He will build a large addition to his present plant, extending the greenhouses west to the street, thus giving him 5,000 feet of glass in addition to the 8,000 feet that he now has in commission.

Greenhouse Heating Systems and

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS work well together

It costs no more to have free and clear steam lines and an efficient heating system than to have sluggish lines and an inefficient heating system.

It's useless to expect good results when trying to put steam through coils that are half full of condensation.

"Detroit" Return Traps not only keep lines clear of water but automatically return it directly to the boiler at practically the same temperature at which it is condensed.

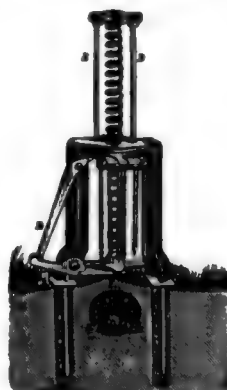

Once installed, "Detroit" Return Traps are always on the job.

To Make Quick-Growing Plants Grow Quicker; and Slow—Faster

USE BON ARBOR

It is a complete plant food. Feed your plants; get results; do it now. Bon Arbor is favorably known everywhere it is used and it is widely used. Such gardens as those of the Capitol at Washington, D. C., and the Parliament Gardens, Ottawa, Canada, and the Royal Windsor Gardens, England, on the one side, and over 2000 country estates and farms on the other, represent the field supplied. Show flower and vegetable growers find Bon Arbor indispensable.

Bon Arbor is put up as follows:

1/2-pound package, making 15 gallons, by mail.....$0.30
1-pound package, making 30 gallons, by mail......55
5-pound package, making 150 gallons, exp. extra 1.80

Prices on quantities of 50 pounds and upwards on application. Ask your dealer or write direct.

Treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

Price, $5.00, prepaid by express or mail.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., 508 So. Dearborn St. CHICAGO

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The month that has just closed, while apparently an unsatisfactory month because of Lent, was, as a whole, quite good. The supply during the entire month was so large that it kept the market crowded a large part of the time; still, the aggregate sales made the month's business at least as good as in the same month of other years when Easter came in April.

The indications point to a good supply of nearly everything for Easter. The quality all along the line, too, is good. In potted stock, hydrangeas alone promise to be short in supply, because some large local growers failed to make Easter. Plenty of potted lilies, spiræas and potted roses will make up for this scarcity in hydrangeas. The cut flower market, unless reports and anticipations are wrong, will be well supplied with almost every desirable flower. In fact, prospects for Easter supply are uniformly the best we have had for a time for this big day. Bulb stock will naturally be in special demand and the offerings will be adequate. The lilies are fine and abundant. The same is true of small bulb stock. Roses of all kinds are in good supply. A good crop of choice American Beauties is being cut for this market. The long ones are of good quality; the shorter ones are short in supply and short as far as quality is concerned. The sweet pea, lily of the valley and violet offerings are large.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at the club rooms on Monday, April 8, at 8 p. m. The flower show executive committee will offer a complete report of the show. At their last meeting at E. G. Gillett's, they voted William Murphy $50 as a slight recognition of his splendid services as superintendent of the show last fall.

C. E. Critchell was exceedingly busy at the close of last week and the early part of this week, shipping green goods and moss to various points within reach of the market.

That conscientiousness in details of work always pays is being well shown by the present experience of E. G. Gillett. Mr. Gillett's men tie their wire hanging baskets with galvanized wire, which will not corrode. He is selling these so fast that his men have a hard time to keep up with the orders.

The current issue of Möller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung contains a photo of Peterson's Begonia Glory of Cincinnati as grown by Clemens Mecher at Koswig, Germany.

Charles Dudley, of J. W. Dudley & Sons, at Parkersburg, W. Va., while in the city for a few days last week, sold a large lot of hydrangeas to various retailers.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co. has been sending large cuts of fine Killarney and Richmond to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

Gus Adrian had a fine lot of rambler roses, spiræas and white lilac that came in just right for Easter.

Among the week's callers were Miss White, of Lexington, Ky., who placed her Easter orders; Simon J. Hider, of Hillsboro, and Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York. C. H. H.

Patterson Filter Press.

This is the fifth article of a series describing machines used in our factory that are necessary to the production of all high-grade pottery.

We here show our Filter Press. It is a long iron frame, through which extends a horizontal rod that carries the circular frames on which the filter sacks hang. The soft clay is pumped through a tube into these sacks, and by heavy pump pressure the water is separated from the solid part, which is then removed in soft, smooth cakes, perfectly free from all foreign matter, and is ready for the last process, which will be given here later.

A fine illustrated description of the full scheme will be sent you on request.

Snow still covers the ground, and the dreariest of winters, shows little disposition to give way gracefully to a spring-like Easter—at present, anyhow.

Richard Jennings will hardly be able to notice Easter, as his carnations have received so severe a cutting during the last three months. His sweet peas and marguerites are in evidence, however, and will doubtless meet with a ready sale.

Walter Calvert is getting ready for bedding out, and is much gratified with the season's turnover so far.

Mark Henderson is growing some fine sweet peas and lettuce, and intends enlarging his premises this year.

William Fendley is selling large quantities of violets.

A magnificent house of Cattleya Schroederæ is the chief attraction at the Dale Estate Greenhouses this week; it is, without exception, the finest display ever seen in the orchid section. Special lines of ferns moved out as soon as they were listed, anything good selling almost at sight in this country today. Easter lilies have turned up trumps, after all, and are proving considerably better, both in quantity and quality, than anticipated. A cut of 60,000 violets per day is quite a common occurrence, and a ready market awaits this stock at 50 cents and 60 cents per hundred. The first carload of redwood rafters has just arrived from California, to be used in the erection of three new houses for the Dale Estate. The houses will be each 840 feet long, and should be well advanced toward completion by the end of June. The huge cold storage premises for this firm were finished last week, after nearly five months had been spent in the work of construction.

W. G. P.

Kansas City, Mo.—T. Normann, gardener for Mrs. A. R. Meyer, reports that Mrs. Meyer has ordered from the John C. Moninger Co. the materials for two iron-frame greenhouses, one of them 22x70 and the other 34x60. Under the latter house there will be a reinforced waterproof basement. The old houses will be torn down.

PROSPEROUS FLORISTS

frequently owe their prosperity to foresight in making use of up-to-date appliances for saving expense, labor, time, etc., and at the same time increasing efficiency and results.

You know that a constant, steady water supply is necessary if you want the best possible crops, whether in the field or under glass. We recognized this need years ago, and to meet it properly we developed

STANDARD PUMPING ENGINES.

They are fully guaranteed. If in any way unsatisfactory they may be returned at our expense and purchase price will be refunded.

Works Like Rain

And Works Almost as Automatically

The Skinner System of Irrigation is the last word in watering.

The area one man can water is limited only by the extent of the installation. All you have to do is to turn on the water and go about your other work. Every fifteen or twenty minutes come back and, by means of the Skinner Turning Device, throw the entire system over to the other side.

This permits you to water twenty minutes, leave to soak in for twenty minutes, then water again—the most successful method known to scientific gardening.

And with the Skinner System the water descends in a mist form that cannot bruise the tenderest foliage nor cake the ground.

Write today for these six books. Whether you are a florist or a gardener, these books will show you where you can have a dependable water supply at low cost—one that will eliminate all loss through drought, keep down insects and yield you double crops. Write today to

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

Marshall, Tex.—Marshall has secured the Rainbow Floral Co., which will invest $7,500. It will erect greenhouses at the corner of Border street and Elysian Fields avenue and will have 12,240 feet under glass. G. W. Witherspoon will be the manager.

Bluffton, Ind.—Myers & Co. are planning to rebuild their east range of houses. There are three of these 17x121, and one 7x121. These have been used for chrysanthemums and general stock. The plan is to rebuild, making four short-span houses, each 13x121, with two 5-foot concrete benches, planting to carnations for next season. They expect a big call for vegetable plants this spring, as growers cannot get onto the frozen ground to plant their seeds at the usual date.

The Toledo Plate & Window Glass Co.
TOLEDO, OHIO

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

March proved quite a satisfactory month, considering the lenten season. The wholesalers were at no time short of anything and probably the average price obtained for stock will compare favorably with other seasons, notwithstanding the number of complaints.

The retailers report that the month was satisfactory with them and, had we not experienced so much disagreeable weather, it would have been much better; there were a number of funerals during the month, which made an unusual demand for stock.

Palm Sunday did not make any special demand for flowers, although Saturday cleaned up well and at this time Easter prospects look good.

Various Notes.

The McCallum Co. will move after Easter from the Liberty avenue location to Seventh street, where there is more room and convenience for handling the business.

Randolph & McClements have one house of azaleas and two houses of lilies which they expect to clean up in their retail trade during Easter week.

Alfred McCoy, the Arcade florist, who has been away most of the winter for his health, expects to be back to take care of his Easter trade.

Some of the visitors last week were: Harry Balsley, Detroit; John Walker, Youngstown, O.; F. M. Ruppert, Cumberland, Md. Hoo-Hoo.

MAYWOOD, ILL.

Charles Cassier, who has been in the growing business here for the last two years, has a nice lot of bedding plants started for the Memorial day rush. He reports hard luck with sweet peas during the winter and will probably grow potted plants entirely.

The Felsch Bros. Co., at Tenth avenue and Madison street, has put a new addition of 3,000 square feet into service and is growing a lot of bedding plants in it. The rest of the range is used for carnations, sweet peas and roses, with the exception of one house, which is filled with some fine Easter lilies that will be ready for the Easter market.

STANDARD VENTILATING MACHINERY

The original machine with self-oiling cups. The old reliable, the most powerful and least complicated of any on the market.

The Standard Return Steam Trap

It has no equal for simplicity or its working. Ask some one who is using a Standard for his opinion of it.

PATENT IRON GUTTER

One of the features of this gutter is that it can be put up in wrought iron, any lengths (without boring holes), by bolting the gutter together and screwing clip to the roof-bars for any size glass.

The above is only one of the many latest and up-to-date materials we have. Get our prices on Greenhouse Louisiana Cypress material, heating, ventilating, bench materials, hotbed sash, etc.

10 for 8.50

25 for 21.00

They are 19 1/2 x 20 1/2 inches.

Made of cypress and painted one coat.

No nails used in corners—bolted together with cast iron corner cleats. Materials alone cost more than we ask for them all complete. We make them up by the thousands, that's why the prices are 'way down where they are.

Your order can be shipped at once—so order at once, because freights are slow. If in a special hurry, better have them expressed. The express rate is comparatively low because the frames are shipped knocked down, and the sash thoroughly crated.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

NOVELTIES.

The Purpose They Serve.

A novelty—something new. But the term has been so long used to describe articles a little out of the common that novelties may mean some old plant or flower that has not been seen for a long time, or a new way of arranging or showing some common species. These have been so long known in the trade as novelties that the meaning of the term is quite understood.

The shrewd business man in any line knows that in order to maintain the interest of his best patrons, something out of the ordinary must continually be thought out and displayed. These things are not always artistic or in the best of taste, but they serve the purpose of transferring cash from the pockets or bank accounts of the wealthy to those of the retail florists. An instance of this was the craze a year or two ago for violet and other boxes made up to imitate millinery. These were a real success financially, but no one could say that they were either artistic or useful.

Artistic Receptacles.

This, however, cannot be urged against some of the pretty ware and other things now handled by up-to-date retailers. Some of the designs for table decorations are so choice and good that, long after the flowers or plants used have decayed, the china or other ware in which they were displayed is cherished by the fortunate owners. Quite recently a lady customer brought a fern dish of pure white china, of a lattice pattern, into a store and insisted on waiting while it was filled, as it had been presented to her by a friend, and she thought so much of it that it could not be entrusted to a servant or even left at the store.

It is this attraction to beautiful objects of art that enables a florist to lay in a stock costing sometimes thousands of dollars without any fear, for he knows that his best customers will appreciate his efforts in this direction. A skillful arrangement of flowers or ferns, in choice pieces of ware, stood on or near the customers' desk in the store, often leads to sales by silent suggestion. The customer thinks of a place in his or her home that would be beautified by just such an arrangement, and often purchases it without any pushing by the salesman.

Opportunities for Originality.

Then there are pretty and more or less useful things, not of a costly nature, but attractive. During the visit of a famous singer to a southern city, one retailer either copied or conceived the idea of lily of the valley fans. These were shown in the window, with the name of the singer and dates of the concerts prominently displayed. Quite a number were sold, as the novelty of the thing appealed to many people. In every city there are frequent happenings of a public character—inaugurations, receptions to public men, race or aviation meetings or even the ubiquitous ball game. Most of these give the wide-awake florist a chance to display originality in ideas, which, if not always immediately profitable, at least make the store talked about and constitute the best kind of advertising.

Novelty, in short, is spice to trade, and the retailer who can use his gray matter and introduce something of a novel nature on all possible occasions will, in almost every instance, score over the man without ideas who trails along at the end of the procession.

A GOOD CASKET COVER.

The illustration herewith shows a handsome casket cover carried out in white and pink roses, orchids, Easter lilies and valley by the Hayward Floral Co., of Los Angeles, Cal. Bert Bateman, the talented designer for this progressive firm, is responsible for this fine piece of work, which was much admired by all who saw it. While the photograph hardly did justice to it, yet enough is shown to indicate the high class of artistic work.

EASTER NOTES.

Ideal spring weather almost everywhere brought out the biggest crowds on record—but practically all of the Easter business was done in three days.

Cut flowers are coming back toward the center of the stage now that the prices stand somewhere near normal. Perhaps in another year or two the retailers will devote their energies equally to pushing plants and cut flowers.

Some of the best stores in the middle west decline to handle violets at Easter even when it is as early as this year, or recommend that sweet peas be taken instead.

Not so many azaleas this year, and not such big ones, but more and better roses.

Prices were lower than usual, at retail, in many of the stores that cater to the wealthy trade. Plants were sold cheaper. With prices for cut flowers being cut in the daily newspaper advertising of the last few weeks, the old-time prices for plants looked a little too steep.

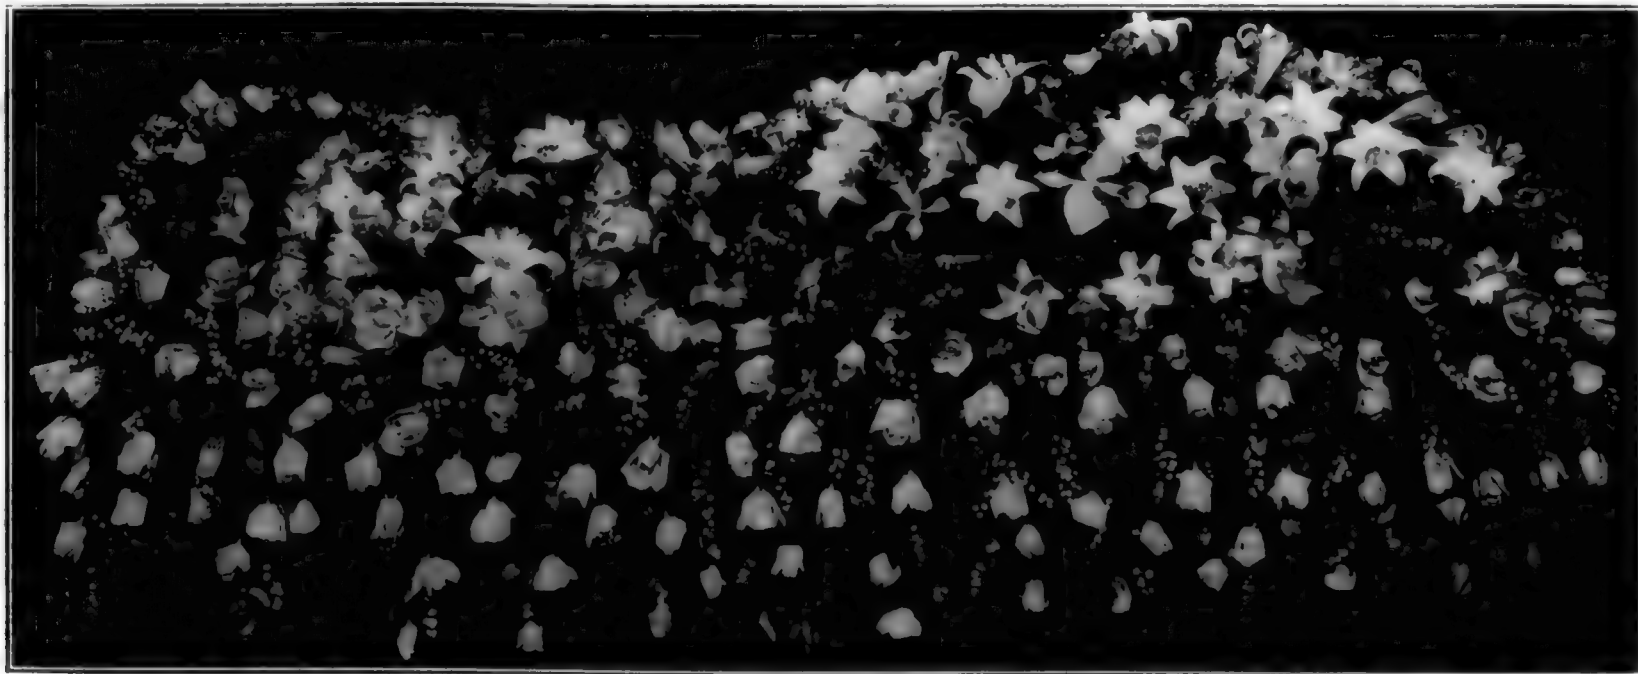

E. Wienhoeber, Chicago, says La Lorraine, pink, and Avalanche, white, will put the Otaksa hydrangea out of business as a pot plant for retail store sales.

The Mrs. Cutbush rose is no good as an Easter pot plant.

Fashion's florists used satin taffeta ribbons this season.

A retailer was heard to tell a customer that Rhea Reid roses, cut, open poorly, and a moment later to commend Mrs. Ward for the way it develops in water.

Of the Easter pot plants none were finer than the Hiawatha roses, but some of the most beautifully flowered specimens were American Pillar.

The retailers no longer order their Easter cut flowers a month in advance, or even a week in advance. They wait to see how the weather turns and the demand develops. They wire for stock. There were few disappointments this year.

An Easter corsage bouquet was made of buds of Mrs. Aaron Ward rose with white crocuses in front and below, backed with Mexican ivy and tied with white ribbon. The effect was excellent.

Of course every store that makes any pretensions whatever put at least a crepe paper cover on every pot, but in the high class stores there was a notable moderation in the embellishment of the plants. While the use of baskets, jardinières, pot covers and ribbons was more general than ever before, the decoration of the individual plants was not carried to the excess of other years.

HARRINGTON'S AUTO.

The H. Harrington concern, which was established in 1892 and incorporated in 1901, now has two stores in Seattle, with 250,000 feet of glass on Vashon island. Recently the Flanders 20, of the Studebaker line of automobiles, as shown in the accompanying illustration, was put on the street. The members of the staff say it is giving excellent service, taking care of the deliveries from both stores.

corn, in a small way, and expect to advance the time of ripening without sacrificing any other good qualities.

We may think that gladioli are in enormous demand at present, but in five years we shall sell millions where we sell thousands now, only the quality must be enhanced and much of the commonplace rubbish being sent out to-day must be eliminated. We are not "assuming," but can easily prove our claims.

A word about wilting before packing: Peonies have been left all day and night in the fields, so that they looked scalded when discovered the next morning. By cutting off a little of the ends and putting the stems in water they were packed with the day's cut, and in the evening no one could detect that they had undergone such an ordeal. In the case of many plants, a few moments of lying in the air to wilt increases their ability to absorb water. This, of course, should be done with care.

DRY ROT.

I am sending you a few America gladiolus bulbs that appear to be diseased. Please tell me what it is called and what to do about it. Would you advise planting the bulbs that are affected or would it be necessary to destroy them? What effect will it have on the flowers? I have separated all the good bulbs from the bad ones. None of the bulbs has flowered more than two years and all are field grown. Any information you can give me on the subject I shall be thankful for.

W. J. P.

The gladiolus corms are infected with the fungus commonly known as dry rot. The investigation of gladiolus diseases has not progressed far enough for us to say what the specific organism is that causes this trouble. Therefore it is impossible as yet to offer suggestions of value concerning treatment. When possible, it would be the safer course to abandon the culture of susceptible varieties, but if this cannot be done, would suggest that the diseased bulbs be sorted out and destroyed. Planting the clean stock on new land is advised. There is no solution into which you can dip the corms which would prove effective, because the fungus is too deep-seated for this. Small lots of valuable bulbs may have the spots cut out and

NOTES ON GLADIOLI

IDEALS IN GLADIOLI.

In The Review of March 28, page 40, Brother Meader expresses his amazement at my ideal gladioli, seven feet or so in height, and he thinks my 7-foot plants would require extraordinary root systems in order to withstand the Ohio winds. Yes, the breezes blow sweepingly in Ohio, so that it is necessary to have unusually well defined anchorage in the root systems of our gladioli.

When each hybridist will sum up the demands and needs of the various agencies using gladioli, we shall approach nearer to a common viewpoint as to what our ideals should include; then will our ideals largely coincide. We have a number of ideals, each for a specific purpose. For a strictly garden purpose we should want a dwarfier plant, with only a few blooms open at a time and lasting a long time in bloom, but for a cut flower and for massing purposes the ideal which I mentioned, and about which Brother Meader becomes quite humorous, is what will be shown by us in the not distant future.

Suppose a florist wants a lot of gladioli for decoration in a large room, church or hall, why should not a vase of gladioli with 4-foot or 5-foot stems, broad foliage and enormous flowers, make glad both the decorator and the employing party? By no means are these abnormal, but they are built up systematically, with a large number of characters, instead of only the few which Mendel contemplated. Besides, one must not forget that Mendelism is for one thing, which can be and is superseded. Was not my ideal thoroughly harmonious, well balanced, rightly rounded?

Replying to Mr. Meader's question, a majority of our present hybrids of Primulinus are nicely opened to catch those "boisterous breezes," to test their wings and anchorage. They embrace qualities of all types, but are mostly clear yellows, with little or no markings, while some have nice lines or blotches. The results are absolutely in the hands of the hybridist; he alone must shape the future of his pets. Few hybridists have been getting the results that they should, because they have not observed their work carefully and critically. In a few years the question of breeding will be revolutionized. Roses and carnations that we consider today phenomenal will not be so considered. I realize that I tread on dangerous ground when I say this, but I am ready to prove my statements.

I have done some work on other subjects to prove my deductions, notably with the hemerocallis. These results have been even more pronounced than with the gladiolus, showing many much larger flowers than the best sorts, such as Florham, aureola and aurantiaca major, with much more vigorous growth and more freedom in flowering. Some blooms measure eight inches in diameter. There are richest goldens, golden orange, bronzes, tawns and pale lemon white, some richly tinted with pink and red, showing that soon we shall have them in all colors. Alongside of these hybrids, the older sorts and types are commonplace. I shall next add to my work cereals, especially treated with a five per cent formaline solution for thirty minutes. Experimental work on measures of control will be carried on this summer by the Department of Pathology of Cornell University and it is hoped that there may be some definite information to give the growers this fall.

INTEREST IN ADVERTISING.

That the advertising in a trade publication has interest for the subscribers scarcely second to the interest in the text pages has for some years been recognized. In fact, since advertising in trade journals developed above the business-card stage the advertising pages have been gone over with the same care as the text pages by all who want to keep in touch with the progress of the trade the journal represents. Hence it has come about that the trade paper carrying the largest volume of advertising has found that advertising, far from being a matter of indifference to its readers, is a positive and potent factor in maintaining and increasing its subscription list.

Take the case of The Review as an example. Its value to its readers, and to its advertisers, has been steadily strengthened by the fact of the increase in the advertising patronage. Practically all the offers are in its pages, so why look elsewhere? Probably few have stopped to reason it out, but the fact long has been apparent that the extent of the advertising patronage has been one of the strongest reasons why The Review has brought such excellent returns to its advertisers. Evidence has accumulated proving that no matter how much other trade literature the florist may have on his desk—publications, catalogues, price-lists—when he is in need of stock he looks for it in the last copy of The Review. Why? It is as plain as can be: Because the offers practically ALL are there—the most offers, the best offers, the freshest offers—the widest selection. It's like the stranger who wants a cigar. He doesn't buy it at the little shop that has only two or three brands in the case; of course not; he buys at the big store on the corner, where there is a long case full of all sorts and sizes and kinds, and where they sell more of EACH brand every day than the other shop sells all told of its few.

That's the way advertising works.

There's almost always something worth seeing when one follows the crowd.

All of which merely is preliminary to saying that the Chicago Tribune recently has discovered that the fact that it carries more advertising than any other Chicago paper is a strong card both with the public and the advertisers. Not content with the natural growth of appreciation of this point of strength, The Tribune has undertaken a campaign of advertising its advertising. In other words, it is showing up, in figures, how much greater is the range of choice of those who read Tribune advertising than of those who read the advertising in any other paper. Taking trade by trade, The Tribune is printing the figures.

Reproduced herewith is the advertisement recently published to show how much The Tribune leads in advertising carried for florists. Incidentally a line is given on how much advertising was

Pick Your Flowers with Care

We all need flowers in our lives. They take us out of the roar and strife of city life into fragrant by-paths and untrodden ways, bringing sunshine and glory into every day. Flowers will not only perfume every incident of your life and make it an occasion, but you can buy more of these blossoms of subtle scent and exquisite coloring if you read the advertisements in The Tribune closely and constantly.

To buy flowers to the best advantage, you should read the advertisements in The Tribune, because The Tribune prints far more florist advertisements than any other Chicago newspaper. Every day in either the display or classified columns it carries the message to you of enterprising florists who offer the best flowers at the lowest prices consistent with quality, and it is only by reading The Tribune that you will see all these opportunities whenever they appear. Whether it is flowers or shoes, you can purchase anything most economically through advertisements in The Tribune:

The unmistakable evidence in support of these facts may be seen by a glance at the following florist advertisers in The Tribune:

Alpha Floral Co.	Lubliner & Trina	Schiller, the Florist
Briggs House Florist	Meredith's	Charles Schneider
H. N. Bruns	Nellie C. Moore	Stallery Bros.
Conger & Gormley	Muir	Vaughan's Seed Store
Fleischman	Harry C. Rowe	Wolland's
Franzen, the Florist	Samuelson	Geo. Wittbold Co.
A. Lange		Winterborn Seed Co.

The Tribune is the right newspaper for every Chicago florist because the experiences of other florists, who know the buying power of The Tribune readers, have made the choice simple and positive. The following is the official record of florists' display advertising printed in the Chicago papers in the year 1911:

TRIBUNE.....	38,268 lines
Next paper	6,040 lines
Third paper	4,923 lines
Fourth paper	4,983 lines
Fifth paper	4,297 lines
Sixth paper	1,985 lines
Seventh paper	779 lines
Eighth paper	643 lines

done in 1911 by the retail florists who used display space in the daily papers. The figures are surprising. Here they are:

That is a remarkable showing. It indicates that the few retailers who used newspaper space spent in the aggregate at least $20,000 in adding to the number of flower buyers and increasing the consumption of flowers.

BERMUDA LILY BUDS.

The Bermuda bulb growers do not, as a rule, cut their lily buds to ship to the Easter flower buyers and the imports of the buds have fallen much below what they were a few years ago, being confined to shipments from the smaller and least careful growers. Few of the shipments go into the trade—practically all go direct to the public on orders booked by the customs brokers. The imports this year were only 790 cases, consigned as follows:

moved slowly indeed. That, gentlemen, is educating the public in the best possible manner and the results come back to us all who are growers of plants and flowers, for a discriminating flower buyer is the best possible customer and often becomes so much of a crank on the subject as to be able to give us commercial men many a lesson in roses.

Growers Full of Hope.

Men who plant seeds and who work the soil are hopeful men. Their enthusiasm is somewhat in keeping with the man who sets a hen and counts his chickens before they are hatched. This, I believe, is a factor in the growth of the flower industry in this country and in the world. There is a feeling of satisfaction which comes with the construction of a new house and the planting of a crop, and that feeling is general with the florists of the country. They are building, and this year, in spite of the fact that business as a whole has been unsettled and in many branches of industry extremely dull. As a rule a greenhouse man counts his profits by counting his glass area. A little more glass than last year is the general report so far as profit and loss statements go. I believe there are less failures among greenhouse men than in any other line of business, in spite of the fact that practically everything which is handled is of a perishable nature. What does that prove? First, that they are honest, for honesty is of the soil, and they are toilers who live from the products of the soil, and, second, that they are hopeful and not easily discouraged, and, last and more than all, that the public wants and is willing to buy what has been produced by the sweat from the brows of honest men.

Essentials in Rose Growing.

Rose growing and the rose business is at least sixty per cent of the total flower business of the country, which fact places roses as a matter of first importance and consideration, and I might venture to say that at least two-thirds of this is the product of roses grown under glass. Now let us for a moment consider the proper conditions which give us the best roses under glass. I want to name a few conditions which I consider ideal, and first of all I should place soil: A heavy turf from lowlands that have been saving up the silt and richness from the hillsides for centuries; one that has an abundance of root fiber in it, and one that has not been composted so long that it has lost that fiber which gives it life. It should have a clay body, for roses delight in a clay soil, but it should be porous enough to admit water and air freely. Air in soil is essential. The largest root is the root in the ashes on which plants in pots have been standing for some time, and air which encourages root action is the only plausible explanation of this fact which I have ever heard. Cow manure for roses is the best fertilizer which we know of, and in many soils a bone tankage running from four to five per cent nitrogen and not necessarily high in phosphoric acid will give strength and vitality to the plants. Good stock to start with is needed and the best is none too good. Consider that roses are often kept in the houses for two or three years and the proportionate cost of good above poor stock is too trifling to mention.

Steam heat is essential to roses and, although I know some growers make a

ROSES AND ROSE GROWING.

[A paper by Wallace R. Pierson, read before the Baltimore Florists' and Gardeners' Club April 8, 1912.]

I am reminded of the fact that I have crossed the Mason and Dixon line in coming to Baltimore to speak to you this evening, and that fact has a great deal of significance to me. In the north an invitation may be one prompted by courtesy pure and simple, but in the south an invitation is extended because of inherent hospitality and I feel that you really wanted to have me accept your hospitality and tell you a few of the points which I believe may aid some in the upbuilding of business, and which will tend to improve conditions in the flower world in which our lives are being spent. We are reminded that the business is not all flowers, for our subject tonight is roses, and they all have thorns, but with the hope of relieving the rose growing industry of some of its thorns I will attempt to give you in brief an outline of a path that leads to success in the rose growing business.

Educating the Public.

I realize the subject is broad, for the rose growing industry extends not from sea to sea but encircles the globe. We cannot all become familiar with conditions in Europe, nor see the wonders of the Pacific coast when the roses are in bloom, but we read of the cities of the western coast buying roses for street planting by the 25,000 lots and we know that means the making of hundreds of thousands of rose lovers, and these cities are famous more on account of their wonderful display of roses than for the great industrial establishments which are the backbone of their prosperity. We have not the climate here in the east which will permit such extensive operations, but we have, nevertheless, wonderful opportunities which, if taken advantage of, would accomplish much that is to be desired and, allowing for unfavorable climatic conditions, if we had some of the western spirit which is behind those wonderful displays on the western coast we might be at least close competitors and at least receive honorable mention in the awards, and a vote of thanks, although perhaps unspoken, from every man, woman or child who is fortunate enough to behold a well kept rose garden in its prime.

We have a few such samples in our state, of which Elizabeth park, in Hartford, is a striking example. Ramblers, hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas and the polyantha type are gathered together in a rose garden some acres in extent, and to those who have never seen this park in the middle of June I can only say that you have one of the good things of life in store for you. If you are fortunate enough to visit it, the memory will linger long.

And the result of such a rose garden is the education of the public. I have heard a rumor that the public is not interested except in a few flowers to make a wedding scene like an event of joy, and a few flowers to make a burial seem proper, but don't you believe it. But I do ask you to believe that the public needs educating to discriminate between roses in other ways than by colors and that the public wants and needs as much variety in the flowers it buys as in the neckties it wears or the food it eats. I have seen the Elizabeth park rose garden crowded so that it was a case of follow the crowd to get through, and these people were using the notebook and pencil to such an extent that they fair success of roses with hot water alone, I have never seen roses of the best quality produced with hot water heat exclusively. Hot water and steam in conjunction we consider ideal. If one system breaks we have the other to keep out frost. If in the cold of winter the warm water pipes are in the house, the moderate heat is beneficial, but we do not want this heat in the warmer days in spring and fall, when a steam pipe about the houses is needed at night, and, as the steam pipes cool quickly, we have no heat on during the day, when it is not wanted. A circulation of air at night by means of open ventilation, with a steam pipe on which sulphur has been placed, is the means of keeping off mildew and black spot, which in summer are so apt to affect roses. From 3 a. m. to 5 a. m. is the danger time, and the air at night is just as essential as in the day, for the morning that finds the white dew settled on the foliage at daylight is the morning trouble starts. It is all due to dead, stagnant air and poor ventilation, which more air, a little sulphur and a steam pipe or two will correct.

I have stated on other occasions that a good rose house is a house which will grow roses well, and this is true, but there are different kinds of roses, just as there are different styles of houses. I have seen good summer roses in poor houses running north and south, but these conditions are the opposite of the ideal. My personal opinion is that an even-span wide house is the best house for roses and that qualification, even-span, is put in because I believe the even-span house is more properly ventilated than the two-thirds-span or uneven-span house, and, so far as shade goes, any good, modern built iron construction house is light enough in all parts for the proper growing conditions, although the more light the better, provided we do not go to the extreme of laying glass the 24-inch way to get it.

Drainage is an important factor, worthy of consideration. With solid beds, plain land tile covered with from ten to eighteen inches of coarse gravel or coal ashes makes drainage that will give satisfaction. In building benches the builder should never forget that wet lumber swells and should allow for the swell in building and leave the cracks wide. We grow practically all our roses in solid beds, but for growing young stock and certain varieties of roses we prefer the bench.

Cultural Suggestions.

Given, then, good soil, good water, steam heat, or steam and hot water, good houses, good plants, the question is, how to produce the goods. A few general pointers may be helpful. Build up a plant first. Get something to work on. Don't flower the first bottom breaks and sacrifice your future for the few pennies they will bring in a glutted market in hot weather. Get back to good, sound eyes and let them grow. The root system will be in proportion to top growth, and build the top and you'll have the roots. Water freely, and especially is this true if your roses are grafted. Wild roses grow best in the swamps and your Manetti root is a wild root. Just so long as water can get away freely you will seldom be able to overwater grafted roses, and that time comes only when you are cutting a heavy crop of flowers and thus checking the root action.

Don't let spiders sap the life from the foliage, as it leaves them without lungs, for the leaves are the lungs, and sometime when you see a sickly bunch of spider-eaten plants think of a tuberculosis camp and clean their lungs out with numerous good applications of the hose and let them get a breath again and go ahead.

Don't mulch heavily, not under any circumstances. Your root system will be buried and killed for lack of air, as your feeders are near the top and until they have made new feeders there can be little growth. Don't cut back into the hard wood unless there is big money in sight. Your next crop will be longer breaking from the hard wood and you are losing valuable time.

Diversify the Supply.

And, most important of all for success in growing roses for the open market is, don't grow what everyone else grows just because they are growing it. Increased glass area means more roses grown. Suppose, for example, all the new ranges were planted with Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond. Figure out the result for yourselves. If you have any reason to be dissatisfied with this year's returns from your crop, just figure what it will be in the future with more of the same product in the market. The way to avoid glut markets is to fill the market with a variety of roses and not with the same identical thing. Give your retailer a chance to show what he can do with something besides Killarney. That seems to me to be the solution of the problem: Education of the public to be discriminating flower buyers through our parks and flower shows, local advertising by the retailer, an assortment of roses in sufficient quantity to insure a steady supply. In all these things the retailer, wholesaler and grower must work in harmony for the good of the trade.

Keep roses in your stores twelve months of the year. My Maryland, Double White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Taft, Radiance and roses of the type of Christy Miller and Princeton will make a good combination from March to December. Killarney Queen, Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Lady Hillingdon, Sunburst, in addition to those previously mentioned, will increase the variety and perhaps be at the best when the former are not. I regret that this list of varieties is not longer, but every year adds some that are worth growing and there is money in any when properly grown and properly handled.

The question of roses is broad and it takes in pot roses, which subject is a study in itself and on which I wish to speak but briefly. Baby Ramblers, Mrs. Cutbush, Dorothy Perkins, Flower of Fairfield, Tausendschon and others make a most interesting display and medium-sized, well-grown plants are as a rule easily salable. The work of Mr. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass., in bringing climbing roses into the high place they now hold was well worthy of the American Rose Society's gold medal. He is one of the men we honor, and you have in Baltimore one who deserves and is given the admiration and done in 1911 by the retail florists who used display space in the daily papers. The figures are surprising. Here they are:

	Agate Lines
In The Tribune	36,268
In the second paper	6,049
In the third paper	6,023
In the fourth paper	4,989
In the fifth paper	4,297
In the sixth paper	1,955
In the seventh paper	779
In the eighth paper	663
Total	63,923

That is a remarkable showing. It indicates that the few retailers who used newspaper space spent in the aggregate at least $20,000 in adding to the number of flower buyers and increasing the consumption of flowers.

BERMUDA LILY BUDS.

The Bermuda bulb growers do not, as a rule, cut their lily buds to ship to the Easter flower buyers and the imports of the buds have fallen much below what they were a few years ago, being confined to shipments from the smaller and least careful growers. Few of the shipments go into the trade—practically all go direct to the public on orders booked by the customs brokers. The imports this year were only 790 cases, consigned as follows:

moved slowly indeed. That, gentlemen, is educating the public in the best possible manner and the results come back to us all who are growers of plants and flowers, for a discriminating flower buyer is the best possible customer and often becomes so much of a crank on the subject as to be able to give us commercial men many a lesson in roses.

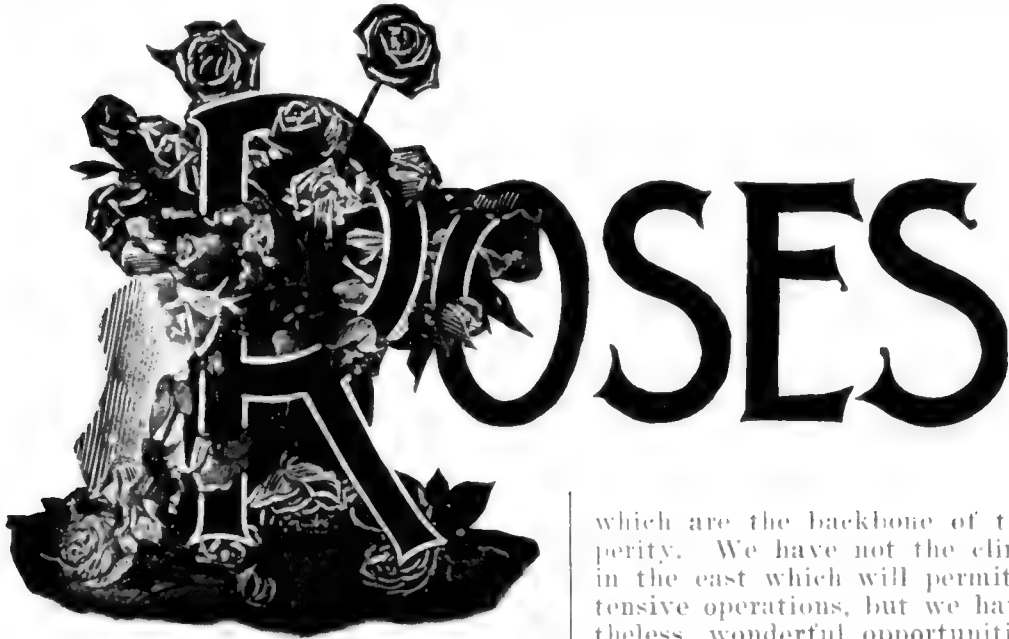

Growers Full of Hope.

Men who plant seeds and who work the soil are hopeful men. Their enthusiasm is somewhat in keeping with the man who sets a hen and counts his chickens before they are hatched. This, I believe, is a factor in the growth of the flower industry in this country and in the world. There is a feeling of satisfaction which comes with the construction of a new house and the planting of a crop, and that feeling is general with the florists of the country. They are building, and this year, in spite of the fact that business as a whole has been unsettled and in many branches of industry extremely dull. As a rule a greenhouse man counts his profits by counting his glass area. A little more glass than last year is the general report so far as profit and loss statements go. I believe there are less failures among greenhouse men than in any other line of business, in spite of the fact that practically everything which is handled is of a perishable nature. What does that prove? First, that they are honest, for honesty is of the soil, and they are toilers who live from the products of the soil, and, second, that they are hopeful and not easily discouraged, and, last and more than all, that the public wants and is willing to buy what has been produced by the sweat from the brows of honest men.

Essentials in Rose Growing.

Rose growing and the rose business is at least sixty per cent of the total flower business of the country, which fact places roses as a matter of first importance and consideration, and I might venture to say that at least two-thirds of this is the product of roses grown under glass. Now let us for a moment consider the proper conditions which give us the best roses under glass. I want to name a few conditions which I consider ideal, and first of all I should place soil: A heavy turf from lowlands that have been saving up the silt and richness from the hillsides for centuries; one that has an abundance of root fiber in it, and one that has not been composted so long that it has lost that fiber which gives it life. It should have a clay body, for roses delight in a clay soil, but it should be porous enough to admit water and air freely. Air in soil is essential. The largest root is the root in the ashes on which plants in pots have been standing for some time, and air which encourages root action is the only plausible explanation of this fact which I have ever heard. Cow manure for roses is the best fertilizer which we know of, and in many soils a bone tankage running from four to five per cent nitrogen and not necessarily high in phosphoric acid will give strength and vitality to the plants. Good stock to start with is needed and the best is none too good. Consider that roses are often kept in the houses for two or three years and the proportionate cost of good above poor stock is too trifling to mention.

Steam heat is essential to roses and, although I know some growers make a

ROSES AND ROSE GROWING.

(A paper by Wallace R. Pearson, read before the Baltimore Florists' and Gardeners' Club April 8, 1912.)

I am reminded of the fact that I have crossed the Mason and Dixon line in coming to Baltimore to speak to you this evening, and that fact has a great deal of significance to me. In the north an invitation may be one prompted by courtesy pure and simple, but in the south an invitation is extended because of inherent hospitality and I feel that you really wanted to have me accept your hospitality and tell you a few of the points which I believe may aid some in the upbuilding of business, and which will tend to improve conditions in the flower world in which our lives are being spent. We are reminded that the business is not all flowers, for our subject tonight is roses, and they all have thorns, but with the hope of relieving the rose growing industry of some of its thorns I will attempt to give you in brief an outline of a path that leads to success in the rose growing business.

Educating the Public.

I realize the subject is broad, for the rose growing industry extends not from sea to sea but encircles the globe. We cannot all become familiar with conditions in Europe, nor see the wonders of the Pacific coast when the roses are in bloom, but we read of the cities of the western coast buying roses for street planting by the 25,000 lots and we know that means the making of hundreds of thousands of rose lovers, and these cities are famous more on account of their wonderful display of roses than for the great industrial establishments which are the backbone of their prosperity. We have not the climate here in the east which will permit such extensive operations, but we have, nevertheless, wonderful opportunities which, if taken advantage of, would accomplish much that is to be desired and, allowing for unfavorable climatic conditions, if we had some of the western spirit which is behind those wonderful displays on the western coast we might be at least close competitors and at least receive honorable mention in the awards, and a vote of thanks, although perhaps unspoken, from every man, woman or child who is fortunate enough to behold a well kept rose garden in its prime.

We have a few such samples in our state, of which Elizabeth park, in Hartford, is a striking example. Ramblers, hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas and the polyantha type are gathered together in a rose garden some acres in extent, and to those who have never seen this park in the middle of June I can only say that you have one of the good things of life in store for you. If you are fortunate enough to visit it, the memory will linger long.

And the result of such a rose garden is the education of the public. I have heard a rumor that the public is not interested except in a few flowers to make a wedding scene like an event of joy, and a few flowers to make a burial seem proper, but don't you believe it. But I do ask you to believe that the public needs educating to discriminate between roses in other ways than by colors and that the public wants and needs as much variety in the flowers it buys as in the neckties it wears or the food it eats. RICHMOND WEAK STEMMED.

We have a house of 2-year-old Richmond roses growing well, with nice, clean foliage, two to five blooms to the bush, large blooms but weak stems, especially at the neck. We carry a night temperature of 58 degrees, day 68 to 70 degrees. They are grown in good clay soil and we have been feeding them liquid manure once in two weeks, and once each month a mulch of Chicago cattle manure. C. H. M.

Your treatment of Richmond seems to have been about right, only I find 56 degrees at night suits it best, with a rise of 10 degrees in the daytime. A dressing of wood ashes or lime will help strengthen the stems, and perhaps you are running them a little close in the daytime and not ventilating sufficiently. Rather more fresh air, some lime or ashes and a slight drop in the temperature should materially improve them. C. W.

make a close head. Grow the plants outside a couple of years, then dig up and either pot them or place them in tubs. You can grow just as fine wistarias in this way as can be imported, and with little trouble.

Ramblers for Memorial Day.

Started early in April, there will be no trouble in flowering ramblers for Memorial day. The demand at the end of May is less robust than at Easter for the tall ramblers, but the baby ramblers, also Clothilde Soupert, Maman Cochet and some hybrids, notably Frau Karl Druschki, sell well in pots even though the flowering period outdoors is close at hand. Hard forcing will not be necessary for the Memorial day stock. The plants will be of much finer quality if grown moderately cool throughout, a night temperature of 50 degrees being about right.

Pricking Out Annuals.

Many annuals will now require pricking off into flats or potting. The soil in each case should be light but moderately rich. Spent hotbed manure which has been dried and is not full of worms is excellent, as is old mushroom manure. If a man or boy will fill the flats and carry them away, a good hand can plant a large number of flats per day, and it never pays to leave any of these annuals to become crowded in the seedling pans or flats, as they soon become spindling and starved. With abundance of space at disposal, with Easter stock out of the way, this work of potting and boxing should receive considerable of our time.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Canterbury Bells.

Any Canterbury bells which were not flowered for Easter should be grown cool; never mind if the temperature is as low as 40 degrees at night. Remember that these plants will withstand outside temperatures of zero or lower, if mulched, and they are not improved by warm house culture. They make superb pot plants, entirely discounting such as are grown outdoors, and those who will hold their stock moderately cool and time them to come in for Memorial day will make a good stake. These Canterbury bells are grand, not only as pot plants but for cutting, particularly the single varieties. The cooler they are grown the better they will be, and do not forget to use a few stakes in each pot.

That reminds us that now is the time to make a sowing of Canterbury bells if strong plants are desired next autumn. Do not put off your sowing until you sow pansies, daisies and myosotis, as is too often done. Canterbury bells sown in July and August will not produce plants of sufficient size to flower the following season. When big enough to be handled, transplant into flats, and plant out a foot apart in nursery rows towards the end of May. Cultivate well all summer and you are sure to have strong crowns.

Primulas.

In the pressure of Easter week many little jobs will have been postponed and these will no doubt include the transplanting of many seedlings. The little primulas, whether obconicas, Sinensis, Kewensis, malacoides or whatever other sorts you may have sown, are, or should be, ready for transplanting into shallow flats of soil of which at least one-half is leaf-mold. Give them a light position, quite near the glass, but be sure to shade for a few days after pricking out the seedlings. Primulas, if left too long in the seed pans, will be completely ruined.

Standard Wistarias.

A correspondent, who has admired the standard wistarias at Easter in some of the high class florists' stores, asks where he can purchase some. A certain number are imported annually, but if the inquirer can wait a season or two there is no reason why he cannot grow some standards himself. Purchase some plants, from any reliable nursery, of Wistaria Chinensis or its white form. They will carry several shoots each. Cut away all but the strongest. Plant these out in nursery rows and tie to a stout stake the shoot retained. Cut it off at any desired height; four to five feet is about right. Rub away all bottom growths and such as come below the desired head. Pinch the upper shoots back from time to time to

CARNATION SHOW IN ENGLAND.

The carnation show which was opened in London, England, March 21, was the largest, and for spectacular effect the finest, ever held under the auspices of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society. W. E. Wallace, of Eaton Bray, maintained his position as champion grower and carried off leading honors, with C. Engelmann, of Saffron Walden, a good second. Mr. Wallace's achievements included a gold medal for the best group of carnations; the American cup for American novelties, with Mrs. C. W. Ward, Dorothy Gordon and White Wonder; the Covent Garden cup, with Winsor and Gloriosa, sixty blooms of each, and a silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show, White Perfection. Quite a number of prizes in other classes went to the Eaton Bray grower also, with such varieties as Delight, Winsor, May Day, Scarlet Glow, etc.

C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, contributed an extensive and excellent collection of flowers, including a number of his own raising, and he secured a fine lot of awards, including a large gold medal for a group; the Brunton cup for British novelties, with three of his own varieties, namely, Carola, British Triumph and Lady Northcliffe, and firsts in other classes, with Lady Northcliffe, Carola, Hilda, etc. For a variety not in commerce, first, C. Engelmann, with Hilda; second, W. E. Wallace, with Una Wallace; third, Allwood Bros., with Peerless.

The floral committee had about half a dozen varieties to consider, but only one award of merit was recorded, namely, to Lady Northcliffe, from C. Engelmann, a flower of a lovely pink shade, of good form and substance and quite free. Among the varieties which failed to obtain the requisite number of points was Mrs. A. F. Dutton, from A. F. Dutton, Ivor, Bucks. However, Mr. Dutton swears by it as an excellent market variety, and has confidence in its future, or he would not have named it after his wife. Cinnabar, from Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, is a flower of a novel and pleasing shade, quite unique in carnations, and will probably be grown in many private collections, though too small for the general market. The Newport Carnation Nursery Co. put up Lady Meyer, but it also was found lacking, although in the competitive vase classes it beat Enchantress.

A year or two ago the leading vases in competitive classes were Enchantress, Winsor, Lawson, Afterglow, Harlowarden, etc. On this occasion these were superseded and the winners most in evidence were Lady Meyer, Lady Northcliffe, Mrs. A. F. Dutton, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Albion, Scarlet Glow, Carola, Delight, May Day, etc.

In addition to the gold medals already recorded, H. Burnett, Guernsey, was also in the front rank with a display of excellent merit. Silver gilt medals went to the Langley Nursery Co., Bucks; Young & Co., Cheltenham; Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park; Cutbush & Son, London, and A. F. Dutton, Ivor; silver medals to C. F. Waters, Balcombe; Bertie E. Bell, Guernsey; W. Wells & Co., Ltd., Merstham; the Newport Carnation Co., Newport, and Allwood Bros., Haywards Heath.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

In many respects, this has been a record Easter. The weather after Wednesday was perfect; Saturday was as pleasant as midsummer and almost as warm. The splendid conditions prevailed until 3 p. m. Sunday, when, just after the great Fifth avenue parade had ended and the last plant and box of cut flowers had been delivered, a fierce rain storm swept the city, lasting far into the night.

The sale of plants has never been equaled. In many of the stores there was an absolute clean-up and several were obliged to reorder Saturday morning. Everything of any value was disposed of. The combination basket and box creations were the greatest favorites. The growers can surely have no complaint. The prices of plants averaged twenty per cent above last year. Lilies, especially, soared on Saturday, when it was realized there were not enough to meet the demand.

The prices for cut flowers were at no time unreasonable and, as the night advanced, roses especially declined. There was an enormous lot of them, between the hot weather and some pickling, and the clean-up of the medium and short-stemmed stock was made at about the regular Saturday level. The top price for Beauties was 50 cents. The best Brunners brought the same price as Beauties. The novelties alone of the carnation stock went above 6 cents and, in fact, from 4 cents to 6 cents bought the best, and toppers could be had at 4 cents towards morning. Many thousands were sold at from 2 cents to 4 cents, and the small and sleepy stock was disposed of as low as $10 per thousand.

Most of the violets sold at 50 cents the hundred, although a few specials brought 75 cents and even $1. Much of the stock was low grade; only the best was in demand. The top for orchids was 75 cents. There was an oversupply of Schroederae. Valley and gardenias were called for constantly and used by the retailers largely in the cut flower boxes. Valley climbed to 4 cents Saturday, and some sold at 5 cents. Lilies advanced from $10 to $12 and later $15 per hundred. There were none left at any price by daylight. Callas sold splendidly, up to $2 and $2.50 per dozen. Bulbous stock, excepting the finer varieties of double tulips, was a drug, especially the southern daffodils, which dropped as low as $1 a box of 300 to 400 blooms. The long-stemmed sweet peas sold at good prices, but the short stock was completely ignored. There was a good supply of white lilac, but it sold slowly. Acacia was easily disposed of at good prices. Smilax was in constant demand at $2 and up per dozen.

All things considered, the wholesalers did well and have cause for congratulation. The happy medium of prices established could not possibly have justified any objection from the retailers and the universal clean-up resulted in general satisfaction.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held April 8. The attendance was excellent, considering that it was the night after Easter. S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I., staged a vase of grand Double White Killarney, for which Mr. Reuter, who was present, received the hearty thanks of the club, after which he graciously presented the flowers to President Manda for his bride. Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, exhibited four of his new hydrangeas, Bouquet Rose, Gel de Vibraye, Mme. Monillerè and Mlle. R. Gaillard, for which he received three certificates of merit and one honorable mention.

I. S. Hendrickson, chairman of the exhibition committee, suggested a plant night in May in honor of the late John Birnie. C. B. Weathered reported for the dinner committee and moved the thanks of the club to Alex. McConnell, who decorated the banquet room, and William Sim, A. N. Pierson, Inc., C. H. Totty, Charles Weber, John Donaldson, Lager & Hurrell and F. R. Pierson, who donated the flowers for the occasion. The small deficit was ordered paid from the club's treasury and the committee discharged with thanks.

The following were elected to membership: C. Vermeulen, Philip Cox, Hugo F. Jahn, P. H. Goodsell, Wallace R. Pierson, John McArthur, John A. Payne, J. F. Weir, Elwood Brant, William Tricker, Philip Arzberger, Arthur Cockcroft, Jno. H. Bockmann, W. Rehm, Heber B. Ware, Thomas Roland, Richard Hughes, George I. Laird, Louis Milliot and A. Embury. The following were proposed: Ed. A. Manda, Peter Duff, George Pierce, Paul A. Rigo, J. E. Miller, Andrew C. Scott, August Junge and Samuel Redstone.

Mr. Beaulieu made an earnest address concerning his treatment by the express companies. O'Mara said the investigation of the Interstate Commerce Commission augured ill for these companies, though the matter was not in the province of the club's legislative committee to handle.

Messrs. Cox, Sefton and Armitage, new members present, were introduced and gave addresses. Robert Schultz, who has recovered from an illness, acknowledged the club's courtesy while he was "on the shelf" and received a rousing welcome. Mr. Raymond, artist, of East Aurora, N. Y., was present and made a brief address.

W. F. Sheridan took the chair while Mr. O'Mara made a witty speech of congratulation to President Manda, whose marriage had just become known. Mr. Manda modestly acknowledged the well-wishes. He exhibited the club's original certificate of incorporation and it was placed in the hands of the treasurer for safe keeping.

Secretary Young reported the death of one of the club's oldest members, Herman Maenner, and Messrs. Donaldson, Miesem and Marquardt were appointed a committee to draw up suitable resolutions. Mr. Sheridan read the resolutions on the death of Bayard Cutting and a letter of thanks from Mrs. Cutting was read. Resolutions on the death of Mrs. M. C. Ebel were read, to which Mr. Ebel, who was present, gratefully responded.

Harry A. Bunyard was the lecturer of the evening. The photographs from which the slides for his stereopticon were made were furnished by George Asmus, of Chicago. Mr. Bunyard gave an interesting account of the Chicago show, showing many charming views. He said the show was a success from every point of view and dwelt upon the splendid outlook for the national exhibition in 1913 in New York and the grand prize offerings and prospects for the sweet pea show in Boston.

Various Notes.

The new plant market at Fifty-ninth street, near Second avenue, is in full blast and will doubtless become a permanent organization.

Wm. E. P. Seidewitz, of Pimlico, Md., was a visitor April 5 and attended the bowling in the evening.

McHutchison & Co. last week received from the continent on seven steamships 1,252 cases of nursery stock. These filled thirty-six carloads, thirty of which went to one firm. April 8 the steamer Vaderland brought them 1,390 bay trees as a first consignment.

Congratulations are being given Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schenck on the advent of a son and heir.

The Fort Greene flower store, at 759 Fulton street, Brooklyn, is a new enterprise, opened Easter week, with Clarence Saltford at the helm.

M. Kakuda, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is home from his coast-to-coast trip, finding the outlook encouraging wherever he called.

Mr. Logan, formerly superintendent for Whitelaw Reid, celebrated his seventy-first birthday Good Friday.

L. W. Kervan will return from his Florida sojourn about May 1.

President Manda, of the Florists' Club, has only now sprung a surprise on his friends by the announcement of his marriage March 6. His bride was Mrs. Mary Esch.

A midnight call on the retail florists Saturday found every store looking as if a cyclone had struck it.

At Brown's, on upper Broadway, the big window was made attractive, notwithstanding an accidental break, but within the show was most artistic and the plant combinations original. "Best Easter I've ever known," was his greeting. David Clarke's Sons did a tremendous trade. Fourteen churches were decorated. At Max Schling's a host of helpers were employed. Orders averaged larger and were more numerous than ever. Over at Stumpp's, on Fifth avenue, the same conditions prevailed. An azalea priced at $200 was one of exhibits here. Down at Myer's, on Madison avenue, there was nothing left at midnight and up at Nugent's, on the same avenue, and in his store on West Twenty-eighth street, the clean-up was complete. At Bunyard's, at Forty-eighth street and Madison avenue, the increase over last year was said to be phenomenal. At McConnell's, on Fifth avenue, the veteran was contented, for there was nothing in his big store or its branches left unsold. Chas. A. Dards did an enormous business at both his big stores. His basket combinations won especial notice. W. S. Lee, at the Hippodrome building, had an immense audience daily to view his window decorations and sales were immense. M. A. Bowe had a branch on Thirty-fourth street, near the Waldorf, that was emptied several times, and Easter with him was ahead of expectations. At Thomas Young's, on Fifth avenue, the sales were ahead of any other year. At Wadley & Smythe's the record was beyond all previous seasons.

In Brooklyn Robert G. Wilson never had so gorgeous a display in his greenhouses on Gates avenue, and his big store on Fulton street and Greene avenue. Business was far in advance of any year in his history. Hugo Jahn also made a record Easter and has many spring weddings booked. In fact, this is the case with the leading retailers in both cities and a lively season for all the prominent flower merchants is assured.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

With the temperature hovering around 80 degrees, the sun shining and everybody in a good humor, the local trade reaped a harvest April 6. Sales of potted plants and cut flowers were so heavy that several of the stores, regardless of extra help, found it impossible to make deliveries. Fred H. Kramer, with two stores and a stall in the Center Market, received so many telephone orders that he was forced to shut off the switchboard in the F street store. He had a small army of bicycle boys covering the city. While some of the stores had a great many lilies left over, such firms as George H. Cooke, J. H. Small & Sons, and the Washington Florists Co. found it difficult to find enough first class plants to meet the demand. Azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons and hydrangeas met with a good sale. Wistaria also was in some demand. In the cut flowers, daffodils and tulips were the leaders; violets were too high for the ordinary person's pocketbook. Sweet peas retailed in large quantities, as did white carnations and white roses. George Cooke had some of the handsomest Pink Pearl rhododendrons to be found in this section of the country and the azaleas of J. H. Small & Sons as well as their hydrangeas, brought forth considerable praise. Gude Bros.' lilies were extra well done.

Great inroads were, however, made this year in the business by the activity of the department and grocery stores, which went into the plant business on a large scale. One firm offered lilies at 9 cents and sold large quantities. S. Kann Sons & Co., a department store, offered potted lilies with four and even six blooms in a jardiniere for 59 cents and Goldenberg's, another department store, got 59 cents per plant regardless of blossoms or buds. The peddlers, too, were a source of much annoyance. Italians, Greeks and negroes congregated in large numbers in the market and shopping districts, often offering their wares right in front of the legitimate flower stores. This matter will be brought to the attention of the mercantile organizations with a view to its elimination. But, taking it all in all, every florist in town is happy over the results of the Easter business.

Various Notes.

Otto C. Bauer, manager of the Washington Florists' Co., has been drawn for duty on the April grand jury, which will keep him busy for the coming three months.

The April meeting of the Florists' Club has been postponed and such business as should have come up April 2 will be handled in May. The members were so busy that when the meeting was called to order, the attendance was too small to warrant the handling of any weighty matters. After adjournment those present started out to make Easter calls. Many stores were visited and the reception received at each showed that the formation of the club has done away with whatever jealousy had previously been apparent.

Fred H. Kramer is cutting some Richmonds which combine good foliage and color with size of bloom.

The Mrs. Taft roses grown by the Washington Florists Co. are meeting with much favor.

Every plant which leaves the store of George H. Cooke has attached to it a neat card bearing the phrase. "Please give me a drink." The card shows attention and thoughtfulness on the part of not only the donor but of the florist and has done much to increase Mr. Cooke's popularity with his trade. C. L. L.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The trade is busy congratulating each other on the fact that last Thursday, Friday and Saturday were ideal days. One could not have had better if they had the ordering of them and business was up to every expectation. Everything cleaned up, although Sunday it rained and blew a hurricane all day long.

Stock in general was good; there were some shaky violets, but that was expected. Many of the lilies were short, but everything else was good. There were immense quantities of bulb stock, which cleaned up at some price, but when will growers learn that the regular trade does not want tulips for Easter?

The retailers are tired but happy, and all have done well; cleaned up nicely on cut flowers and had a phenomenal sale of plants. I am ashamed to quote their "best ever," but I think it is a fact.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had one of the finest collections of baskets and vases of plants ever seen in this city and she disposed of them all by Friday night and had nothing to interfere with her cut flower business Saturday.

Randolph & McClements had their two stores filled with some of the handsomest plants of all kinds and their trade in these was so great that one could scarcely believe it possible that there would be any room for cut flowers, but there was no falling off in that line.

G. P. Weaklen is modest. He says he is satisfied, as he sold everything he had, both plants and cut flowers, and could not have done more without more room and more help, and that he does not want it all.

The Zieger Co. was right up to date with everything that belongs to Easter and reports a satisfactory trade.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had some fine azaleas and report a good Easter.

Ray Dashbach says his first Easter exceeded his expectations.

Ernest Ludwig, of the E. C. Ludwig Co., says the only trouble was that the days were too long for selling, leaving not enough time to fill all the orders at night.

The John Bader Co. sold everything that had any sign of a bloom and started Monday morning to get Decoration day stock in shape.

Joe Gotti, of the Cut Flower Co., buried his father last Thursday and has the sympathy of his friends.

The illustrated lecture to be given to the Florists' Club next Monday night, by Dr. John A. Brashear, assisted by Dr. Harry T. Hower, is attracting a good deal of attention and will be one of the social features for the trade in this vicinity. Any of the readers of The Review who can come are invited.

The rain Sunday interfered to a great extent with the flower shows in the park conservatories. There were crowds attending them but not nearly so large as would have been the case under ordinary weather conditions.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Easter has come and gone, leaving everybody happy, for everybody reaped a harvest. Three days before it looked as though several of the dealers would be found with a large surplus, but the latest reports indicate that there was a general clean-up. The flood of potted stock and cut flowers began to make its appearance about the middle of the week and as the supply increased the retail prices advanced until Good Friday found them nearly double the normal prices, but the demand never slackened, the public paid and many did not even ask for deliveries. There was plenty of everything excepting violets, and these were largely received from outside, as the local growers were nearly all caught off crop.

Various Notes.

The special appropriation bills now before the General Assembly give $2,000 each to the Rhode Island and Newport Horticultural Societies and the Newport County Agricultural Society.

J. Kopelman kept two delivery wagons and a large automobile busy for his Easter orders. He expects to commence the erection of two more greenhouses at his range in Oaklawn as soon as the weather becomes settled.

Charles Johnston is seriously ill with an attack of rheumatism, which confines him to his home.

O'Connor was one of the busiest men in the city last week. The firm had so many orders by Thursday night that it declined to book any more for Easter delivery. They had several churches to supply with cut flowers and potted plants.

E. H. Dickey, superintendent of the Union Cemetery Greenhouses, Woonsocket, reports an unusual business on all kinds of potted stock.

John Gibson, of Newport, was a recent visitor in Boston.

Otto Lindberg has accepted a position with Thomas Curley.

Macnair had sixteen clerks busy in his two stores for Easter, and for three days he kept five delivery wagons on the jump.

Charles Hunt had seven churches to supply with potted plants and cut flowers for Easter. His mother, who has been critically ill for several weeks, is improving.

Invitations have been sent out for the wedding of Miss Marion Gertrude Macrae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Macrae, and Charles De Witt White, April 24. W. H. M.

HOUSTON, TEX.

P. D. Hauser & Sons Floral Co., in business on the Telephone road, sold the property and the business to P. D. Hauser, of Houston, one of the stockholders in the old company, for $50,000. Mr. Hauser immediately leased the establishment to his sons, John S. Hauser and Frank H. Hauser, who will conduct the business as it has been conducted for several years. In the old company, the stock of which is all purchased by the elder Hauser, were Frank Hauser, of San Antonio; Peter Hauser and W. T. Hauser. The property includes the 6.53 acres, greenhouses, all of the flowers and fixtures, together with several undescribed lots in the city of San Antonio.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The Easter rush is over and everyone is satisfied with the results. Trade was equal to last year and in some cases a little better. There was probably more competition this year than the city has ever seen before. Every corner had a flower stand, a number of vacant rooms had temporary flower stores and the department stores advertised flowers extensively. Notwithstanding all the competition, the florists did a satisfactory business. At the city flower market things were fairly well cleaned up by night. The market was one mass of flowers, and the stands were replenished as fast as the stock was sold. The stock of Easter lilies was short, but this was made up with spiræas, quite a few of which went begging. Carnations started out at 75 cents a dozen, but dropped to 50 cents by night. Bulbous stock was more than plentiful and could be bought at the buyer's price by night.

The Greeks on the corners sold carnations at 50 cents a dozen and daffodils at two dozen for 25 cents, but at the better class of flower stores it was a different story. Carnations brought $1 to $1.50 per dozen. However, this flower was not in demand as in former years, probably on account of the cheap competition on the streets. Roses were plentiful, the better grades bringing $3 to $4 per dozen, while American Beauties were first-class stock at $6 to $12 per dozen. Easter lilies were sold at $3 to $4 per dozen. Tulips and daffodils were more than plentiful at 75 cents per dozen. Sweet peas and violets were the popular flowers, mostly in corsages, the former bringing $1.50 and $2 per hundred, and the latter $2 and $2.50. Orchids, valley, lilacs, mignonette, gardenias and, in fact, all kinds of flowers were plentiful.

Pot plants probably had a better call than the cut flowers, but the higher priced arrangements did not move as in former years. Plants ranging from $1 to $3 were more in demand. Pot lilies sold well, but were a little short in size and numbers. Some fine rhododendrons, lilacs and ramblers were to be seen, but the sale on these plants was light; azaleas, hydrangeas, Baby ramblers, spiræas and bulbous stock had the call.

Various Notes.

John Grande had probably the best lilies seen in this market.

Henry Rieman, who has been on the sick list, was back on the job Easter. Mr. Rieman had his usual fine lot of blooming plants and reports satisfactory Easter trade.

John Rieman and Alfred Brandt cleaned up their blooming plants early in the day. They report trade up to the standard.

The cold weather did not help the florists at Crown Hill, but, notwithstanding this, Pahud's and Nelson's forces report business satisfactory.

L. F. Benson broke in a new delivery auto this Easter.

Bertermann Bros. Co. had the finest lot of blooming plants that they have had in years. They report business a little better than last year.

A. Wiegand & Sons report trade better than last year, especially in medium-priced blooming plants. This firm used four autos and three wagons for delivery. H. L. W.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Those who before Easter said that stock for the holiday would be none too plentiful were false prophets; there was more than enough. The market was a little tight the first part of last week, owing to many growers holding back a little for the big demand at the close. Friday and Saturday, however, brought in such a quantity of stock that only flowers of the first quality found buyers. Anything that was salted in any way, or not quite all it should be, was left. The aggregate money value of the sales was large, and probably the largest this market has had at Eastertide, but the returns to the grower per bloom were smaller. The growers have, in large part, only to blame themselves. Some would not give their commission man or sales manager a line on what to expect, while others held for anticipated high prices at the end of the week. As a result, on the first three days, when the market was tight, the buyers had to do some tall scouting to supply their needs.

The business in the flower market was good, but not so good as expected, for stock did not realize the prices. People wanted only the cheaper stock, at the cheaper prices. Lilies moved rather slowly this year.

Following Easter there was plenty of everything. It will take some tall selling to clean up the market.

A brief word of Easter business in each line is as follows: Carnations, too many, owing to holding and hot weather; lilies, too many; roses cleaned up fairly well; Beauties sold well, but not at quoted prices; bulbous stock cleaned up nicely; valley moved slowly, the supply being too large; double violets sold well; singles cleaned up easily, but few were to be had; novelties, such as pansies, mignonette, etc., cleaned up. The business in greens was large and the supply good.

Various Notes.

Enough dyed-in-the-wool enthusiasts were on hand to make a quorum at the club meeting April 8. The report of the executive committee was accepted and the committee discharged with thanks. The report showed all bills to have long since been paid and all money due to the committee from the guarantors and other sources to have been collected. The whole report had been carefully analyzed, subdivided and prepared by George Bartlett, the secretary.

L. H. Kyrk cleaned up his various novelties in flowers and sash-grown single violets in a hurry for Easter.

C. E. Critchell says New York double violets moved better than was expected. The J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. is well satisfied with Easter business.

P. J. Olinger received 112 wood boxes of flowers from his greenhouses for his Easter business.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Those called upon Easter morning unanimously agree that this year's Easter trade was fine indeed. The weather was ideal and there was plenty of good stock, both cut flowers and pot plants, to make selecting and filling orders an easy task. There never was a finer supply of high grade roses, Beauties, carnations and other seasonable stock, while in pot plants there was a great variety, both in color and sizes. The only scarce article Easter Sunday was lily of the valley.

Shipping trade, which commenced the fore part of the week, was brisk and favorable weather conditions helped to hustle stock off in quick order. Never before did the local retailers display their stock to better advantage, for the windows showed what can be done if a little good judgment is used.

Various Notes.

Richard Lietz, on Fond du Lac avenue, replaced his old auto with a first-class delivering car, which is a credit to both Mr. Lietz and the florists in general. He reports a fine Easter trade and wonders what he would have done without the new car.

The M. A. McKenney Co. is one of the few firms that had their potted plants for the holidays picked out long before some even think about it. Proof of this forethought was shown in their salesrooms, which were filled with blooming plants of only high grade which, with the cut flower trade, were reported as selling satisfactorily.

Up the street J. M. Fox & Son had probably the best chance of any in town to display a fine lot of plants and made up baskets in three large windows, which must have proved a drawing card, for there was not much left of their immense stock. The report from them was "better than ever before."

To make the last few days of last week really interesting, the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. had quite a run on funeral work, which in their case necessitated working straight through from Wednesday morning. Although they moved many plants, the demand in cut flowers seemed to take the lead.

Currie Bros. Co. reports that the Easter trade with them was satisfactory indeed. They grew quite a batch of the stock at their State street greenhouses, but it came far from supplying the demand, especially in the cut flower line.

Nohos & Co., who conduct a stand in the lobby of the Merrill building and naturally cater to a transient trade, claim that business simply was rushing; the best part of their success can be credited to the ideal weather conditions.

Wm. Zimmermann, Fifth and Grand avenues, never was so rushed since he has been in business. His auto delivery car helped to hustle orders away in quick order once they were filled.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. was so busy Easter morning that visitors were not welcome, but this much they said: "Business fine in both pot plants and cut flowers."

The Holton & Hunkel Co. made shipments every two hours by electric train from their Brown Deer plant last Saturday. Over 7,000 first-class Pink Killarneys were one of the items. Included were cut Easter lilies, Beauties and other roses. Shipping trade with them was ahead of last year, making a fine week.

Gust. Rusch & Co., anticipating a shortage of room for the Easter rush, put in a balcony at the rear end of their salesrooms. Their anticipations were great, but the amount of business done was even greater. It was their first Easter and they can well be proud of it.

The plant houses of the C. C. Pollworth Co. looked mighty dreary Easter Monday, for out of their large amount of potted plants there were no good ones left and mighty few of the poorer ones. Their houses of cut flowers produced large quantities, which found ready sale, and shipping trade was fine; the best yet. E. O.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The exceptionally beautiful weather we had during Easter week helped considerably to bring hundreds of flowering plants into bloom and all the florists looked forward to a big business. The show windows were most beautifully and artistically decorated, and the stores were packed to the doors with choice flowering and foliage plants, planted baskets, jardinières, all kinds of novelties and last but not least, the biggest stock of cut flowers ever shipped to the city for that day.

The advance sales began Friday, and by Saturday afternoon every store and nursery was crowded with eager buyers. The washouts on the Illinois Central road caused a delay of twelve hours in shipments expected here Friday and Saturday and naturally caused a great deal of worry among the cut flower sellers. Luckily enough, all the stock arrived in time to fill the orders, or to be disposed of over the counter.

Easter Sunday morning looked ominous and soon several heavy showers spoiled the festive spirit of the belated shoppers, but every florist declares that this was a record-breaking Easter trade in New Orleans.

Easter lilies, hydrangeas, valley, spiræas, orchids, pot roses, rhododendrons, geraniums, daisies and some palms and ferns were the principal plants sold, besides a big lot of made-up baskets and hampers. In the cut flower line lilies, roses, carnations, valley, orchids and violets found the largest demand, and nearly every store sold out.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros.: "Had a fine sale of plants and cut flowers."

A. Alost: "The biggest sale of flowering plants, especially Easter lilies."

Buchner & Kraak: "That immense stock of flowering plants you saw is almost entirely sold."

M. Cook & Son: "Plants and cut flowers went in a rush; sold out."

P. Chopin: "Sold out everything in the line of flowering plants and cut flowers."

H. Doescher: "The best Easter business ever. All kinds of plants sold by the wagon load."

C. Eble: "It was a record-breaking Easter business. Had a big stock, but it's gone."

C. W. Eichling: "Never saw anything like it in the city; had a larger stock of plants and cut flowers than ever and I am cleaned out."

F. Reyes Floral Co.: "Sold out completely; had a fine stock of cut flowers, but will double my orders next year."

J. A. Newsham: "You saw that fine lot of plants; well, it's all sold, besides a big shipment of Chicago flowers."

Mrs. Carrie Rehm: "Never had such a rush for Easter before; was well prepared and hardly anything is left."

F. Rieth, Jr.: "It was my biggest Easter business in many years; especially on account of my new St. Charles avenue store."

U. J. Virgin: "I was prepared ahead of time and had the goods, cut flowers, flowering plants, baskets. That terrible rush is over and almost my entire stock is gone." R. E.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The weather man did not hold out a good promise of Easter weather last Tuesday, April 2, when he sent a snow storm that covered the ground to a depth of eight inches. It looked far from "beautiful" to a florist. By Thursday, however, it was much warmer and the snow was gone. Business began to pick up, especially at the wholesale houses, and a tremendous lot of stock was moved during the following three days. Saturday was an ideal day for the store men, the outside temperature being near 70 degrees. All the business of three ordinary days was crowded into this one day, and the selling and delivering forces at all the stores were rushed to the limit. Corsages, of course, had first call. Roses, carnations and bulb stock sold well, while the trade in pot plants was the best in years, lilacs, rambler roses and azaleas being the quickest sellers. At the wholesale houses stock of all kinds was cleaned up, with the possible exception of tulips and jonquils. Violets came in from the east in poor condition; some stock showed its age when first unpacked. There were not nearly enough violets to go around and consequently sweet peas were much in demand at the last minute.

Various Notes.

The McCallum Co. has installed an automobile for delivery purposes. This concern reported a heavy demand on all stock last week and, as this is the company's first Easter in Cleveland, the manager feels well satisfied with the amount of business done.

So great was the demand for sweet peas at the last minute, on account of the shortage of violets, that the J. M. Gasser Co. sent men to the greenhouses Saturday at midnight to pick sweet peas by lantern light. They got the stock into the store at 4:30 Sunday morning, just in time to finish up corsages for the early delivery.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has a Chase truck, which was received last week from the factory. It proved a great help during the rush.

Gordon Gray is much improved in health and is able to again take his seat at the Florists' Club's pedro table.

Knoble Bros. report a record business. This firm used nearly 2,000 lilies in 6-inch and 8-inch pots. Rambler roses and Charles Encke azaleas had a ready sale.

John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor. F. A. F.

...NEWS NOTES...

Greens Farms, Conn.—George B. Whitehead sent 800 pots of Easter lilies to New Haven in one auto load April 1.

Watertown, Wis.—The Stube Floral Co. had especially good lilies this year and did a big Easter trade at the store on Main street.

Cleveland, O.—The secretary of state has licensed the incorporation of the Wilson Florist Co., of Cleveland; capital stock, $30,000; incorporators, A. V. Cannon, M. L. Parmenter, O. O. Vrooman, L. C. Spieth and P. A. White.

Greens Farms, Conn.—George Whitehead had the contract for the decorations for fair week at D. M. Read's store, in Bridgeport. The materials included a large auto truck load of choice palms and plants, besides many flowers, and the work of arranging the display kept him busy for some days.

Fitchburg, Mass.—C. A. Lesure, who purchased the retail end of the Mansfield flower business about a year ago, is conducting the store under its former name, the Mansfield Flower Shop. He carries an excellent stock and has a prosperous trade. The store is in the Johnsonia building, at 5 Putnam street.

Atlanta, Ga.—It is said that the park board, unable to secure money for the rebuilding of the greenhouses at Grant park, has decided to tear down the present houses, which are old and unsafe, and sell the stock of plants. At last report, however, there was still a slight hope that a strong appeal from the citizens might induce the finance committee of the council to make an appropriation for the rebuilding of the houses.

Bridgeport, Conn.—G. C. Bouton & Son, on Warren street, added one more house to their range of glass last season and they expect to build another greenhouse, an office and salesroom in the coming spring. During the last few years they have been experimenting with seedling carnations, and they believe that three varieties which they have originated—a light pink, a light red and a dark red—will prove to be valuable commercially.

New Hamburg, N. Y.—Alex A. Laub is enjoying the carnation growing business, as he thinks there is nothing like it. He has about all his stock potted up for next season. The varieties grown are Princess Charming, White House, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Winsor, Prospector, which he says is the best paying red he ever grew, even if it is not so large a variety, and a bench of a light pink seedling which is free and a good color.

Sheridan, Wyo.—The L. M. Best Floral Co. will add one rose house, 45x100, this spring. Already the range of greenhouses is one of the largest in the state, but the firm expresses the determination to double the glass area within the next year or two. This is only Mr. Best's second year in business here. He came here from Nebraska, where he had operated greenhouses for seven years. He grows carnations and all kinds of potted plants, in connection with lettuce and radishes.

...NEWS NOTES...

Putnam, Conn.—More than 1,000 people visited the East Side Greenhouses on Palm Sunday.

West Point, Neb.—J. F. Rosenfield has this week completed the removal of his peony farm and home to the new address, Benson, Omaha, Neb.

Malden, Mass.—E. D. Kaulback & Son had four houses of lilies for Easter, about 25,000 pots giving 60,000 blooms. They shipped all over New England and were practically cleaned out.

Franklin, N. H.—Elmer D. Kelley's greenhouse, on Maplewood Farm, was recently damaged by fire. The loss was estimated at $300 to $400, with no insurance. The stock included a quantity of vegetables.

Pittsburg, Kan.—J. C. Steinhauser, of the Steinhauser Florist & Nursery Co., just before Easter made a trip to Cherryvale, Coffeyville, Bartlesville and Muskogee. The company has branch establishments at these places.

Bridgeport, Conn.—John Reck & Son again rented the central space in the Post Office arcade for the Easter rush, as in former seasons, and sold large quantities of fine stock there, as well as in their store at 985 Main street.

Dayton, O.—W. G. Matthews secured a vacant store on Third street for the Easter overflow. Mr. Matthews has leased for five years the new building which is to be built at 32 South Main street, where he will establish a permanent store, handsomely equipped.

Chester, Pa.—Edward Dickerson, an ex-alderman of the First Ward, is making preparations to engage in the business of manufacturing concrete flower boxes of rustic design. He will erect a plant for the purpose at Twenty-fourth and Potter streets. It is said that he has received some large advance orders for the boxes.

Washington, Pa.—Warriek Bros. and the Washington Floral Co. recently joined forces and have opened a store in the Driver building. Earl J. Sedam, formerly in charge of the flower stand in the street car office, is manager of the new store. Each of the two firms owned a range of greenhouses, which will be retained by the company as now consolidated.

San Antonio, Tex.—P. D. Hauser has become the sole proprietor of the business which formerly bore the name of P. D. Hauser & Sons Floral Co. With the change of ownership the name has been changed to P. D. Hauser Floral Co. Besides buying his partners' interest in the business, Mr. Hauser has spent $16,000 in the purchase of six lots of ground at 1214 to 1232 East Commerce street.

Buffalo, N. Y.—At J. J. Albright's orchid houses, where Charles Sandford is gardener, some fine specimens of Odontoglossum crispum, grande and Pescatorei were in flower when the writer called; also Phalaenopsis Schilleriana and grandiflora. Odontoglossum are not nearly so extensively grown here as in Europe, the two largest American collections being in the possession of Oliver Ames, North-Easton, Mass., and Mrs. W. S. Kimball, Rochester, N. Y.

...NEWS NOTES...

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell says trade all season has been away in advance of any other year, the Easter business also breaking records.

Ravenna, O.—Chappell & Son say Easter trade was the best ever. They are planning to put the proceeds into a large new rose house.

Astoria, N. Y.—Henry Pritchard was in great luck when he sold five greenhouses and a part of his land to the city March 11, for April 7 a heavy storm did much damage to the place, for which the city stands, leaving Mr. Pritchard with three uninjured houses.

Shelbyville, Ill.—Adolph Reiss says the Easter trade broke all records, more and more flowers being used each year. There were so many calls for violets they could not be supplied. Sweet peas also were in demand, and "the boys love to send the girls red roses," he says.

Iron Mountain, Mich.—At 1 o'clock on the morning of March 27 flames visited the Plowman Sunnyside Greenhouse, and destroyed the roof of the boiler shed, the dimensions of which were 20x30. It is presumed that a spark or sparks from the boiler ignited the roof. The damage is covered by insurance.

Akron, N. Y.—James J. Bates reports Easter trade more than double last year's sales; plants at a church fair April 4 seemed to wake the people up and those who did not buy at the fair called on the downtown florist, thus cleaning up everything in the bulb line. Mr. Bates has had a heavy run of funeral work the last two weeks.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Crabb & Hunter have opened a new store at 114 East Fulton street, in the Metz building, just erected. In order that the firm might take advantage of the Easter season, the quarters of the florists were rushed to completion ahead of the remainder of the building. It is a pretty white and green interior, with up-to-date appointments.

Bangor, Me.—Easter was an ideal day and the florists seemed to surpass themselves in their displays. J. Martin's new store was a handsome sight and everybody in town seemed to try to secure a few plants or cut flowers, not only the better class, but also the others, and flowers as part of the attire predominated, and all florists report an exceedingly good business.

New London, Wis.—The Guelson Floral Co. gives an interesting account of the way in which the stock in its greenhouses was saved during the cold wave last January, when the boiler was suddenly put out of commission by an accident. "During three days and nights," says a member of the firm, "until we could get a traction engine out to our houses, we kept our stock from freezing by using charcoal fires in the houses and we also used the charcoal fires during five more days to aid the traction engine, as it could not heat our 14,000 feet of glass unaided. The smilax, violets and sweet peas were affected by the charcoal fumes, but the rest of the stock seemed none the worse for this treatment, beyond the check due to the low temperature."

The Review brings results.

Now, then, for the bedding out season, and Memorial day.

It was a great Easter, all right, especially for the retailers.

A BEGINNER as a florist should get a printed letter-head the first thing. One's communications should show one's connection with the business if trade prices are expected.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

COLLECTIONS, as evidenced by the clearings of the banks, are rather better than usual.
The florist who finds his money coming slowly should look into his system of getting after it.

FLOODS last autumn in Wisconsin are responsible for the season's scarcity of sphagnum moss and now the floods in the south are shutting off the supply of sheet moss just as that article comes into its heaviest demand.

A PRELIMINARY list of premiums has been issued for the flower show to be held at St. Paul, November 8 to 12, by a special organization under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association. Those interested should address S. D. Dysinger, secretary, 22 West Fifth street, St. Paul.

THE Easter business was big everywhere.
The weather was favorable and an immense lot of stock was sold, undoubtedly more than in any previous year, for production, both of plants and cut flowers, increases steadily. What the trade should study with regard to Easter is getting the buyers started earlier. The business is crowded into too short a time.

THE manufacturers of greenhouse building material are rushed with inquiries, most of them reporting more calls for estimates during March than in any previous month in their business history. After the enormous extension of glass area that took place in 1911 the extent of the building this season is something of a surprise, even to the material men themselves, some of whom had looked for a quiet season.

OBITUARY.

Robert Innes.

Robert Innes, a retired florist, died March 28 at his home, 48 Pine street, Brooklyn, N. Y., aged 82 years. He was born in England and for the last half century had lived in Brooklyn, most of which time he spent in the Bushwick section. He had outlived his wife and family and is survived by one niece, Miss Florence Innes. He was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The executive committee of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association has decided on Milwaukee as the place for the fall show, and as early a date in September as possible for the time.
One of the largest department stores in the west has given free space and permits an entrance fee to aid in defraying expenses. This virtually guarantees the success of the show, as all money pledged can be used for premiums.
The aim is to make this exhibition the largest ever held west of the Alleghenies, for the gladiolus and dahlia, and also to include other flowers, especially the perennials, that are in bloom at that date. Nearly $100 already has been pledged for premiums, without a canvass, and as soon as arrangements are perfected a thorough canvass will be made. The design is to raise not less than $250 for premiums alone. Already a sweepstakes premium of $25 cash has been pledged for the best general exhibit, to include both the gladiolus and dahlia, and wherever the matter has been discussed the best of encouragement has been given. Association Bulletin No. 3 will be issued as soon as the list is fairly complete, and necessary arrangements made, so that a definite program can be announced.
All growers west of the Alleghenies, and especially those whose locality is in the great central west, are cordially invited to cooperate and work for the best display yet given. This is essentially a growers' proposition, and the growers are invited to come to their own.

Full particulars will be given as soon as possible, and any inquiries will be cheerfully answered by the secretary, at Benton Harbor, Mich., or H. W. Koerner, vice-president, Milwaukee, Wis.

E. S. Thompson, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It was a wonderful Easter, certainly the greatest Chicago ever has seen in quantity of stock handled, and with most of the wholesalers the greatest in point of money total, though in individual cases growers report that they did not cut enough more flowers to make up for the reluctance of the buyers to pay the usual Easter prices.

There was no shortage of stock in any important line. The first three days of the week preceding Easter were cold and raw. Then came the first three days of spring, bright and warm. The way the plants responded was really surprising. The growers were kept busy cutting, cutting, cutting. The supply, in the end, proved much greater than had been reckoned on at the middle of the week. While the market was fairly well cleaned up Friday night, Saturday's receipts were so heavy that it was impossible to effect a clearance even where buyers' ideas as to prices were freely met. The receipts Sunday morning also were heavy and served to further embarrass some of the commission houses. It therefore was natural that all prices should be easy, with the lines that were longest getting weaker and weaker as the rush subsided.

Taking the list in its usual order,
Beauties were about the only scarcity.
Some houses had enough to go around,

Now your customers want the SPRING FLOWERS We have them all—Of finest quality

The most popular of the spring flowers is the Sweet Pea—we are selling enormous quantities daily and they make a hit wherever used. Also fine Snapdragon, Daisies, Pansies, Valley, Tulips, Jonquils, Candytuft and Mignonette, each flower having its special uses and friends. You need them all, every day. If we supply you, your flowers will please your customers.

BEAUTIES

Spring Crop is On

You will like the Beauties we are now getting in in rapidly increasing quantity. It is the spring crop, cut from plants that have not been forced in winter—grown specially to meet the heavy demand that comes after Easter. All lengths. Try some of these now—we know you will want them regularly once you see how salable they are.

KILLARNEYS

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carry the finest flowers of any in this market.

CARNATIONS

A Very Large Crop On

but others were short; there was no surplus and prices were stiff. Roses were in large supply, of splendid quality and in the greatest request ever known at Easter. Prices held firm.

For two or three weeks it had been voiced around: "There won't be any too many carnations"; but it proved that carnations were the most overplentiful flowers on the list. There is, however, some difference in reports. A few houses say they cleaned up well, at regular prices, but a look in at other houses Saturday afternoon was enough to show what was happening. In fact, as early as Thursday evening telegrams were sent out offering first-class stock at $25 per thousand and Friday night sales of low grade carnations were made at $15 and even $10. The carnations responded to the warm weather in a wonderful manner, the arrivals Saturday afternoon and Sunday being the heaviest of the week. A clean-up was simply out of the question.

Lilies did well. There was no shortage, except, perhaps, of the longer stems, but there was no surplus. Prices held at about those of other years, the bulk of the stock being sold at from 8 to 12 cents, with the best bringing 15 cents and the shorts 6 cents, although some sales at 5 cents are reported and a few culls were left. One of the special features was the arrival of several thousand lilies on consignment to various commission houses from Domoto Bros., of San Francisco. The express was about $15 per thousand. The flowers and buds were drawn up and wrapped so tightly in tissue paper that they did not entirely resume their natural form on being unwrapped. The wholesaler who received the first lot refused a second consignment Saturday, although he had succeeded in moving a part of the first shipment at fair prices. Others accepted the Saturday arrivals in the belief that they could at least realize the express, but quantities were still on hand Tuesday.

Single violets were not plentiful, but there were all the Rhinebeck doubles that could be used, and more. Valley was plentiful. Tulips came in heavily and proved slow sale; many were lost. Daffodils and jonquils went well, but the southern outdoor stock proved difficult to move at any price. Sweet peas sold well, taking the place of violets, but the supply was so extremely large that prices were a disappointment to some who depend rather largely on this crop.

Such items as antirrhinums, mignonette, stocks, candytuft, lupines, marguerites, pansies, callas, freesia, etc., were difficult to convert into cash at their usual values because of the large supply and the abundance of the big staples.

The market opened quiet Monday, April 8. There was a fair amount of buying for the morning after a holiday, showing that nearly all the retailers had cleaned up pretty well. But stock came in heavily and prices were down. Tuesday the supply was still larger and the season of spring bargain sales appears to be on. Smilax is the only scarce item.

Easter at Retail.

In spite of a none too pleasant day, April 7, and a heavy shower in the middle of Saturday afternoon, most of the retailers had their banner Easter. The three big selling days were delightfully warm and bright and the business done by the downtown stores was limited only by their ability to wait on the trade. With the outlying stores it was much the same. The report is general that the sales were fully as numerous as at any other Easter, while many report a big increase made possible by enlarged facilities. Some say they sold at the usual Easter prices, but others report having been able to offer exceptional values on one or more items.

On the whole, it was an exceptionally profitable Easter for the retailers, especially for those whose trade is not too critical, for it was possible to buy at least a part of the Easter stock at lower prices than usual. About the usual business was done in plants; there may have been some increase here with a few stores, but most of the increase in sales was on cut flowers, of which there was no limit to the supply. Of course, there are exceptions. A few had plants left, notably the larger azaleas, and some had short lilies in pots to use up in work. Others, notably the stores that do a big Saturday night and Sunday trade, say the cut flowers did not go as expected, but few were stuck, as they had not stocked heavily.

been incorporated to do a general nursery, horticultural and florist business and has purchased from the Geo. Wittbold Co. the nursery land and stock at Edgebrook, covering over twenty-three acres and with a total value of approximately $31,000. The greenhouses, barns and other buildings pertaining to the greenhouse branch of the industry remain the property of the Geo. Wittbold Co., but Otto Wittbold will retain charge as superintendent until other satisfactory arrangements can be made.

The new company has a capital stock of $20,000, the controlling interest being held by Otto Wittbold. The other stockholders are Mrs. Emma Wittbold, his mother, and Mrs. Elsie Wittbold, his wife. By the terms of the agreement the stockholders in the Otto Wittbold Nursery Co. have released their stock in the Geo. Wittbold Co. in exchange for the nursery land, stock, wagons, horses, etc., the transaction being practically an even exchange.

Various Notes.

John Mangel opened his new store, formerly occupied by Rowe, in time for Easter. The old store will be abandoned toward the end of the month. The new place is unique. It is quite unlike any other flower store in Chicago. The decorations and fixtures are French, of the time of Louis something-or-other, and present a truly artistic appearance—but a florist gets an impression of its impractical character, there being no storage space, no work-room and not half enough ice-box space for a business the size of Mangel's.

George Asmus, chairman of the premium committee of the Horticultural Society, has called a meeting at the Union, 6 p. m. April 11, Dutch treat, to prepare a premium list for Chicago's next spring show.

A. Lange says he had a staff of sixty people for the Easter rush. The wholesalers say his purchases were something enormous.

Wietor Bros. report much the best Easter in their experience, saying they cut more and better stock than ever before.

The Easter Market.

The wonderful growth of the love for plants and flowers in the hearts of the people is clearly shown in the immense quantities distributed this Easter. The quantity of each, and their combined value, was the largest in the history of this market. In the home, in the church, on the street, they were seen everywhere in an endless variety of form and color that well-nigh defies description.

The Plant Market.

The lily, preëminently the Easter plant, is as popular as of old when well grown, with clean foliage, good height and plenty of perfect flowers. Owing to better culture, the hydrangea has gained favor. Well-flowered azaleas were less numerous than usual, a disappointment to many. The spiræa was also less plentiful than last season, many roots intended for this market being damaged last fall in transit.

The rose made a stride forward, not undisputed, as favorite. The varieties flowered were more numerous, better grown and therefore more popular in both the tall and the dwarf types. There is a range of color and profusion of bloom not dreamed of a few years ago, when there was only the Crimson Rambler. The hardiness and keeping qualities of this class of roses have much to do with their popularity.

The shipping orders for plants took much fine stock to other cities, keeping the packers and express companies busy for ten days before Good Friday. The local demand lasted throughout the week before Easter, ending in clearance sales on Easter eve in vacant stores or on pavements in busy parts of the city. There was little stock left in the greenhouse, in the store, or on the street that was fit to offer. There were some genistas left, as the demand for yellow that does not always prove satisfactory as a keeper, though beautiful, is limited. There were some poor lilies left, some daffodils and many tulips, also belated daisies with few open flowers. Rhododendrons sold extremely well in moderate numbers. Hyacinths were generally good and were everywhere; their size and brilliancy of color made them the moderate-purse-owner's friend.

The fashionable shops individualized well-flowered specimen plants and rich basket combinations of growing plants of dazzlingly gorgeous colors, often bedecked with ribbon. The simpler shops contented themselves with more modest specimens and pans, crepe paper covered. The growers used no embellishment, depending solely on nature's beauty aided by cultural skill; each had his hosts of followers.

There were some plant novelties, among them hydrangeas of European breed that afforded a choice in shades of pink unattained by Otaksa. Ferns of Boston type rivaled the blooming plants for Easter favors, while palms and foliage plants were in request. Lilac, deutzia, valley in pots and pans, daisies and bougainvillea were grown and sold in moderate quantities. The weather was ideal, aiding, as fine weather only can, the sale of Easter plants.

Cut Flowers.

The weather was extraordinarily favorable to the market, which opened poorly and improved steadily until the close. The buyers were busy with their plants on Thursday. The out-of-town demand, excellent though it was, could not begin to move the stock, much of which was poor. This lack of quality was partly due to holding, explained, though not excused, by the dullness of the preceding days. The market improved Friday. Better stock came, too, and by Saturday business was brisk, resulting in an excellent clean-up at moderate prices. The exceptions were snapdragon, white lilac, gardenias, small pink roses and tulips; all these were in oversupply.

Lilies unexpectedly advanced under brisk buying on Saturday, just when they usually decline. Good cut lilies brought $12.50 per hundred, or from $10 to $15, as conditions varied.

The exceptions to moderate prices were Beauties, Richmond and sweet peas. Beauties generally brought 50 cents. On Friday they were unexpectedly short of the demand and on Saturday orders for them could not be obtained. Good Richmond were shy at 20 cents to 25 cents. Sweet peas rivaled the violet for corsage bunches. The best brought $1 to $1.50 per hundred; far more went at from 40 cents to 75 cents. The quantity sold was enormous. Local violets, weakened by absence of the singles, were unequal to the emergency, New York supplying much of the stock used; $10, occasionally $12.50 to $15, was the price per thousand. Good grade valley realized $35 to $40 per thousand. There were about enough cattleyas; $6 to $7.50 per dozen was the usual price. Mosses had the preference.

Carnations were in active demand and fancy Ward brought $6, a very few $8 per hundred; select stock $40 per thousand, while carnations that reached the market in poor condition were well sold at less than half that price. White were more eagerly sought than colors up to Saturday morning, though white, of course, is less grown. Roses were in heavy supply. The majority of the stock was of short and poorer grades. The fancies were about equal to the demand. Killarney sold at from $15 to $20 for a few, while Bride and Maryland brought $10 to $12. Far more of these varieties brought $6 to $8, the shorts going fairly well at about $40 per thousand when in good condition.

Southern daffodils were the feature of the bulb market. They arrived in increased numbers and were welcomed by the buyers who wanted much for their money. The prices ranged from $5 to $7.50 per thousand, occasionally $10. The small varieties brought less than the lowest quotation. Greenhouse stock was favored by the quality buyers, Emperor leading at $3 per hundred. Tulips were generally poor, but even good ones found tardy recognition. Pansies were in brisk demand at about 50 cents per hundred. Callas went best for Holy Thursday. Prices ranged from $1.50 to $2 per dozen, a few sales for select stock reaching higher. Daisies were not much sought. Greens were brisk indeed; asparagus sprays in bunches particularly so, also smilax to a lesser degree at from $15 to $20 per hundred strings.

Easter Week.

The market is declining since Easter. The quantity of roses coming into town is large. To move them lower prices were needed. Valley has not had time to recover from the Easter scarcity, under the influence of heavy after-Easter buying. Sweet peas are also in brisk request. The advance guard of belated Easter lilies is coming in, only scouts as yet; the market has not felt the effect of the army to follow.

Various Notes.

Maurice Fuld spoke before the Germantown Horticultural Society in Association hall, on "Herbaceous Perennials," on the evening of April 8.

The plans for bridging the main building of M. Rice & Co. with the new annex are now ready. The extra floor space is much needed.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For a week before Easter cut flower receipts were comparatively light and everything kept cleaned up well. Good Friday saw quite an active market, and by that time it became apparent from the steady advance in prices that not only plants but cut flowers were going to be in short supply. Saturday saw a veritable boom, and it is many years since there was so good an Easter market, even if it has been equaled. Everyone seems to be thoroughly tired out, but happy. It was truly a strenuous time and business far exceeded the most sanguine expectations.

Pot plants were more in demand than ever and a decided shortage existed in some lines, growers being unable to fill orders they had taken. April 6 was clear and summerlike, with a shade temperature of 80 degrees and no wind. Easter was also clear and warm. This made wrapping up of plants unnecessary and saved much labor. Easter lilies were in short supply and cleaned up quickly at $10 to $12.50 per hundred. Some were sold to dry goods stores at lower prices, but these were not of the best quality. Ramblers, such as Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and Lady Gay, had a great sale. Crimson Rambler was little seen, but quite a few of the baby ramblers were sold, and good hybrid perpetuals had a large sale. Azaleas were abundant, but were not so well flowered as in previous years. Of spiræas and hydrangeas the supply was abundant. Genistas were also in large supply, the medium sized plants selling well. Lilacs were abundant and of good quality. Less acacias than usual were seen, but they sold well, as did ericas and boronias. Well-flowered marguerites were not overplentiful and more could have been sold. Mrs. Sander in pans proved a good seller. Dutch bulbous stock proved to be in short supply. For well-flowered geraniums the call was good. Forced deciduous shrubs in variety, kalmias, rhododendrons, metrosideros, lily of the valley, palms and ferns all met with a good sale and it was far and away the best plant Easter Boston has ever had.

Coming to cut flowers, the fears that there would be a heavy lot of held back stock thrown on the market at the last moment proved for once to be groundless. Roses were in quite heavy crop. They made little advance in price, except on Saturday, when the boom in carnations helped them. All varieties were of good quality. Tafts, Beauties, Wards, Hillingdons, Radiance and Killarneys were well sold out. Carnations, which had been picking up in price through the week, boomed April 6, when it developed that there was to be a shortage of them, and as high as $10 per hundred was paid in some cases. Nothing worth while went below $3, and quantities sold at $5 and $6, about double the prices of a year ago. Single violets made practically their farewell appearance, and were in short supply at $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Doubles made $1. Sweet peas were superb and cleaned up finely, as did marguerites, especially the yellows. Snapdragon made $1 to $2 per dozen, some extra fine making more. Pink was the best seller. English primroses and blue cornflowers met with a fine sale.

Dutch bulbous stock sold out better than ever before, although there was a heavy supply. Gardenias sold at from $6 per dozen downwards. Cattleyas were chiefly Schroederæ, but the call for these was not great. Asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri, adiantum, smilax and hardy ferns were all in great demand. Cut lilies made $10 to $12.50 per hundred, and more were wanted. Candidums made $6 to $8. Easter of 1912 will always be remembered with pleasure, for certainly it reached a new high water mark, both in plants and cut flowers.

expected and demand good, with Easter rates well maintained on some varieties. Many parties, weddings, etc., this week should make business good.

Various Notes.

William Sim had over 200,000 Princess of Wales violets for Easter, as well as an immense pick of sweet peas, many of these having 18-inch to 24-inch stems. His pansies also were superb.

I am pleased to report Thomas Pegler as coming along nicely. He is now at his home in Wollaston and hopes to be able to resume business soon, possibly this week.

John McFarland sold 18,000 valley and all of his 6,000 pots of giganteum lilies for Easter.

A. L. Silloway, of Maynard, had a splendid lot of snapdragons for the Eas-

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

ter trade, as had W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, has a white seedling carnation for which the demand is strong. He had an almost insatiable call for his pink snapdragon.

Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, has one or two of his violet houses planted with cucumbers, which look fine. He had 75,000 single violets for Easter and says he could have sold twice as many.

W. R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, had a splendid lot of Killarneys and Richmond roses April 6, which B. J. McGinty soon cleared out.

W. A. Hastings has been handling the bulb stock of John J. Fee, at the Boston Flower Exchange, during Mr. Fee's enforced absence on account of rheumatism.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 16. There will be a lecture, fine exhibits, a question box and plenty of interest for everyone. It has been decided to postpone the annual banquet until autumn.

Arthur E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, leaves April 15 for Bar Harbor, Me., to become manager of the Mount Desert Nurseries. His many friends here wish him every success in his new and enlarged field. He is succeeded at the arboretum by Christian Van der Voet, lately with Duncan Finlayson, on the Larz Anderson estate.

W. W. Edgar Co. was simply overwhelmed with Easter business, having to turn down or cut on many orders. Mr. Bartsch, the manager, says they never experienced such a rush.

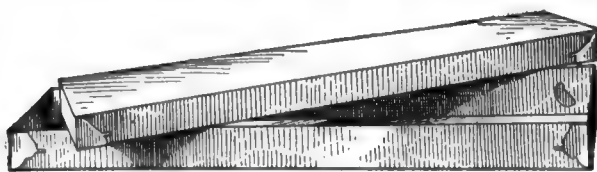

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, had attractive Easter windows. They had a splendid lot of plants, while among flowers they had a grand lot of cat-tleas, anemones, Spanish iris and agathæas, or blue marguerites.

The W. E. Doyle Co., on Boylston street, was more than pleased with the Easter trade. The big, handsome store never had a more cleaned out appearance than on the evening of April 6.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, sold 90,000 double violets for Easter. John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, had over 75,000 and each says he could have sold many more.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. never experienced such a tremendous Easter rush before. In addition to cut flowers they had a great call for greenery.

They found trouble in securing violets and some other flowers.

Penn's did a rousing business, both at the Bromfield street and temporary Tremont street stores, their plant trade being immense.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. started the annual spring auction sale for nursery stock April 5.

Galvin's, at their Tremont street and Back Bay stores, were crowded to the doors, and their autos and teams had to work long hours making deliveries.

ists, sold out clean and had the best Easter on record.

Business splendid, sales away ahead of all previous years, and extent of sales only limited by difficulty in securing flowers, was the experience of Welch Bros.

Montrose Greenhouses had an unusually heavy cut of roses for Easter, and their efficient salesman, E. A. Stickel, had no trouble in clearing them out in good season.

Sidney Hoffman, at his big Massachusetts avenue store, was rushed as never before.

John Barr, of South Natick, had a heavy Easter pick of high grade carnations. They sold like hot cakes at the Boston Coöperative Market.

James Wheeler came out strong with carnations, snapdragons and yellow marguerites. He had some of the finest snapdragons on the market.

Carbone's, on Boylston street, was a veritable hive of industry for Easter. Here are always to be found many plants not common, and critical customers always find something to suit them.

Arnold & Petros, on Boylston street, were surprised with their volume of business and were kept on the jump. This new firm is doing well.

The hot weather of April 5 and 6 caused a great rush of trade at the seed stores. The season has been an erratic one and promises to be drawn out quite late.

George Garden, of Beverly Cove, is hoping to attend the big international show in London at the end of May.

W. N. Craig.

Lewiston, Me.—Ernest Saunders, the Main street florist, has purchased the property known as the Daggett farm, at Greene, Me., and will plant 1,500 apple trees on it this spring.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Princeton, Ill., where his greenhouses are located. Percy Jones is handling his wholesale department.

President John F. Kidwell, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, reports that during Easter week over 200,000 carnations were moved.

E. E. Pieser says Easter again demonstrated the fact that the cut flower market is a weather market. According to his view, had it not been for the shower Saturday afternoon and the threatening condition Sunday morning, each local buyer's purchases would have been enough heavier to have cleaned up everything that was left.

At Kyle & Foerster's, F. F. Benthay, who is the Nestor of the wholesalers, says that the Chicago market never has handled such great quantities of stock at any previous Easter, and that the shipping demand never was so heavy as this year.

Miss Hertha V. Tonner was made ill by the Easter rush, and at the opening of the present week her sister, Miss Olga Tonner, was in charge of the business.

Wendland & Keimel are making extremely rapid progress in the planting of their big range of rose houses. The stock came from A. N. Pierson and is fine.

There was only a small attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club April 4, and an adjournment was taken to April 11, when the business of the evening will be resumed. There were a number of resignations, some of them from officers of the club, the election of a new secretary being made necessary.

C. W. McKellar has made a lease on room 209 in the Atlas block. This is at the west end of the hall and brings him just west of Wietor Bros. and Peter Reinberg. The space is more than double what Mr. McKellar now has and the room has a private entrance from Randolph street, as well as one from the hall along which so many wholesalers are grouped. Mr. McKellar has a two years' lease on his old quarters, but the room is so well located he expects no difficulty in disposing of it.

John Kruchten says that since warmer weather has arrived his southern customers are calling for Bride and Maid instead of the Killarneys.

At Winterson's Seed Store, John P. Degnan says counter trade opened up promptly when the weather turned warm.

Gus Swanson, who ships his flowers to Zech & Mann, has done so well in a rented establishment that he is building greenhouses for himself at River Forest. He has had the L. Hansen range of five houses at 7322 Ridge avenue, which are again for rent. This is the second tenant in three years who has done so well in these houses that he has built his own place.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., who lives at Batavia, says he did not see his home for three days during the Easter rush.

A. L. Randall and Mrs. Randall left April 10 for West Baden.

Martin Peterson says he had so good an Easter that he has changed his mind about selling out.

The Easter rush required the services at the Clark street store of the Geo. Wittbold Co., of Miss Nagel, regularly stenographer at the Edgebrook greenhouses.

One of the visitors at Foley's factory last week was Edw. J. Strubel, a vegetable grower at Avonia, Pa.

There's a new boss at Otto Wittbold's. The stork brought him bright and early on the morning of April 3 and he weighed nine pounds. Both mother and son are doing well. The new arrival is the fourth, being preceded by two girls and a boy.

Business is heavier than ever before with the John C. Moninger Co. In fact, the greenhouse building this year bids fair to show a considerable increase over last season, which was considered abnormal by practically everyone in the trade.

H. J. Stockmans, landscape gardener, and the west park commissioners are looking over the nurseries near Chicago before buying stock for this year's plantings.

Fred Lautenschlager is telling a story that he heard in the east on his recent trip for Kroeschell Bros. Co. It concerns a greenhouse owner who witnessed the approach of a bad storm and, fearing the destruction of the houses, placed a board across the purlins and hung on till the blow was over. He says he never before realized how small we are when nature is in action. Nevertheless, his weight may have been what saved the range.

The Boston Store had its usual Easter sale of lilies at 29 cents per pot, neither delivered nor wrapped. It was the shortest stock, sold at practically cost price. Many thousands were sold, all at the same price regardless of the number of flowers, an officer being needed to keep the buyers in line.

George Reinberg has started to rebuild the houses that were put out of commission last September by the wind storm. Fourteen houses were damaged at that time and a like number will be erected.

With the gas leaks closed up, the crops of J. A. Budlong are coming along in fine shape. The damage done to a couple of houses of Marylands was not as serious as at first thought and they will be in crop before long.

The big storm on the afternoon of April 6 assumed the proportions of a tornado north of town, but the only greenhouses hit appear to have been those of a vegetable grower named Jennetine, in Evanston. Three houses 27x300 were demolished and several people at work in them badly cut. The wrecked plant is reported to have cost $7,000 last year. Michael Hermes' windmill has been blown down, some glass being broken.

Waco, Tex.—An addition is being built at the rear of the structure occupied by Wolfe the Florist, on Franklin street. This will provide extra space which Mr. Wolfe greatly needs.

Columbus, O.—The Columbus Floral Co. has 77,500 square feet of glass and is erecting two new houses 35x400, which will give a total of 105,500 square feet of glass. The material is being furnished by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.

ST. LOUIS.

Easter Business.

The Easter business done in St. Louis this year was large, judging from the reports of all the leading west end establishments, where the great bulk of the business was done. The downtown store people also say they all had a busy time on Saturday and Sunday, and it was not until late on Sunday that all the deliveries were made. The weather early on Saturday was dark and threatening, but toward noon the sun came out and the day was ideal for business and a good day for moving plants. Easter Sunday, although cool, was clear. Easter weather conditions, on the whole, therefore, were fairly satisfactory. The sale of blooming plants was perhaps greater than ever, from the looks of some of the show houses of the uptown florists.

The splendid weather for the week before Easter showed its effect on the cut flower market. The prices the wholesalers thought they would get, early in the week, fell flat and they had a hard time trying to move the large quantities of flowers that came into this market. At all the four wholesale markets the stock was piled up high. Carnations were so plentiful that the best brought only $2.50 per hundred on Sunday morning. From the looks of the stock, there was a lot of pickling done by some of the growers. This stock was left on the hands of the wholesalers. There was an abundance of roses to be had at any time, and great quantities of all seasonable bulb stock. Easter lilies were fine and in greater quantity than the trade could handle. Violets did not look so well, but the market had plenty at all times.

In summing up the reports from all in the trade, it can safely be said that this Easter was as good as any, and in the sale of plants it was probably better than most Easters.

Various Notes.

Many of the Easter window displays were of the highest type. Among the gorgeous sights along Grand avenue were the windows of Waldbart, Ayres, the Metropolitan, Windler, Bergstermann and Beyer. On the north side, Bentzen, Mullanphy and Huettemann had a raft of excellent plants, and business was great with all of them. Those farthest west, including Newman, the two Webers, Young, Ellison, Kalisch, Miller and Sanders, say they had a great Easter business, and it seemed from the looks of their places on the following Monday morning that they must have sold lots of stock. As to the downtown store men, Ostertag, Young, Badaracco, Sander, the Paris, Grimm & Gorly, Siegel and the Riessen, they all carried a big stock of cut flowers, which sold well and at good prices.

gathering. The principal speakers during the day were Governor Hadley, Park Commissioner Dwight Davis and City Forester Julius Koenig. Each planted a tree.

William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., says that they had a splendid Easter trade and any kind of plant sold well. They will be busy this week, with decorations to furnish for three large, fashionable weddings.

The Paris Floral Co. will vacate its present quarters, at Broadway and Olive street, this week and move to Sixth and St. Charles streets, where they have been operating a branch store for the last two weeks. Mr. Foster thinks the location better than the old stand.

William Bouche, the landscape gardener, now has three titles bestowed upon him; he is superintendent of Park

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE peak of the mail orders appears to have been passed during the first week in April.

A CARGO of English potatoes that arrived at New York April 1 consisted of 6,000 tons.

THE Crine Packing & Seed Co. has been incorporated at Morganville, N. J., with a capital of $200,000, by Robert V. Crine and others.

REORDERS are presenting a peculiarly difficult problem for the wholesale seedsmen this season. If they can be filled at all it usually is only at an advance in price.

BURBANK SELLS OUT.

A newspaper dispatch from Santa Rosa, Cal., April 5 said: "Luther Burbank sold all his fruit, flower and plant creations, present and future, to Rollo Hough, of Oakland, and W. Garner Smith, of San Francisco, today. No statement of the sum that changed hands was made. Hough and Smith are understood to have the backing of capitalists whose names are withheld. Hereafter Burbank will have nothing to do with the marketing of his products, but will be free to devote his entire time to experimental work. He wishes to leave commercial life altogether for science."

To avoid late deliveries, I will send all early orders of Winter Sweet Pea Seed directly from our ranch in Lompoc, Cal. These will reach my farthest customers not later than August 10th, saving over four weeks' time. Send all letters of importance to Lompoc, Cal. We will have all the leading colors and many novelties. Orders booked now. New complete list will be sent out in May.

Here is a testimonial from one of many satisfied customers:

Mt. Airy, Md., Feb. 26, 1912.

Dear Sir:—We have been cutting very fine peas this season from your stock. Stems 18 and 20 inches, with 3, 4 and 5 flowers, and in several instances with 6 flowers to a stem. You deserve and receive great honor from the trade for bringing Winter flowering Sweet Peas to their present high position in the market. You have already done more for the florist than the great Burbank will ever do.

JESSE P. KING.

We have also only the best Spencer and Unwin late Sweet Pea Seed on hand now, also other Florists' flower seed. Send for list.

Ian Seed Growers Co., San Jose, says crop never looked better at this season. The Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, says conditions are excellent. C. C. Morse & Co. report a total of nine inches of rain in the San Juan valley and the indications good. Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, says the present rain is the best of the season and that he now expects a fair crop, although the rain came too late for a full one; his total precipitation for the season now is seven and one-half inches.

LEONARD'S NEW FARM.

The Leonard Seed Co., of Chicago, has just made a lease for a term of years on a tract of 500 acres of land lying southwest of Chicago on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, about twelve miles from the Chicago warehouse. This farm will be used exclusively as a stock improvement and testing ground in connection with the experiment and trial grounds already maintained by the company at Columbus and Antigo, Wis. For the last six years the Leonard Seed Co. has done a great deal of experimental and special work on peas and beans, as well as other lines. In many cases stocks have been worked up from single seeds or pods. A specially trained force of men is used in this branch of the business and with the acquisition of this additional 500 acres of land much will be added to the efficiency and scope of the work.

LIMA GROWERS INVESTIGATED.

The government is investigating the Lima Bean Growers' Association, of which J. M. Waterman is manager, with headquarters at Los Angeles, to see if it is a combination in restraint of trade.

"The Lima Bean Association handles about forty per cent of the commercial Lima crop in its territory," stated Mr. Waterman. "Its competitors are the J. K. Armsby Co. and A. & H. Levy Co., the latter of Oxnard." Charges were made, according to Mr. Waterman, by several small people, but he said, "I explained at Washington that we wanted either a clean bill or federal steps." Mr. Waterman stated that the Lima Bean Association handles about $2,500,000 worth of the product a season. He admitted that when the association was organized three years ago Lima beans were selling at 3 or 4 cents a pound; he said they now ranged from 5¼ to 5½ cents and have reached 6 cents at times. "But despite this apparent rise in prices," Mr. Waterman continued, "Lima beans are still as cheap to the consumer. The organization simply has imposed the advance upon those coming between the grower and the consumer; retail prices are practically the same as three years ago."

NEW YORK PURE SEED BILL.

You would probably like to advise your readers through your columns that a New York seed bill, known as the Wilson Pure Seed Bill (No. 1455-1920, Int. 1265), introduced in the Assembly March 7, 1912: "An Act to amend the agricultural law in relation to inspection and sale of seeds," has passed in the Assembly and Senate, and is now before the governor for his consideration.

When their roads get worse the Chinese strengthen their carts. The idea of mending the roads never occurs to them. That's the way with some florists—when their stock is bad, they fail to get at the real source of the trouble. In lily bulbs a solid foundation must be laid, by securing only the very best quality obtainable. Horseshoe Brand bulbs will average very high in quality—higher than any brand known. The reason is because they are planted down deep in the soil and carefully cultivated—not merely stuck in the ground and mushroomed to size. And the prices are very reasonable for all that. Besides, you may have them (if ordered in advance) f. o. b. Pacific Ports, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Memphis or New York. This is no small advantage, for freight is considerable in the aggregate. Besides Japan bulbs, the Horseshoe Brand Harrisii, packed by Stephens Brothers in Bermuda, are the height of perfection in Bermuda lilies. None better on the Islands. Don't be mistaken about Harrisii either, for the crop is very much improved over the crop of former years. Prices very reasonable. As Easter is early in 1913, every grower should have at least a box of Harrisii. Send for the Book of Bulbology, containing prices.

in which I would particularly call attention to the following passage, on page 2, line 13: "Containing in excess three per centum by count of foul and foreign seeds."

My principal objection to the bill in its present form is the word "count," for which the word "weight" should be substituted, as the method provided in the bill has been found to be impractical. The Department of Agriculture at Washington make all their tests by weight, and furthermore, all state seed analysts throughout the country recommend that such tests should be made by weight and not by count.

As many seedsmen in New York state have their seeds tested by the department at Washington, all such tests would be useless under the proposed law, and dealers doing an interstate business would be seriously handicapped, as they would be obliged to make two tests, one by weight and one by count, because the results made by each test vary materially.

I believe if the dealers throughout the state would file their protest with Governor Dix, writing him especially along these lines, he might be induced to withhold his signature from the bill in its present form.

Marshall H. Duryea,
New York State Correspondent
American Seed Trade Association.

The full text of the bill is as follows:

AN ACT

To Amend the Agricultural Law, in Relation to Inspection and Sale of Seeds.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Article fifteen and sections three hundred and forty and three hundred and forty-one of chapter nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act in relation to agriculture, constituting chapter one of the consolidated laws," are hereby renumbered to be article sixteen and sections three hundred and sixty and three hundred and sixty-one, respectively.

§ 2. Such chapter is hereby amended by adding thereto a new article, to be article fifteen thereof, to read as follows:

ARTICLE 15.

Inspection and Sale of Seeds.

§ 340. Inspection and sale of seeds.

§ 341. Samples, publication of results of examination.

§ 340. Inspection and sale of seeds. Within the meaning of this article "agricultural seeds" are defined as the seeds of alfalfa, Canadian blue grass, Kentucky blue grass, alsike clover, crimson clover, red clover, white clover, vetch orchard grass, rape, red top, and timothy which are to be used for sowing or seeding purposes. No person, firm or corporation shall sell, offer, expose or have in his possession for sale for the purposes of seeding, any seeds of grasses or clovers, of the kind known as agricultural seeds, containing in excess of three per centum by count of foul or foreign seeds, unless every receptacle, package, sack or bag containing such seeds is plainly marked or labeled with the per centum of such foul or foreign seeds contained therein.

§ 341. Samples, publication of results of examination. The commissioner of agriculture or his duly authorized representatives shall take samples of seed in triplicate in the presence of at least one witness and in the presence of such witness shall seal such samples and shall at the time of taking tender, and if accepted, deliver TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.

Easter trade was exceptionally good. Never before has there been so pleasing a display of cut flowers and potted plants as this year. There is a great increase in the demand for good potted plants of all kinds.

The outlook this year for bedding stock of all kinds is good; the demand will far exceed the supply of home-grown stock.

Frank Paine has opened a store at 129 East Front street, which has proved a great convenience to those of his customers who were unable to visit the greenhouses.

The new car belonging to the Queen City Floral Co. was given a tryout last week and proved a welcome facility during the rush. This firm's new greenhouse has also been a great advantage, but more houses will be needed in the near future.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies five pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

THE mails continue to be extremely irregular, particularly between Chicago and the Pacific coast. Letters from three different cities intended for publication in this department last issue were a full week on the road and arrived a day too late.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Spokane, Wash.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy against the Inland Nursery and Floral Co., corner Nora avenue and Washington street, was filed March 22 in federal court by the Madison Lumber Mill Co., W. P. Fuller & Co., Fairbanks-Morse Co. and Hughes & Co., creditors. The petition alleges that the Inland Nursery and Floral Co. owes the Madison Lumber Mill Co. $466.50, W. P. Fuller & Co. $776.85 and Fairbanks-Morse Co. $971.73.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

At the date of this writing, it is not possible to give an exact report of the business done at Easter, but only a general idea of it. There was no scarcity of stock. The weather had been favorable for some time previously and the demand for almost everything had been light, so that no one had been forced to cut closely. Lilies were abundant, both pot-grown and otherwise. The prices were in most cases a shade lower than they were one year ago. Shipping to interior towns seemed to be good. Carnations were plentiful also, and the same can be said of roses, with the possible exception of fancy stock. Violets are on the wane. Sweet peas are daily becoming more plentiful and of better quality. Valley is only in fair supply. Tulips of the later sorts sell well and daffodils are about over for the season. Fruit blossoms and all kinds of outside stock helped to make a big Easter showing.

Various Notes.

H. Hayashi & Co., of Elmhurst, will shortly commence the erection of one plant house, 25x200 feet.

George L. Hutchins, general manager of the Portland rose festival, was recently in town.

R. D. Fox, one of California's pioneer nurserymen, for many years located in San Jose, was recently in town for a short visit.

Philip Murray, who represents C. C. Morse & Co. in the southwest, has been in town.

Podesta & Baldocchi had a splendid showing at the funeral of the proprietor of the White House, San Francisco's largest dry goods store.

E. W. McLellan & Co., at Burlingame, had a great quantity of fine stock on hand for the Easter trade. The cut of roses was particularly fine.

The H. M. Sanborn Co., of Berkeley, has leased one-half of its Shattuck avenue store to a stationery firm. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

With order books full and plenty of good stock to use for Easter, the retailers had every reason to feel well satisfied with themselves and conditions generally. As anticipated some time ago, the supply of Easter lilies was ample and the quality was fine, both in pots and cut. In addition to local grown stock, a good deal was shipped in from the northern growers, while retailers had been holding over quite a number of cut lilies and these helped out. Tulips from outdoors have been exceedingly fine this year, the rains having been just in time to freshen them up and improve the quality of the flowers. Hyacinths are almost over and only the later varieties of narcissi are left, but these are extra good. Most of the other outdoor flowers are about the same as at last writing, but the roses from outside are much improved. Indoor Beauties have been fine and the demand has kept up well. Orchids are scarce and of poor quality. Valley is good, but more care is necessary in shipping. Some of the cases opened at the wholesale houses show that no care has been taken to firm the flowers, the consequence being that they are bruised and many of the bells are found to be shaken off on arrival.

A visit to the leading retailers on Monday, April 8, showed that the Easter business was by far the best ever experienced in Los Angeles. Several stores doubled their last year's orders and cleaned out entirely. There were never so many Easter lilies on this market before and practically every plant and cut spike was sold. There was an immense demand for roses, carnations, tulips and violets, and all other stock was cleaned up well. Easter baskets were much better than in former years. There was more variety and better stock and, altogether, it was a clean, profitable Easter for everybody.

At Mountain Beautiful.

The members of the Pasadena Horticultural Society, their wives, sweethearts and children, to the number of about 125, were royally entertained at the Montebello nurseries of Howard & Smith, March 31. Anything in the way of an entertainment that the brothers Howard and George Smith have to do with is going to be done right, and this was no exception. The guests of the MONEY-MAKERS FOR YOU!

Last week and the week previous you no doubt saw our announcement of Mrs. Winters Dahlia and Chrysanthemum Marguerite. In addition to what was said in these announcements, we beg to add that they have proven the most profitable and useful for FLORISTS and FLORAL WORK.

For four months during each of the past seven years the Mrs. Winters Dahlia has been the principal flower used in our floral work. A floral design covered with these beautiful snow-white flowers requires very few other flowers and ferns to make it one of the prettiest and most showy floral pieces.

It is the easiest flower to grow. Blooms continuously all summer until frost, and each flower resembles a Chrysanthemum. One hundred of these tubers will produce from 300 to 600 blooms per week if properly cared for. Mrs. Winters is a better keeper than the average Dahlia, and we frequently use them for floral work five days after being cut.

Mrs. Winters Dahlia is one of the most free-blooming Dahlias known. We have constantly increased our stock from year to year, until now we have 25,000 of these tubers to offer to the trade. We have gathered from our plants flowers measuring over seven (7) inches in diameter.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MARGUERITE PLANTS

This new flower, as large as Asters and as white as driven snow, advertised by us in the two preceding issues of The Florists' Review, is proving a better money-maker each succeeding day. The price remains the same—$8.00 per 100, $70.00 per 1000. Ready for 4-in. pots.

firm spent a pleasant and instructive morning looking over the novelties and stock at the nurseries, both inside and outside, and, being nearly all practical growers, were greatly interested in the many fine things shown. As may be expected, the amaryllises, inside and out, formed the center of attraction and the gorgeous coloring, immense size and general excellence of the collection were freely commented on.

At midday a sumptuous lunch was served in the large packing shed and, needless to say, everyone enjoyed the feast to the limit. Fred Howard has the happy faculty of making each guest feel almost as if the entertainment were prepared specially for him, and was unremitting in his care that all had a good time, which they undoubtedly did.

After lunch there was a little speech-making and a lot of merriment, and, as the whole crowd was together, a photograph was taken, after which as many as possible piled onto the large Packard truck and were driven over to the Dieterich & Turner plant, about half a mile away. After a brief look through the rose and plant houses here, all left for the depot or car line, having spent a most delightful day at "Mountain Beautiful."

Various Notes.

C. Winsel is busy planting nursery stock at his new place at Montebello, and it looks as though there will soon be another big establishment to visit when the picnickers come to the "Heisse Luft" tract. We also noted Henry Kuntz busy on a recent fine day. He says that pruning walnuts is dry work unless one is well prepared.

J. W. Wolters opened his new store on Hill street April 1, and without a doubt he has scored an artistic success. The wall and ceiling decorations are of old-gold, a soft, subdued tint that has no suspicion of garishness. The Italian pottery work is extremely fine and the magnificent stock shown on the opening days gave a delightful finish to the whole store. Large kentias and other plants were well grouped around and the windows were finely treated, one with rustic stonework and ferns, the other with fine stock of Easter lilies and tulips. I had only the merest look in, owing to lack of time, and hope to refer to this further.

The Los Angeles Flower Market has secured a lease on the entire basement, 50x200 feet, which will give much better facilities for handling its business. At the rear end there are good electric elevators, and stock of all kinds will be taken in this way. Included in the Easter orders, up to April 3, were 2,600 pot lilies and they were still pouring in. Unlike many wholesale houses, this firm buys all of its stock outright from the growers, practically nothing being sold on commission. At present nearly a score of the largest growers in the vicinity are under contract to send in the whole of their stock.

The Los Angeles Horticultural Society is working hard to secure the position of horticultural commissioner for William Woods, and at its meeting, held April 2, the committee appointed for the purpose of pushing his candidacy resolved to attend the meeting of the supervisors in a body and endeavor to secure his election. Discussions on various tropical fruits by Ernest Branton, P. D. Barnhart and others were interesting and instructive. Fruits of the jujube were handed around for inspection.

Walter Armacost, of Ocean Park, is sending elegant valley to this market.

O. C. Saakes is handling fine Maman Cochet roses from outdoors.

The H. N. Gage Co. reports the biggest and best Easter business of its career. Choicest stock, handled carefully, and precise attention to details of shipping and packing, have helped toward this most satisfactory state of affairs.

J. J. Foote, representing the Lord & Burnham Co., New York, was in town this week. He has been engaged on the erection of the new range of orchid houses for Mr. Craven, at Pasadena.

A new office is in course of construction at the store of Thee Florists, on Fifth street. This will give additional room and more convenience in handling the largely increasing business here.

The carnations at Borden's greenhouses, at Hollywood, never looked finer than now and there was a magnificent cut for Easter. H. R. Richards.

The Market.

Easter business, so far as can be learned at this date, has been satisfactory. Stock was plentiful and popular prices prevailed. Carnations, roses and lilies seemed to be all that could be wished for. Lilies, ramblers, rhododendrons, azaleas and hydrangeas were of unusually fine quality, with a goodly amount of bulbous stock to fill in. Elegant window effects were noticeable on all sides, basket arrangements being the special feature. Additional store room was necessary in several cases, where space was limited, especially to serve as delivery room.

A REMARKABLE GUM TREE.

The illustration herewith shows what is perhaps the most remarkable tree in the great southland. It is one of the recognized landmarks of Los Angeles, Cal., and a curiosity visited by hundreds of tourists and the trade annually. It is growing at the city sales-yard of Howard & Smith, nurserymen, of Los Angeles and Montebello. This tree is Eucalyptus citriodora, the lemon-scented gum, the foliage of which is as fragrant as that of the lemon-scented verbenas, Aloysia citriodora. It was planted seventeen years ago, by one of the members of the firm, and is now 130 feet high, so that it has made a growth averaging about eight feet per year; yet, with this great height, the diameter at the base is only eleven and three-quarters inches.

The picture shows a steeple-jack climbing the tree to cut off a few straggling limbs. He doubtless chose a calm day for the operation, as the tree is so "whippy" that it sways as much as fifty-six feet from the upright. The first branches are 120 feet from the ground and an idea of what it looks like can be gathered from the fact that the crepe myrtle growing by the adjoining lath house is about twenty feet high. And, like the energetic firm whose property it is, whose members are very proud of it, it is still growing.

The Market.

So far as can be learned at this early date, everyone in the flower business had a good trade at Easter. Large stocks of all kinds of flowers were on hand. Some of the stores found it necessary to take additional premises in order to handle their trade. Roses, carnations and all classes of flowers were selling well and hopes were held out that the increase in business might continue after Easter. Lilies were more numerous than usual and the quality rather better than in former years. Some department stores tried selling them at 20 cents a flower, but that did not seem to prevent legitimate florists from getting 25 cents for theirs. Most of the growers had early advance orders for all their stocks of lilies. Lilacs, deutzias and other forcing shrubs were plentiful and some fine rhododendrons were on sale, while the late azaleas were of first-class quality.

Various Notes.

H. B. Hanson will soon be cutting a fine crop of Ulrich Brunner roses in one of his houses. This rose takes the place of American Beauty here.

The Seattle Pottery Co. recently enlarged its plant, putting in another machine and a new engine, and is now said to have the largest capacity for manufacturing flower pots in the Pacific northwest, under the management of J. O. Hawkins, who for years superintended the Garden City Pottery, at San Jose, Cal. T. W.

HOLLYWOOD, WASH.

A Seattle newspaper recently devoted more than a page of its Sunday edition to an illustrated description of the greenhouses, the gardens and the model dairy farm conducted here by Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Stimson. Mr. Stimson is referred to as "the holder of a great share of the bulging fortune won from one of the oldest and greatest of Seattle's industries, the Stimson lumber mills." On the farm, says the newspaper, Mr. Stimson has built a milk barn that looks big enough to serve as a railroad roundhouse—in reality 44x220 feet and thirty feet high—a feed barn 44x150 feet, a spacious calf barn and a power plant big enough to run a sawmill, by which all the buildings can be served with light, heat, water and power to drive various machines.

The five fine greenhouses, comprising 50,000 square feet of glass, are used entirely for carnations and a large cut is daily sent to the market. The two specialties, therefore, are "cows and carnations." Mr. Stimson gives his attention to his fine breeds of cows, while Mrs. Stimson has charge of the carnations.

Pasadena, Cal.—J. Glasscock, 130 East Colorado street, has sold out his business to W. H. Eldred, who has been connected with the store for some four or five months.

NURSERY NEWS.AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

THE Wyoming Nurseries & Orchards Co., Basin, Wyo., is a new corporation; capital stock, $20,000.

THE Lima Nursery Co., of Lima, O., recently ordered the arrest of a former employee, L. S. Dome, on a charge of embezzlement.

THE nursery work is now at the height of the rush all through the north and east. In the south and the far west the season is pretty well over.

It is reported that within a recent week the nurseries at Boskoop, Holland, shipped from Rotterdam 3,000 cases of stock for export to England and America.

THE Morris Nursery Co., Mt. Holly, N. J., has been incorporated, with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are G. Lear and George Achelis, West Chester, Pa., and Fritz Achelis, New York city.

AN increase in the capital stock of the Wooster Nursery Co., Wooster, O., has been decided upon. The increase is from $10,000 to $50,000, of which $15,000 will be seven per cent preferred stock, the balance being common stock.

H. E. HUMISTON, formerly with the Janesville Floral Co., at Janesville, Wis., is now at Roswell, N. M., where he has taken charge of the development of the El Capitan Farm and Nursery, owned by Dr. V. B. Gregory, of Elkhorn, Wis. The intention is to make extensive plantings of ornamental stock for landscape work.

THE action of the John Heinlen Co. against T. J. Fraser for a dissolution of the copartnership between the parties in the Edenvale Nursery, of San Jose, Cal., was settled March 22, after having been before the court for more than a year in different forms. The copartnership has been dissolved by a decree of court, and the receivership has been terminated. The accounting is settled and there remains $3,286.76 in the hands of the receiver to be paid into court.

HORTICULTURAL IMPORTS.

The S. S. Noordam arrived at New York, April 3, with the following list of horticultural goods from Rotterdam:

Smith & Bolzenthal, 51 cases shrubs.
Vaughan's Seed Store, 51 cases shrubs, 6 cases trees.
Lockey, O. S., 1 case shrubs.
Pierson, F. R., & Co., 6 cases plants.

WINTERSON'S "Worth-While" DAHLIA ROOTS

Florists and dealers generally will find a big sale for Dahlia roots, providing they place before the public stock that is of good appearance and such as is not divided up into small pieces. We furnish large, undivided clumps of all of the varieties listed herein; furthermore, the sorts named have been specially selected for early blooming, which is an important factor in the northern country, where early autumn frosts frequently occur. Those varieties marked with a * are particularly recommended to growers of cut flowers.

DECORATIVE DAHLIAS

Jack Rose—Color a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing.

Delice*—Brilliant crimson-pink, extra fine. Each, 20c; doz., $2.00; per 100, $15.00.

Perle de la Tete d'Or—Pure white, extra.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The Easter weather was fair and somewhat cool, but better than rain. Business was fully up to expectations and everybody was satisfied. There were flowering plants in abundance and they sold exceedingly well. Roses, carnations, violets, jonquils, tulips, hyacinths, etc., were plentiful and were in big demand. Easter lilies were good and were all sold.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. had an immense supply of plants of all kinds, also cut flowers, and did a record trade.

Julius Niednagel & Sons were fortunate in having good cuts of roses and carnations and a large stock of pot plants and were kept busy.

Karl Zeidler used large quantities of roses and carnations and had a good supply of plants. He sold out of Easter lilies.

Ben Kramer had a good stock of everything and enjoyed a big trade.

Louis Fritsch sold out of plants and cut a big lot of carnations, which sold well.

Nellie Goodge was busy and had a big day. In fact, every nice Sunday is a good day for her.

Royston & Fenton sold all the roses they had and could have used many more.

The Market.

Never before have we had such ideal weather for Easter. Thursday, Friday and Saturday it was warm and the sun shone all day. Sunday it turned cooler and we had a little snow flurry, but not until the rush was over. This made delivering a pleasure.

It would be hard to say what plants were the most popular, as every good plant at a moderate price was in demand. Many costly plants were on sale in some of the stores, but the sale of these was limited.

The local market conditions for Easter week were fine. Stock was somewhat scarce the first part of the week, owing to dark weather, but came along nicely later on. All stock was of good quality and prices were most reasonable. Carnations were consigned in enormous quantities, but cleaned up nicely. Toward the end, lilies and roses became quite scarce and many more could have been sold.

The beautiful, warm, summerlike weather which prevailed Thursday, Friday and Saturday created an unheard of demand for violets and sweet peas and many thousands more could have been sold if available. Bulbous stock cleaned up well, despite the fact that it was shipped in by the wagon load. Tulips alone were more or less of a drag, but this is nothing unusual. Valley also was in big demand and sold out.

Various Notes.

A gang of rowdies fighting in front of Hufford & Maebius' store recently broke in the large plate glass window and thereby destroyed considerable stock.

Sullivan's window was most appropriately decorated for Easter. A 7-foot cross of lilies formed the background, while the floor was strewn with wistaria blossoms.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange never locked its doors from early Friday morning until late in the afternoon of Easter Sunday. Robert Rahaley is exceptionally well pleased with this Easter. Business was the best in the firm's history, stock good, and no complaints.

A lavender rhododendron in a 2-foot tub and the plant fully six feet through and in full bloom attracted an unusual amount of attention in front of Schroeter's store.

Breitmeyer's had no time to rest up Easter Monday, being busy with an elaborate wedding decoration.

Charles Warneke reports Easter trade in that section of the city as having been away ahead of all expectations and of all previous years.

E. A. Fetters, as usual, had a dainty window, all in lavender and white.

For Prices See Above.

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses

HYBRID TEA, or EVERBLOOMING ROSES are becoming more popular every year; while not so hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in Winter they carry over in splendid shape and give a wealth of bloom all through the Summer months and late in the Fall till frost checks them.

- AVOCA—Color crimson-scarlet; buds very long and pointed; flowers large and sweetly perfumed. Bundle of 5 100 $1.75 $25.00
 COUNTESS OF GOSFORD—A very beautiful variety of the Hybrid Tea class, somewhat resembling Killarney. Color delicate pink; fine flower and bud; a splendid acquisition. 1.00 17.50
 DEAN HOLE—Large, full flowers; perfectly formed; large petals, silvery carmine shaded salmon; very distinct and free-flowering and a beautiful rose for all purposes. Awarded Gold Medal, N. R. S., of England. 1.00 17.50
 DOROTHY PAGE ROBERTS—A lovely shade of coppery pink suffused with apricot-yellow, more especially at the base of the petals, which are very large, massive and of great substance. Awarded a gold medal, National Rose Society of England. 1.75 25.00
 ELIZABETH BARNES—Satiny salmon-rose, with a fawn center suffused with yellow, outside of petals deep rosy red, shaded with copper and yellow. The shades of color are most beautiful and novel. A truly grand and superb rose. 1.25 20.00
 KONIGIN KAROLA—(Improved Testout.) Magnificent. 40 cents each. 1.75 30.00
 KAISERIN AUGUSTA VICTORIA—An almost pure white rose. Shaded a beautiful primrose. Fine for indoor or outdoor Summer blooming. 1.00 17.50
 THE LYON—Originated by the raiser of Etoile de France. Perpetual flowering. Vigorous grower. The blooms are very large with broad petals, full and globular in form; shrimp-pink at the ends of the petals, center coral-red or salmon-pink shaded with chrome-yellow. Very fragrant. 1.00 17.50

- THE KILLARNEY ROSE—This is a grand rose for either indoor or outdoor cultivation; is a strong grower and the blooms, which are of a beautiful pink, are borne in great profusion. Bundle of 5 100 $1.00 $17.50
 MAMAN COCHET ROSES—The best of all Roses for Summer-flowering and cutting.
 MAMAN COCHET (PINK)—Color a clear, rich pink changing to silvery rose; very double and fragrant. .85 15.00
 MAMAN COCHET (WHITE)—A sport from the above, with all its characteristics; color a beautiful snow-white, at times tinted with the faintest suggestion of blush, the same as is often found in the Bride. .85 15.00
 ROSE, ETOILE DE FRANCE—Superb crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise-red. The Queen of the Everblooming Red Roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous Red Rose ever introduced. .85 15.00
 BESSIE BROWN—Creamy white. 1.25 20.00
 GRUSS AN TEPLITZ—No rose in commerce can compare with this as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson-scarlet all Summer. A strong, vigorous grower. .85 15.00
 RICHMOND—The well-known red rose of commerce. 1.00 17.50
 PRESIDENT CARNOT—Almost pure white rose, shading to soft pink, very distinct and excellent for indoor or outdoor Summer growing. 1.00 17.50
 BETTY—Coppery-yellow, overspread with golden-rose. 1.25 20.00
 MADAME ABEL CHATENAY—Carmine-rose, shaded salmon-pink. 1.00 17.50
 MILDRED GRANT—Cream, with a faint blush of pale rose. 1.00 17.50
 AMERICAN BEAUTY—Almost too well-known for description, but as popular today as twenty years ago. Rosy carmine, shaded salmon, flowers large and full; very floriferous. .85 15.00
 CAROLINE TESTOUT—Bright satin rose, with brighter center, large, full and globular. .85 15.00
 LIBERTY—Very free-flowering, bright crimson-scarlet, of an even shade throughout; floriferous. 1.00 17.50
 MRS. AARON WARD—Indian-yellow, occasionally washed salmon-rose; very large, full, elongated flowers, very free. 1.75 25.00
 MOLLY SHARMAN-CRAWFORD—Large, full flower; color delicate eau-de-Nil, which, as the flower expands, becomes dazzling white. 2.00 30.00
 MME. JULES GROLEZ—A beautiful satiny china-rose color, very bright and attractive. A distinct and pretty rose, which should be planted extensively. 1.00 17.50
 MME. RAVARY—Buds golden yellow, open flowers, nankeen-yellow. 1.25 20.00
 VISCOUNTS FOLKESTONE—A large, full flower of creamy pink, shading to deep salmon-pink at the center; very floriferous. 1.50 22.50
 WILLIAM SHEAN—Purest pink, with delicate veination; petals shell-shape. Gold Medal N. R. S., England. 1.25 20.00
 WHITE KILLARNEY—This white queen of the Irish roses excels any other of its class. The color is pure white. White Killarney, like its prototype, is unusually hardy and without protection has stood severe Winters as far north as Boston. 1.75 25.00

Baby Rambler Roses

- CATHARINE SEIMETH—A white Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. An important fact is that it has the true rose perfume in a high degree. 75 cts for 5, $14.00 per 100.
 BABY DOROTHY—The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flower is similar to Dorothy Perkins. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from Spring until Autumn. 75 cents for bundle of 5, $14.00 per 100.
 MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (The Original Baby Rambler)—A dwarf-growing, everblooming Crimson Rambler. This blooms when a small plant and forms clusters of flowers as large as the Crimson Rambler. 75 cents for 5, $14.00 per 100.

COLUMBUS, O.The Market.

Trade for Easter was about the heaviest in the history of the florists' business. There were loads of stock and almost everyone cleaned up in fine shape. While prices were not so high as usual, this was made up for in the quantity sold. Pot plants moved finely and it is estimated there were almost twice as many plants sold as heretofore. Hundreds of people were seen on the streets carrying armloads of plants. Easter lilies sold finely and were about all cleaned up—and the supply was much heavier than was expected. Cut stock moved well and there was an enormous supply. Carnations were in heavy demand, as usual. Roses were about equal to the call. There was a good demand for violets and they were about cleaned up. Sweet peas were in great request and, while there was a big supply on the market, there were not nearly enough to go the rounds. Valley sold well and was in good supply. The demand for Beauties was good and anything that looked like a red rose moved early. Taking it all around, everyone is well satisfied with the business done.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports a much heavier Easter than ever before. The new window and balcony and double deck in the window gave them quite a good deal of extra space and made a good showing.

Sam Graff got opened in his place in the Keith building and reported heavy business. He has made a venture off of High street and everyone is keeping an eye on the outcome, as everything has been High street heretofore.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business and he cleaned up well on everything.

Metzmaier says he had the largest business in their history.

Business with Graff Bros. was heavy and they cleaned out a big lot of stock.

Franklin Park Floral Co. reports heavy business.

The Livingston Seed Co. had a big run on flowers and plants. J. M.

Mount Vernon, O.—J. A. Byrne, of Relay, Md., has been appointed B. & O. florist here, to succeed the late Peter Ott. Mr. Byrne has been division florist in the east for many years.

The Market.

Another Easter has passed into history and another sales record has been established. Good stock and ideal weather up to Friday night were the prime factors in swelling sales to a new mark. It was essentially a "plant Easter," with everything in bloom selling well. Lilies, as a rule, were hardly as good as in previous years, many of them being short. Some fine hydrangeas were seen, while azaleas averaged good. There was an abundance of Baby Ramblers, and a limited supply of Tausendschon roses proved the best sellers of all. Rhododendrons were fairly plentiful and in good demand. The usual amount of bulbous stock, primulas, spiræas and the like, were in evidence and sold readily. In marked contrast to last year's demand, there was but little call for baskets. Chiffon was used freely in dressing up baskets and plants.

In cut flowers violets were, as usual, in greatest demand. The local supply was inadequate to meet the demand and many thousands were shipped in from Milwaukee. Carnations and Beauties sold fairly well, but other roses went begging for a buyer.

Various Notes.

Miss O'Keefe had an overflow store on Fifth street, near her regular stand.

T. B. Coumandros had an extra store opposite his permanent stand in the Golden Rule.

Otto Hiersekorn has sold his store business on East Seventh street to Fred W. Topel. It is understood Mr. Hiersekorn will take a much-needed rest.

The Market.

The Easter business was the best in years and local florists are well pleased; never before were there so many plants to be had and stock in general was good. With regular summer weather, there was no trouble in getting stock in on time; cool cellars and sheds were greatly in demand to hold stock that was too far advanced, as the thermometer registered 88 degrees Saturday, April 6. Wednesday, April 3, we had a severe rain and wind storm, which did an enormous amount of damage to the stock on the streets.

Easter lilies were the most in demand and the supply was a little short, though more local growers handled them than before. Carnations looked a trifle sleepy and were about equal to the demand. Good roses were in fair supply and cleaned up. Violets were bad; little good stock was to be had, but some good sweet peas were in evidence and met with a heavy demand. All kinds of bulbous stock were in heavy supply and moved slowly the first part of the week, but made up for it Saturday, as nearly everyone cleaned up at fairly good prices.

There was nothing startling in the way of decorating, but all plants to be had were in the various churches. Green goods were about equal to the demand. In the way of blooming plants one could get almost anything wished for. Some good azaleas, lilacs and rhododendrons were seen and cleaned up nicely Easter, in spite of a heavy wind and rain storm which kept up all the afternoon and night.

The florists all made excellent window displays, which were commented on by everyone.

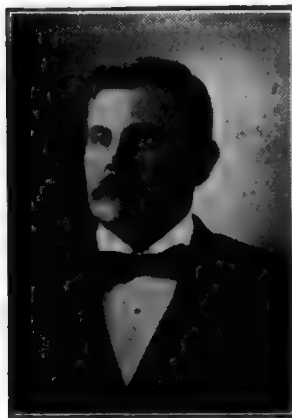

The street men did a flourishing business and several opened stores for the Easter rush, selling violets for 15 and 20 cents per bunch and roses and carnations for 25 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

Monday night, April 8, Wallace R. Pierson gave an address on "Roses" at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Jesse P. King, of Mt. Airy, Ind., gave an address to the club March 25, telling of his trip to the large western growers.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.

The two new greenhouses for which J. F. Wilcox has just placed the order with the King Construction Co., through H. G. Miller, the concern's western representative, will be the largest west of the Mississippi and, incidentally, among the largest in the United States. These are to be iron frame, 60x1,000. Each house is to contain three cross walks, giving each house forty benches, 4x250. The houses are to be of the flat rafter type, with four lines of purlin posts. The two houses will stand twenty-five feet apart, with removable sashes at the sides, through which the benches will be filled and emptied. The space of twenty-five feet between the houses will give room for a team to go through while work is going on. So that the team can go in at one end and out at the other, large doors are to be built in the covered passageway which is to connect the houses at the center.

The details of the heating plant have not yet been settled. Steam and a vacuum pump will be used, the service building standing at about the center of the north side. The houses, of course, run east and west. Probably the center cross walk will be kept clear by running the main feed pipe along the north wall of the north house and across the two houses, underground, at the first cross walks to right and left, the coils being taken off under each bench.

This is the start of a new range south of town, where the J. F. Wilcox & Sons corporation has a fine farm of 120 acres, a part of which has sod that never has been broken.

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

David J. Grillbortzer has been appointed to the reception and entertainment and the streets, roads and parks committees of the Alexandria Retail Merchants' Association.

Ernest Paldaca, an employee of the Kramer Floral Co., King and Alfred streets, was fined $50 in the Alexandria police court for assaulting and beating Miss Emma Deavers, a fellow employee. The assault followed the resenting by Miss Deavers of language used by Paldaca. Paldaca denied the charge of assault but admitted shoving her out of the store. He paid the fine. C. L. L.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS.

Carnation cuttings and plants are my specialty;
not a mere side line. No effort is spared to produce and deliver the best grade of stock. The season here has been one of unprecedented sunlight and my stock is consequently extra strong, vigorous and healthy—in fact the finest I ever produced.

PANSIES.

Pansy Park Perfection is the best strain of plant show and fancy pansies, largest in size and of the greatest variety of rich and rare colors, the reds and bronzes in large proportion. The growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years. One of many reports—"Pansies arrived in good condition. In fact they are the best plants we have ever bought." Myers & Co., Bluffton, Ind. Hardy, field-grown plants from seed sown early in August, thinly broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room, growing short and stocky with extra good roots, just right to transplant for blooming and sale in May. Over 50 varieties, mixed, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5,000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash with order.

L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

Pansy plants. We sow our pansy seed in greenhouses in the winter then transplant to cold frames outdoors to harden off. These plants have a fresher appearance and will furnish finer flowers and give a longer blossoming season than plants wintered over outdoors. Greenhouse Heating.MORE PIPING NEEDED.

How many runs of 1½-inch steam pipe would it take to heat a house 13x125 and twelve feet to the ridge, to 56 degrees, when the outside temperature is 20 degrees below zero? How many runs of 1¼-inch pipe will it take to heat a house 21x150 and fourteen feet to the ridge, to 60 degrees, with the same temperature outside? Will a 4-inch steam main take care of 40,000 square feet of modern glass, or will it take care of more? I enclose a drawing which shows the piping as we intend to put it in. Will you be kind enough to make suggestions as to any changes that you think should be made? I am located in southeastern Wisconsin.

H. C.

The sketch shows the ground plan of a house twenty-one feet wide, to be heated to 60 degrees with 1¼-inch pipes, of which one is located under each of the gutters and two under each of the three benches. As near as can be determined from the plan, the arrangement of the pipes would be satisfactory, but, under the severe conditions mentioned, there should be a considerable increase in the amount of radiation, and four more lines, making twelve in all, will be required if the house is to be heated without crowding the boiler. In case there is any glass in the walls, one additional pipe will be required for each two feet in height of the glass. The drawing appears to show the coils fed from a 4-inch main, which is carried across the middle of the house, with 2-inch connecting pipes leading to the coils on either side. This would be all right if the coils were not more than 100 feet long, but for a house 21x150 feet the connecting pipes should be 2½-inch.

For the house 13 x 125 feet use six 1½-inch pipes, with one additional pipe for each two and one-half feet of glass in the walls.

While the foregoing plan will give good results, many would prefer to use one 2-inch overhead flow and five 1½-inch returns in the narrow house, and one 2½-inch flow and ten 1¼-inch returns for the wide house. If the steam is carried in the mains at forty pounds of pressure, a 4-inch pipe will heat 40,000 square feet of glass to 56 degrees, but a 5-inch main will be needed with low pressure and a 6-inch will be desirable if very long.

AN L-SHAPED ADDITION.

At present we have a range of four houses, running east and west. Beginning at the south side of the range, the houses are of the following dimensions: 25 x 116, 16 x 116, 20 x 100 and 22 x 100. The boiler house is at the west end of the 20-foot house. We now propose to

RIVERBANK GREENHOUSES GENEVA, ILLINOIS EVERY FLORIST SHOULD SEE THE KROESCHELL HOT WATER HEATING SYSTEM INSTALLED FOR THIS MODERN PLANT

Rose Range of Riverbank Greenhouses, Geneva, Ill. Charles McCauley, Supt.

Heated by No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler, Kroeschell 2-inch Return Piping System and Kroeschell Generator. Greenhouses each 28 feet by 200 feet. Garland Construction.

The mains are arranged to take care of a future addition of 40,000 sq. ft. of glass; 2-inch returns are used throughout the entire range and each 2-inch return line is controlled by 1-inch gate valve (strictly a Kroeschell feature), insuring perfect control. It is a gravity job; the circulation is perfect, reaching the extreme ends of range in fifteen minutes. The Kroeschell Generator (the high speed gear for hot water heating) is also used for this system.

"Your No. 15 Kroeschell Boiler heats our entire range. We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in our greenhouses, and this temperature is easily maintained even in the very coldest weather. Your boiler has given entire satisfaction. It is the best and quickest heater I have ever used or seen. I have found the boiler very economical in the use of fuel and labor, as it is not necessary to use the best coal, and any labor will do for a fireman. The Kroeschell Piping System with Generator works like a charm. When I want to sulphur, I can heat the water up to 230 to 240 degrees and I get the same results as from steam. Seeing is believing—all growers are invited to call. Any further information concerning boiler and piping system will be gladly given. We had a large number of florists at our place recently, and they all thought we had the finest equipped plant in the business."

build an additional house, which would run south from the boiler house, across the ends of two of the present houses, and then east alongside the present south house. The addition would thus be L-shaped; it would be forty-one feet long from north to south and 141 feet long from east to west, and would be twenty-five feet wide all the way. From this description you will understand the crooked way in which the heating pipes would have to run. The new house will have 5-foot walls, with eighteen inches of glass in the south and west sides, and will be about ten feet high to the ridge.

Now, what I want to know is whether the new house can be successfully heated to 50 degrees with hot water, here in northern Missouri. If so, what is the best plan for doing it? Which, in your opinion, would be better, hot water or steam? The houses will all be used for lettuce. If steam would be better, give plans for that also. What size of boiler would be required for water; also for steam? What size and height of smokestack will be required for two boilers, each having an 18-inch smoke outlet?
B. A. B.

There should be no difficulty in heating the new houses with hot water. It is suggested that three 2½-inch flow pipes be used. They should run from the boiler south and then east to the farther end. One flow can be under the ridge and the others on the plates. There should be nine 2-inch returns, of which three should be connected with each of the flow pipes. If steam is preferred, use one 2½-inch flow under the ridge and eight 1¼-inch returns, of which two or three should be on each wall and the others under the benches.

For small ranges, where one does not have a night fireman, it is easier to maintain an even temperature with hot water than with steam and it will be found more economical of fuel, although, as only about one-half as much radiation will be required, the cost of installing a steam plant will be less than for hot water.

A steam boiler should be rated for about 1,000 square feet of radiation, or fifteen horse-power, and a hot water boiler for 2,000 square feet of radiation. The chimney should be two feet in diameter and at least forty feet high.

Greenhouse Heating Systems and

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS work well together

It costs no more to have free and clear steam lines and an efficient heating system than to have sluggish lines and an inefficient heating system.

It's useless to expect good results when trying to put steam through coils that are half full of condensation.

"Detroit" Return Traps not only keep lines clear of water but automatically return it directly to the boiler at practically the same temperature at which it is condensed.

Once installed, "Detroit" Return Traps are always on the job.

"For Quick Results It Has Them All Beat"

So says H. ROTH, Florist at La Fayette, Ind. Here is his letter:

LA FAYETTE, IND., March 6, 1912.

SUPERIOR MACHINE & BOILER WORKS, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: In reply to yours of the 4th inst., will say that your No. 4 boiler has given entire satisfaction. I consider this boiler a great improvement over the other style boilers in my place, of which I have two. For quick results it has them all beat. I have never been so well satisfied with any change I have made as I have been with the change from the other style boiler to the Superior. Anyone wanting to see this boiler can see it working on my place, and I will only be too glad to show them.

Yours respectfully,

[Signed] H. ROTH.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A cold, cloudy weather the first half of Easter week put a damper on early Easter trade. However, the rush began April 4, when the temperature moderated considerably and the last half of the week was perfect spring weather. There was a great abundance of everything. Easter lilies were not entirely open, but sold all the better for it. They were also easier to pack because of the backward condition. All sorts of flowers and plants sold well, especially fancy plant baskets of all sizes, which brought good prices.

Roses of all kinds are good. Carnations are in fine condition. Violets are only fair. Pansies were in great demand this year and went for a fancy figure. Valley is splendid and sells well, but there is not enough to supply the demand. A great deal of funeral work was done during Easter week, which gave us a fine opportunity to work up some of the surplus stock that was less salable otherwise.

White lilacs were somewhat scarce, but flowering deutzias filled the void nicely. There was a fine lot of ramblers, but the crimson were the finest.

Various Notes.

The Easter display at the Lamberton conservatory was a most attractive one and was viewed by many of our flower loving citizens. John Dunbar is intensely interested in making these exhibits popular.

J. B. Keller Sons are growing some good Mrs. F. Sander daisies, but the stems are short.

Some splendid orchids are being shown at Mrs. Kimball's conservatories where Colin Ogston is gardener.

The Rochester Floral Co. had a good sized annex on Main street for the Easter trade and reports big business.

"Duckie" Holmes, "Arch" Mason and "Billie" Dunbar augmented J. B. Keller Sons' force again this year.

H. E. Wilson had his new auto delivery for the Easter rush. It is painted bright yellow and is quite conspicuous wherever it goes.

Charles Sharpe is in town again.
E. C. A.

F. W. Vick states that the item appearing in this column last week was incorrect, that he was the founder of Vick & Hill Co., and has not withdrawn from the concern, but is still its president and general manager, and furthermore has no intention of withdrawing. Mr. Vick is one of the incorporators of the new Vick & Dildine Co.

Patterson Pug Mill.

In this last article describing the machines used in our factory, we show the Pug Mill, into which the cakes of clay are placed and water added as the rotating knives reduce it into a pliable, easy-working body of uniform consistency.

A constant downward pressure forces it out from a circular opening at the bottom, and it is then ready to be shaped into the many useful and ornamental articles that we make.

The ware is then seasoned and placed in the great kilns, where it meets a high degree of heat and emerges having assumed its pretty Terra Cotta hue. A fine illustrated description of the full scheme will be sent on request. Write for it now.

The Market.

Easter trade was all that could be desired; most of the florists report that it was even better than last Easter. Plants were in the greatest demand. Bulb stock was plentiful, both cut and pot plants, and cut flowers sold well. Violets were in great demand and there were not enough to go around, the recent warm spell having a bad effect on the indoor plants.

Various Notes.

R. H. Woodhouse had an elegant display of bulb stock, both cut and in pans. He had a big batch of lilies and also an enormous lot of violets, which found a ready sale. He had one of the largest and finest displays in this vicinity.

Wm. P. Peirce, on Union street, reports a grand Easter trade, better than last year. His stock was about all cleaned out.

E. H. Chamberlain had his store crammed full of beautiful plants. Not much was left by Sunday. He had a big order of funeral work also, which kept the force busy.

Wm. H. Davenport had a handsome display of plants, artistically arranged, and fine lots of cut flowers.

R. E. Nofft had his small store taxed to its limit with its load of pretty flowers and plants.

Julius Rusitzky, of the Flower Mart, reports a tremendous business. This is his first Easter and he has also opened a new flower store. He called on all hands for stock. He had a big run of funeral work also.

Peter Murray had a big display of Easter plants, which he disposed of at wholesale. W. L.

Webster City, Ia.—The Curtis Floral Co., of Hampton, Ia., has bought a tract of ground in this city and will begin the erection of a range of greenhouses this spring. The ground purchased comprises eight lots and is located at the head of Prospect street, near the cemetery. The firm already owns greenhouses at Hampton and a store in Mason City.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR ^A_D MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2 1/4 inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

The Market.

The weather for Easter week was beautiful, with plenty of bright sunshine, which brought every plant into bloom on time, and there was an abundant supply of everything needed. Orders were placed four to five days beforehand; hence a heavy trade was expected, and the expectation was not disappointed. The supply in roses was extra heavy and of good quality. In carnations there was almost a glut; never before was there such a supply. Lilies were short-stemmed, but the supply was large. Dutch hyacinths were extra fine and in good shape. Azaleas were plentiful and fine. Daffodils were plentiful and in good demand.

Rock's New Store.

At its opening April 1 the new store of W. L. Rock and associates was beyond doubt the grandest sight ever seen in a Kansas City flower shop. In the front windows on both sides were hung large specimen plants of orchids in many varieties, in full bloom. In the center stood a large fount of growing lycopodium filled with Easter lilies and white schizanthus. On either side were Rhododendron Pink Pearl and rambler roses, in four varieties, grown in basket shape, in full bloom. Large specimens of Cibotium Schiedei were tilted over on the sides of the long refrigerator, intermingled with bougainvillea in full bloom. Baskets three feet in diameter with growing red coleus were hung on the wall in great quantities, making a most striking effect. A large display of genistas in pots and planted in combination with baby primroses was one of the main features in the center of the shop. A large group of yellow callas in full bloom was one of the main attractions near the black marble-topped cashier's counter. All the lower part of the walls of the shop is mirrors; even the refrigerators are lined with them. A splendid lot of cut flowers included the new rose, Sunburst, supplied by the E. G. Hill Co. Large quantities of Easter plants, too numerous to mention, were on exhibition. The baskets hung from the ceiling, in which are concealed the electric lamps, were trimmed with trailing asparagus. The indirect lighting system gives a beautiful effect on the fine ceiling.

The average attendance for the three days of the opening was about 6,500 each day, by actual count.

CONVENTIONAL DESIGNING.

The Good and Bad in It.

Much is heard these days of conventional and conventionalized designing. Just what is meant by these terms, and are they correctly used or misapplied with reference to floral designing? In the commonest use of the word the meaning is the usually accepted, established, traditional, from which we get the idea of set and formal. In this sense our floral designs made upon frames are to be classed as conventional. Besides, any one style by which one or all of these are executed is to be classed as conventionalized.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss at length whether conventional work is of the highest grade, for that is scarcely practical, since it is upon us. But the purpose is to discuss and, if possible, to discover, that type of conventional work which may be termed classic or representative, with a view to the elimination of the inferior. However, whether any product of the present era shall attain to a classic must be determined mainly by the future, but it may be our privilege to crystallize the best yet produced and bring it into general use.

The So-Called Loose Style.

It looks as if the best thought of the period were turning away from the present conventionalized style of design work. The more advanced designers are insisting upon clear outlines, more distinct color plan and better finished work, and it will probably follow that those whose ambition does not lead them in that direction will be driven to some better efforts by an enlightened public opinion.

Make what you make. If a style which obscures the distinctness of form of the design attempted had any artistic merit of itself, if it were adding any grace, daintiness or fine lines to the form of the piece instead of increasing its heaviness, all kinds of apologies for its continued use might be offered. "Well, it is loose," a chorus of somebodies is ready to suggest. Yes, it is loose; so is a half-shed snake-skin. As to the additional size it gives to a piece, that is fast getting to be a nuisance at funerals. The number of designs and their exaggerated size are pleas for smaller and choicer pieces. There is danger that if a campaign of education is not soon started by salesmen toward this end, the reaction will be toward no flowers at all for funerals.

The Solid Style.

Another conventional style, which preceded the loose one and is still holding its own with the best designers, is the solid style. But it still keeps its hold in the formal design only, its legitimate place, being ousted from the basket, the hand bouquet and the centerpiece. It is the most fetching style of legitimate design that has gained favor. It is practical, speedy and moderate. It is true that it takes more flowers. But use a smaller frame and talk quality to the customer. It takes more flowers for construction, but few for decorating. Sometimes no more than a group of ferns, a bunch of violets or a dozen roses will be needed.

A caution right here is in order. Do not use this style on small designs, or you will have meal sacks in place of floral designs. Small designs do not pay, anyhow, unless you use the foliage background construction.

With a Foliage Background.

This third style—the style with a foliage background—has a reasonable and natural right to a long existence. Make the outline and body of the design of foliage, either the kind which belongs to the flowers to be used for the ornamental part or another foliage which harmonizes therewith. Then use a more elaborate and pretentious trim.

Talk about price! Here is where you gold or silver cord. Choose a flower of brilliant or decided color.

A Few Examples.

Here are a few examples of what such combinations might produce:

A broken column of Rex begonia; leaves overlaid with a drape of silver net; dot the drape with small pink roses; let it hang loosely from the break to the base; catch in place at the base with a group of long-stemmed pink roses.

A harp of variegated green and white coleus; strings gilded; a large cluster of yellow roses and marguerites on the front base.

A wreath of alternantheras with Enchantress carnations and mignonette; use rather long sprays of alternantheras and lay them on top and sides alike, till frame and moss are covered; wrap with gold cord to keep the sprays in place; make a light spray of the carnations and lay it on the side of the wreath, securing it in place with fern pins; leave the stems where they are, and bring a few twists of the gold cord across them and tie.

One's Own Ideas.

A designer with ideas of his own will conventionalize some one specially pleasing and graceful form among a number of its variations, as an Irish harp, an oriental harp, a true anchor or a casket cross. A fine example of the last mentioned design, made by Chas. A. Samuelson, Chicago, was illustrated in The Review of February 29, page 13.

A Corner in the New Store of W. L. Rock Flower Co.

can make good with the "size" customer, who refuses to be comforted with quality. Make use of noticeable foliage, such as Rex begonia, coleus, vinca, colored geranium, croton, maple, Tricolor amaranthus, farfugium, Centaurea gymnocarpa, alternanthera, autumn leaves, etc. Some of them are soft, to be sure, but stem after a good soak and, if necessary, spray afterward. If difficulty occurs in keeping them in place, overlap. Emphasize the color, if it seems a little dull, with a drape of gold, silver or bronze net or a tie of Any design which represents an object should be treated in the way which shall best develop its shape and outline. Besides the designs already mentioned, there may be included in this class such designs as the following: Lodge and society emblems, globe, crescent, scroll, wheel, bell, urn, book, crown, clock, sickle, heart, pillow, star, ladder.

Other phases of conventional designing—its adaptability to decorating and the combination of the conventional and strictly natural—will be treated in later articles.

ROCK'S NEW STORE.

Fifteen years ago Wm. L. Rock opened a little flower counter in a cafe on Main street in Kansas City. His capital was $300. The business grew until the store occupied was one of the largest in the west, and until a range of greenhouses became a necessity. With these facilities Mr. Rock, and the associates with whose abilities he had supplemented his personal ef-that is worth putting on. Formerly at a rush time it was possible to trim pots several days ahead and, with care in watering, the paper would be in perfect condition to go out. Now the moisture from the pot soaks through in a few hours, making it necessary to retrim. The dealers all meet you with the same reply, that "it is so much cheaper now." This is true, but it proves with us to be the most kota, who, by the way, visited us at the convention during the world's fair here, making a practice of sharing the surplus flowers with their customers. I wish to say that this has always been our custom. Seldom, indeed, does a customer come here to give us an order, or to pay a bill, or to make a friendly call, that we do not present him with some flowers, except when there is a great scarcity, be it a child or a grown person; and when we make a bouquet or put up a box we put in a couple of carnations extra, which to my mind is far better than having a job lot sale. We always ask a fair price, so as to be just to our customers and ourselves. I often think it is a pity that our business, that is so full of sentiment, should be by a great many reduced to the level of the ragman, the stock to be sold for what you can get for it. F. J. Fillmore.

fort, were content for a time, but changing conditions caused them to embark, a few month ago, upon the fitting up, in a new locality, of as fine a store as experience and money could provide. This store now is open, at 1106 Grand avenue, though the old store at 1116 Walnut street will be continued. The new store largely was designed by Mr. Rock and is in the monumental style of architecture. The interior is finished in ivory white, and the walls, in so far as they are not occupied by display cases, are lined with plate mirrors. The indirect lighting system has been installed. As in all modern flower stores, counters are omitted, salesman and customer meeting on an even footing. The offices are above the workroom at the rear and are reached from the store by an ornamental stairway.

The accompanying illustrations show the store as it was dressed for its opening on the Monday preceding Easter. During the three days of the opening more than 15,000 guests inspected the establishment, and it is said that the Easter business increased forty per cent. The illustrations will be of interest as showing the latest developments in flower store arrangement and decoration.

A RETAILER'S LAMENT.

It seems to us that it is about time some of us started an agitation relative to the quality of the waterproof (?) crepe paper being furnished the trade these days. Might it not be a good idea to get the opinion of other florists through your columns? It is impossible to buy a paper now expensive economy that has been forced upon us in years. Perhaps if we all get together in one big kick it may help. Are you willing to start the ball rolling? Your paper could do much. Westman & Getz.

TEMPERATURE FOR LORRAINES.

I have a range of four houses, including a palm house with a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, a rose house with a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, a carnation house with a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees and a cool house with a night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees. In which house can I grow Lorraine begonias most successfully? I have tried to grow them from leaf cuttings during the last two years and have failed. I rooted the cuttings in January. They decay little by little, as do the plants. J. J. O.

The Lorraine begonia cuttings would root best in your rose house temperature, provided a suitable cutting bench is provided. Until they start to flower they like a house with a similar temperature. Later they will do admirably with carnations. In summer they like some shade, but it should never be heavy. After November, give them the full sun. Perhaps you are not using a suitable compost for your begonias. They thrive best in a soil containing one-half flaky leaf-mold, with plenty of sand. At the last potting some well rotted manure may be added. Do not use a heavy loam, or they will do poorly in it. C. W.

AZALEAS AFTER BLOOMING.

Will you please tell in The Review the way to take care of azaleas after they are done blooming, and do they pinch them in any way? E. L.

Remove all flowers and seed pods. Cut back or tie into shape any runaway shoots. No pinching should be required. You can either carry the plants over summer in pots, which should be plunged to their brims in a bed of soil or cinders, the latter being preferable, or plant them out in good soil where you can give them frequent hoseings over during the growing season. Lift and repot them the first week in October. When planted out, the plants appreciate vigorous syringings overhead during the early afternoon on hot days, as do all other hard-wooded plants under similar conditions.

C. W.

AGATHÆA CÆLESTIS.

Can you tell us how to handle Agathæa cælestis and what it is used for? This information will be greatly appreciated by us. Ours are rooted cuttings.

L. B.

Agathæa cælestis, also called Felicia cælestis, and commonly known as the blue daisy or blue marguerite, is a useful winter flowering plant for pot culture on account of its color, which is of a pleasing shade of blue. For winter flowering, take cuttings now and grow them on through the summer in pots, which should be plunged to their brims in a coldframe or bed of ashes and kept well watered and pinched. It is better to grow them a little warmer than the white and yellow marguerites; 50 degrees at night is to their liking. Of late years this old plant has appeared in limited numbers in the flower stores and appears to sell well. While it is not much of a success here as a bedding plant, it is quite satisfactory in Great Britain, where it flowers freely all summer.

C. W.

THE DORSETT VIOLET.

C. A. Classon, foreman for the Archias Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo., writes under date of April 9:

"In regard to the single violet, Dorsett, I wish to state as follows: We bought 500 plants during the month of September, 1911. Two hundred fifty were from 2½-inch pots and the rest from 2-inch pots. We planted some in a coldframe, lifted them after a few good freezings and housed them on a solid bed in old soil after the mums. They began to flower slowly around Christmas and have increased in flowering capacity ever since and are still doing well in spite of hot weather. Two hundred fifty of the smaller plants we planted directly in a carnation house, in a rather dark part of the house, and they took hold of the soil rather quickly and gave us a lot of flowers with short stems throughout the fall and winter, with increasing length of stems, and always with a bright, deep blue color. As a whole I consider the Dorsett violet to be a good commercial flower and easy to grow in a higher temperature than other violets I know off."

BEST DOUBLE VIOLET.

I shall grow 3,000 double violets next winter and shall appreciate any information in reference to the best variety to grow. I have been thinking of growing the Campbell variety. I should also like to ask whether the doubles require any different culture from the singles. I always let my single violets have a few degrees of frost in the fall, to check the leaf growth, but, if I understand properly, the doubles will not do so well if treated in this manner. My location is northern Wyoming.

L. M. B.

So far as color goes, the old Marie Louise is still the finest double violet where it can be grown well. Unfortunately, it is more subject to spot on the foliage than any other variety. Lady Hume Campbell, while not immune from disease by any means, is much the most reliable sort grown today and will please you better than any other you could grow. Double violets want quite different treatment from singles. They should not be left out and exposed to any frost, but are better housed early in September. While singles do best in a winter night temperature of as near 40 degrees as possible, doubles should have 5 degrees more heat. They flower longer than the doubles; it should be possible for you to pick until well into May. After the middle of March the night temperature can be dropped 5 degrees. Abundant ventilation, and, if warm, some shading on the glass, will help to keep the houses cooler and help the flowers to hold their color. C. W.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Pruning Hardy Roses.

With the removal of the winter protection some idea can be formed of the effects of the severe winter on roses. Even the hardiest of the hybrid perpetual class are killed back quite low, but where a close covering of mother earth has been drawn about the plants, sufficient green, plump wood will be left to prune back. Don't be in a hurry about doing the pruning, for even in April we get some frosts of sufficient severity to seriously cripple the young shoots on the early pruned plants. The hybrid perpetuals, such as Frau Karl Druschki, Brunner, Mrs. John Laing, Mrs. Sharman Crawford, Reynolds Hole, General Jacqueminot, Magna Charta and others, give the strongest shoots and finest flowers if pruned back hard. Leave not over three or four eyes on the strongest shoots, and one or two on more moderate ones. Cut out all weak and dead wood entirely. You can prune more lightly and secure a slightly earlier crop of flowers on shorter stems, but when it comes time for winter protection the disadvantages of this system present themselves, as it is necessary to raise the protection much higher than is needed where hard pruning is resorted to.

The hybrid teas are not, as a rule, either so hardy or so vigorous in constitution as the hybrid perpetuals, and merely the dead wood and the ends of the remaining shoots should be removed. Gruss an Teplitz is perhaps the hardiest of this type of roses and surely none of them give a larger and more satisfactory return than this splendid scarlet variety.

The teas want similar pruning to the hybrid teas. They are, with a few noted exceptions, less desirable than the hybrid tea class for bedding, but some varieties grow and flower beautifully near the seacoast; inland they are more or less failures.

The ramblers have in some cases killed back a little more than usual, but all the wood which was hard and well ripened is perfectly fresh. The young canes which started from the ground are what we should take care of, as these will produce the finest trusses of flowers. Older wood should be cut clean out and if growers only had the courage to do this each season after the flowering period is over they would get much stronger canes from the base. Rambler roses do not want hard pruning. The stronger shoots should be left practically their full length, merely taking off the ends, which are usually dead or dying. Weak wood should be cut out clean. In order to get rambler canes to break more freely, it is a good plan to bend them over.

After pruning is completed give the soil about all hardy roses a good loosening. If you gave them a mulch of cow manure last fall they will not want any further feeding now, but if you did not provide them with any food in the autumn a top-dressing of fine bone, dried blood or sheep manure before stirring up the ground will be beneficial, for, be it remembered, hardy roses are strong feeders.

Planting Hardy Roses.

While late autumn is a good time to plant roses, particularly the H. P. section, except in the coldest states, it is in spring when nearly all this planting is done. Autumn planted stock, well protected, will winter well and start to grow much better than such as are set out in the spring, but as the latter season is now with us, it behooves all prospective planters to lose not a day in securing and planting their roses. Own root roses do well in the warmer states, but for the colder states budded or grafted stock which has been grown in the open continually is far the best. Grafted plants are much more vigorous and possess greater longevity than own root stock. Be sure to have all roots well moistened at planting time, covering the grafts two to three inches, and press the soil firmly about the roots.

The only difficulty with grafted roses is that they must be looked over occasionally and the Manetti or seedling briar suckers removed as they appear; otherwise they will soon cripple the roses, but every bright florist and gardener knows, or should know, the difference between the stock and the rose.

In planting the hybrid teas it is well to remember that they will succeed particularly well on light ground of quite a sandy nature, provided they are well fed and supplied with water.

RAMBLERS FOR EASTER.

While Easter was quite early this year, it is much earlier in 1913, coming March 23. This means that some hard forcing will be necessary in order to flower many plants, roses included, on time. The ramblers pot grown through the summer are what is needed for an early Easter, and now is the time to purchase and pot up the plants; that is, unless you are growing your own plants. Give them a fairly heavy and rich soil and firm them well in the pots, which can be 6-inch to 8-inch, according to the size of the plants. Cut them down fairly close to the ground after potting; then place them in a bright house, well ventilated, and not kept over 50 to 52 degrees at night. Tie the young shoots up as they appear. In the case of Dorothy Perkins and some other pink ramblers, too many shoots will start from the bottom, and judicious disbudding will be found necessary, leaving not over three to five canes per plant. Keep the newly potted stock under glass until the middle or end of June, giving them a light, sunny house where they will not be exposed to cold drafts, which would mean mildew on the young shoots.

Ranges of J. J. Brozat and Jacob Hauck at Bloomfield, N. J.

Of course you can place and grow these same roses outdoors from the start, but you will not get the same clean, vigorous growth on them as when kept under glass, nor will the wood be ripened so early, something necessary on plants which are to be forced early.

Tausendschon continues to be popular among ramblers. It is well adapted to early forcing, as it will flower fully two weeks earlier than any of the other ramblers. Crimson Rambler is far less popular now than the pink varieties, but the single scarlet Hiawatha takes well, while Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins each have their admirers. American Pillar, with its large, single, pink flowers, is proving a winner, and the new Juniata is also proving popular. Among the so-called baby rambler class, Catharine Seimeth, pure white, is fine for Easter. Mrs. Cutbush, Phyllis, Baby Dorothy and the original Mme. Levasseur are all good, and where dwarf plants are wanted, should be grown in quantity. They come into flower much earlier than the tall ramblers and need no stakes. Try some of these various ramblers pot grown and prove for yourself how much better they are for early forcing than plants dug up and potted in the fall.

SWEET PEAS ON OLD SOIL.

I am sending you a sample of sweet peas. I always read with interest the articles in The Review about sweet peas and how they are grown. The peas I am sending you were grown in a solid bed, in soil which has been in the greenhouse for three winters and has been used all the time. The first year we grew two crops of lettuce, and then tomatoes; the second year we grew two crops of lettuce and then stood pots of geraniums on the soil until Decoration day. Our sweet peas have been in bloom since the third week in January. We have not done any feeding or mulching except on one day. That was March 16, when they had a light dose of liquid manure. S. E. L.

Your sweet peas arrived in good condition and are certainly of as fine quality as can be seen anywhere. Stems fifteen to eighteen inches long are excellent and show that you understand how to grow sweet peas under glass. You will find that if you run sweet peas and follow them with tomatoes in solid beds, you can use the same beds year after year for these same crops without either showing any signs of deterioration, provided you manure liberally. Fine as your stems are, they will now be improved by more feeding, either in the form of liquid manure or top-dressings. C. W.

TWO BLOOMFIELD RANGES.

At Bloomfield, N. J., the establishments of Jacob Hauck and J. J. Brozat stand side by side, as shown in the illustration on page 12, which is reproduced from a photograph made by Fred Lautenschlager. Both gentlemen are members of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., New York. Mr. Hauck, whose range is at the right, has 36,000 square feet of glass, and Mr. Brozat 28,000 square feet. Both heat with hot water, using Kroeschell boilers.

LARGE MARGUERITES.

J. B. Knight, Willoughby, O., sends a photograph of two large marguerites, the variety being Queen Alexandra, with the accompanying note: "I am sending herewith a picture of two marguerites grown by me this season. They are only a year old and measure fully six feet across. They are full of buds and blooms, unusually low and symmetrical in shape, being much the largest plants I have yet seen."

WALLS OF CONCRETE BLOCKS.

Will some reader of The Review please give his experience with concrete blocks used in greenhouse walls? Does the frost come through and freeze the plants next to the concrete wall, in a temperature of 40 or 45 degrees at night? Any information regarding this will be greatly appreciated. My location is southern Michigan. J. G.

Though hollow blocks, even when carefully laid, will convey the heat to some extent, yet there will be no great difficulty in keeping the frost out of the house, if heating pipes are placed upon the walls and if the beds or benches are so arranged that there is an uninterrupted circulation of air between the bed and the wall. When the weather outside is zero or below, there will be no great danger of frosting tender plants if none of the leaves are within four or five inches of the wall, unless the temperature inside the house drops below 45 degrees.

AN ALABAMA CONSERVATORY.

The illustration on this page shows the conservatory in the rear of the retail flower store of the Rosemont Gardens, at Montgomery, Ala. This is the establishment founded by W. B. ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Orchids from Seed.

Spring is the season par excellence for sowing orchid seeds. March, April and May are the best months. During winter they do not start well, and during the hot summer months the percentage of germinations is much less than in spring. The prevailing idea that it is difficult to raise orchids from seeds has been long ago exploded. Of course, they cannot be raised in the same easy manner as asters, salvias and stocks, or even begonias and gloxinias. The raising of seedling orchids in Europe has now become a tremendous industry and the leading orchid firms there carry in stock far more hybrids than forest-collected plants. Dozens of houses are devoted to seedling raising, and the seedling plants are offered for sale in large numbers before flowering, the parentage, of course, being given. The need of raising seedlings is becoming each year more apparent, as the forest supplies of orchids are by no means inexhaustible, and in the case of the popular Cattleya labiata, unless new localities are discovered where it is to be found in abundance, a few years will probably see it practically prohibitive in price.

Merits of Home-Raised Hybrids.

There is one good feature about orchids raised from seed at home; they have greater vigor than the collected plants, provided, of course, that care is taken in selecting vigorous seed-producing parents, which also are floriferous. Again, the home-raised hybrids in many cases make two growths and produce two crops of flowers a year, and do not need any resting period, as the forest plants do. Of course, this resting period, even in the case of collected plants, is liable to be overdone, and some growers are coming to the conclusion that under artificial cultivation there is not so much need to rest the plants as had been popularly supposed. Then, again, many of these hybrids give us flowers when we would otherwise be without them (I am referring now more particularly to cattleyas), and they help in great measure to make it possible to cut flowers every day in the year.

Crossing Good Varieties.

The average time required to ripen orchid seeds is a year. I have had cattleyas ripen in eleven months and sometimes it has taken fourteen or fifteen months, but a year is a fair average. Cypripediums do not take so long and selenipediums require only one-fourth the time of cattleyas and lælias.

Anyone intending to do orchid hybridizing, particularly if he wants plants which will be of value commercially, should select the best types of existing species. For instance, take a fine form of Cattleya Trianae, labiata or Schroederae, and either cross it with its own pollen or use pollen from some other plant which is extra fine and which may improve the color, lengthen the stem or add beauty to the general outlines of the flowers. A point to be remembered is that usually the seedlings approximate the seed-producing parent in growth and habit, but are more likely to have flowers resembling the pollen parent.

It would seem to be a good business venture to raise Cattleya labiata in quantity from seed, as the prospect is that prices will soon be double what they are today, and buyers would be willing, or should be willing, to pay better prices for vigorous home-raised seedlings than for dried up forest plants, provided, of course, that they could have a reasonable assurance that they were buying a good type. I have referred especially to cattleyas so far, as they are the predominant orchids in America, just as the more beautiful, if less gaudy, odontoglossums are in Europe, but such cypripediums as insigne, Sanderæ, and others which might be named, carrying big, bold dorsal sepals and of pleasing colors, would be in great demand were they procurable in quantity.

Sowing the Seed.

Orchid seed is fine and dustlike. It is estimated that a cattleya pod will contain a quarter of a million or more seeds. As soon as ripened and shaken out, they should be sown, but I have kept seeds for six months and had them grow well, and there are also on the market special pollen tubes which will keep pollen fresh for fertilizing purposes for from nine to twelve months, so we can always be sure of having suitable pollen without having to remove it from the flowers when to be used. A common plan is to scatter orchid seeds on the tops of pots containing growing plants, if the soil is not mossy or scummy on the surface, and sometimes a fair germination may be secured in this way. I have seen quantities of young cattleya and cypripedium seedlings start on the sides of the pots in some cases.

The best method, however, is to have a case with a hinged cover, which can be tilted or thrown back at will. Make a light framework of slats inside the case and let the supporting legs of this stand in saucers of water, to provide needed moisture and at the same time keep snails, etc., from crawling up about the seed pots or pans. This framework should bring the pots moderately near the light. Pots or pans four to five inches in diameter are better than larger ones. Fill them with a mixture of chopped sphagnum and osmunda fiber. Over this lay a small square of burlap or coarse Turkish towel. Tuck this closely around the sides of the pots, so as to leave a smooth, firm surface. Moisten this with a fine sprayer and then scatter the seed evenly over it. Keep the case moderately close for the first few days, but a crack of air should be given each day. Do not allow the pot surfaces to become in the least dry, but use a fine, misty sprayer to moisten them. A sheet of paper should be kept over the glass to exclude all sunlight.

Potting the Seedlings.

Seed sown in spring will germinate sometimes within a month. Most of the cattleyas, lœlias and cypripediums will start within three or four months, but occasionally it takes a whole year, so it is not well to be of too nervous a temperament when raising orchid seedlings. The house where seedlings are raised should have a night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees, and it is important that no sunshine or rushes of air should strike the seeded pots. Just as soon as the seedlings can be made out, they should be carefully pricked off with a sharp-pointed stick. It is a good plan to use a lens to assist in this work. If they are placed in thimble-sized pots, each of these will easily hold ten or twelve seedlings. If thimble pots are not obtainable, use thumb pots. The compost of fern fiber and fresh sphagnum should be chopped quite finely.

After potting, place the small pots in a case. Elevate them on inverted pots, which should stand in saucers of water to ward off the attacks of snails and various larvæ. Keep them quite close for a time. Spray freely and, as they start to grow, gradually accustom them to more air and light. As growth advances the little seedlings can be placed, singly, in thimble pots and later in thumb pots, or they can be placed in fewer numbers in small pots or pans until potted off singly. When once they get into single pots they make rapid growth, and there is usually little trouble with them beyond the care given to the ordinary cattleyas. Potting may be done whenever the plants need it, whether in midsummer or midwinter, instead of waiting until spring, as is too often done.

Waiting for Returns.

Where a quantity of seed is to be sown and sufficient cases permit its use, burlap or coarse bath towel stretched across the insides of the cases so as to present a firm surface will make an excellent medium on which to sow orchid seeds, and I have had these almost green with cattleya seedlings. Care must be taken to remove seedlings from pots or pans in which fungus is spreading, or it will soon overcome and destroy all the little plants. Careful airing and watering will obviate this trouble in large measure.

The question is often asked, "How long will it take orchids to flower from seed?" Much depends on the nature of the cross. Usually five to seven years are required, but I have bloomed some within three years, first-class crosses too. In certain cases, again, it may take eight or ten years to flower them, but five years would be a fair average. Seedlings produce such an abundance of growths, some bulbs breaking treble and large numbers double, that it is necessary to cut out some of these in order to induce earlier flowering.

Raising orchids from seed is a pleasant pastime. Commercially, it has proved profitable in Europe, and there is no good reason why it should not be considerably extended here. The long waiting for returns may discourage the majority, but he who makes a judicious selection of crosses, choosing varieties which he knows will meet with a demand in the local market, will make a good interest on his investment, and there is always the likelihood that some seedlings will produce flowers of such outstanding merit that they will command fancy prices from wealthy amateur connoisseurs. W. N. Craig.

PHALÆNOPSIS.

The magnificent warm house orchids, the phalænopsis, make a glorious display at this season, and if they could only be grown with as much ease as cattleyas or cypripediums, and were as inexpensive, they would at once jump into the front ranks of commercial orchids. They enjoy a hot, moist house and must have some shade, even in winter. Too much is often applied, however, in summer. This causes superb leaves to be produced, but the flower spikes are usually disappointing. Phal-ænopsis do well in pans or baskets. Rather deep baskets are particularly good. Sphagnum moss and fern fiber make a suitable compost and the drainage must be good. These plants do not need repotting often, and great care is necessary when it is done, or the plants will be injured. The two finest commercial phalænopsis are P. amabilis, of which Rimestadiana is a superior form, pure white in color, and P. Schilleriana, which has lovely variegated leaves and much branched spikes of soft, mauve-colored flowers. Fifty to seventy-five flowers are sometimes carried on a spike, and occasionally many more.

A TELEPHONE TALK.

The Wrong Way.

A, a retail florist, wishes to call B, a wholesaler, and give an order for stock on which A is running low, and this is the way he sometimes goes about it:

A removes the receiver and, without giving the operator time to reply, he jangles the hook up and down rapidly, at the same time calling—"Hello! Hello! What's the matter? Why don't you answer, and not keep me waiting all day?" He seems to think he is the only one that "Central" has to answer, forgetting that she is probably fully as busy as he.

"Central," noting the continued flashing on A's line, answers as quickly as possible, although somewhat ruffled by his impatience. When A hears her polite "Number, please," he starts on a tirade against the telephone company in general and her in particular. "Central," however, has no time to listen

Peonies.

In the warmer states peonies will already have made quite a little growth, but in the northern states they are almost dormant yet, but one or two warm days will cause them to grow rapidly. If they received a good mulch of rotted manure last fall, this should be worked in about them with an ordinary digging fork, or where there is a considerable planting of them, a cultivator can be used. Some additional food which will be quickly available should also be applied now. Dried blood has been found to be an excellent fertilizer, and any fertilizer containing ten per cent of potash is good. Fine bone, pulverized sheep manure and tankage have all been used with good results. After applying the fertilizer, run the cultivator over the ground and keep the soil constantly stirred, particularly after each rainfall. When buds appear on the plants, disbud promptly, and this is the time when liquid manure, if it can be applied, will greatly improve the quality of the flowers.

Pansies.

After the middle of April it is safe to remove any mulch which remains on the pansies wintered outdoors. As no doubt some have been lifted almost out of the ground by alternate freezings and thawings, such plants must be firmed. This takes considerable time where a large number are grown, but if it is not done, many of the plants will be lost. If an early batch are wanted in flower they should be lifted and planted in a coldframe in rich compost. Take good balls with each plant. Soak well with water, cover with sashes, air freely and you will soon have plenty of flowers. Where they are to be sold in small baskets containing a dozen plants each, the plants can go direct into the baskets and, if placed in a cool greenhouse, will soon be in a salable condition.

Dahlias.

It is a little early to plant out dahlias and, as a matter of fact, it is not the early planted tubers which are the best. June planted stock has always given excellent results and instances have been known where plants set out as late as July 4 flowered finely. If the stock of tubers has not been overhauled, now is the time to do this work. Cut away all moldy or decayed portions, divide the roots so that they will have a good sound eye each, and lay them on a bench of sphagnum moss or sand where they can be lightly sprayed. A warm house is neither necessary nor desirable, as it would only make the shoots soft and spindling. When nicely started put the divided roots in flats of sandy loam and gradually harden them off. They will do just as well transferred to the open ground from flats as pots. Where large areas are to be planted and horse cultivation used altogether, it is far better in every way to use tubers which are dormant, or as nearly dormant as possible. Rooted cuttings, which are much used in Europe, are less popular here. If one is perchance eaten down by cutworms, it is finished, while a tuber will usually sprout again from the base, but rooting cuttings is a good method of propagation when it is desired to work up stock of any particular varieties.

Fuchsias.

Fuchsias in 4-inch pots carrying a few flowers each always sell well around Memorial day. They are not successes when bedded out in the full sun as in Europe, but where they can be grown in partial shade, and also in vases or piazza boxes, they are useful. Pick the flowers from any which are blooming this early and do so until the last part of April; then allow them to flower. If a batch of cuttings is taken now and grown along through the summer they will make useful plants in 5-inch pots for early autumn flowering, a season when blooming plants in pots are quite scarce. The single fuchsias are much better than the doubles for practically all purposes; the doubles look too heavy and clumsy and flower less freely.

Show Pelargoniums.

The plants which have been growing along in a cool, airy house will now be coming into flower and this is the time when they need careful culture. In the matter of feeding, pelargoniums require as much as chrysanthemums and it should not be discontinued on the appearance of the first flowers, but kept up until the plants are practically at their best. Liquid cow or sheep manure twice a week, or a surfacing of Clay's fertilizer alternated, will keep the plants well toned up and of a good color. If any staking is required do it at once, using short stakes which will be invisible. Don't on any account neglect fumigating, as green aphid is the arch enemy of this beautiful plant.

BEDDING GERANIUMS.

The earliest and strongest geraniums have now been in a gentle hotbed for over a fortnight, where they are plunged almost to their brims. The growth they have made is surprising; every plant is of a rich, dark color and the growth is short and stocky, while the shoots are bristling with flower stalks, which will be kept picked off until the end of April. Many large growers scorn the frame culture of these plants, but it is a veritable godsend to the smaller growers, with their overcrowded houses, and most of us have yet to see finer geraniums produced in spring in greenhouses than in frames.

After this date it is tolerably safe to stand out geraniums in frames without any bottom heat, provided they are built closely and have good sashes over them. Either coarse sand or fine screened cinders are excellent to stand the pots on, and if a bed of either material of sufficient thickness is used so that the plants can be partially plunged they will dry out less and grow all the better.

Any winter batches of cuttings in need of potting should be attended to before they become potbound. Give these a raised bench where they can enjoy a little bottom heat and they will quickly take hold of their new compost. When first potted they can stand pot to pot, but they will soon need some spacing, as growth is now rapid. No more pinching must now be done, but the plants should be looked over once a week and all dead and decaying leaves and weeds removed.

Sometimes defective glass will cause scorching of the foliage. If you can locate the squares causing the damage, change them, or, failing that, use a light shading of kerosene and white lead over them.

Many inquiries come to hand at this season with samples of diseased foliage enclosed. It is not always easy to tell what has caused the trouble. Leaving cuttings too long in a propagating bench will weaken them. A heavy fumigation when the plants are dry at the root will cause many leaves to turn yellow, as will painting the steam pipes with sulphur or lampblack and oil, especially if turpentine is used to assist in drying the paint quickly. Where this is used, always leave some air on night and day until all fumes have vanished. Injudicious feeding with strong chemicals, such as nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia, will burn the roots and cripple the plants. They are useful only when applied sparingly and in moderate doses to improve starved plants. These strong chemicals will produce green, luxuriant-looking plants, which, however, will never flower well, and these plants with soft, sappy growths fall an easy prey to disease.

Geraniums are among the easiest of plants to grow, but how to grow them well and make them flower freely is not by any means generally understood. Remember they do not want saturation at the roots; they should not be constantly sprayed overhead. They do not need a warm house; 45 to 50 degrees at night is ample. They like a soil containing some fine bone, which builds up stocky, floriferous wood. They want all possible sunshine and plenty of fresh air. Given these conditions, there should be fewer sickly and diseased plants.

M. M. CARROLL, DEAR SIR.

M. M. Carroll, the Cincinnati importer of bulbs and plants, generally is known to the trade as "Mr. Carroll" and mail is addressed "Dear Sir." Mr. Carroll's first name is Mae; see portrait herewith. Miss Carroll is said to be the only woman engaged in this branch of the horticultural trades. She sees no reason, if the florists' business in its other branches is so well suited to women, why it should not be in line for her sex to engage in the wholesale importing branch of the trade. For four years she was connected with a man who did a large and successful business in this line, and she has traveled as a salesman for nearly four years. Miss Carroll has now been in business for herself for nearly a year and says that her experience has proved to her that there is a good field for a woman in the bulb and plant business, providing she has the average business ability and understands thoroughly the line of stock she handles.

PROPAGATING ANTIRRHINUMS.

We have a bench of snapdragons from which we wish to take a lot of cuttings if it will pay us to grow them for winter flowering. Is this a good time of year to propagate them, and how should we handle them? Is the raised or the solid bench preferable? What is the right distance apart to plant them in the field and in the bench after lifting? L. B.

The cuttings of antirrhinums will root readily now in an ordinary cutting bench. Pot off singly as soon as rooted, being sure not to leave them in the sand until they become hard. Gradually harden off the plants and plant them out in the field a foot apart in the rows. While these field plants can be lifted and benched for early winter flowering, plants which are propagated somewhat later and carried over summer in pots plunged in a frame will do better. These latter, if first placed in 2½-inch pots, should later be shifted into 4-inch pots and planted in a bench in August if an early crop is desired. If you want later flowers, take cuttings from your field plants in August. Keep the flowering stems pinched back to encourage the production of cuttings. These can be benched to follow mums and will give a fine late winter and spring crop. Of course, snapdragons will flower profitably for several months if kept well fed.

In midwinter, plants on benches have a little advantage, but on the whole solid beds have given us the finest flowers and they are much to be preferred where flowers are wanted from, say, Easter to Memorial day. Plant in the benches 10x12 inches apart. Use compost such as will grow good mums. Never use gas in fumigating them, and do not run the night temperature in winter over 50 degrees. At 45 to 48 degrees the spikes will be much better. C. W.

EMBLEMATIC BEDDING.

Each spring florists are called on for more or less bedding of emblematic character and, as these beds must be planned some time in advance, the accompanying illustrations will be of seasonal interest. These beds were the work of Wm. Behnisch, gardener at the Will county courthouse, Joliet, Ill., and were planted because of the G. A. R. state encampment held at Joliet last year.

The upper bed has the lettering "Welcome G. A. R." in red and green alternanthera, with the opposite side of the bed filled with cannas. The shields in the bed were of crushed stone, some of it colored. The flag in the second bed, also is of crushed stone. At the back was a row of cannas, in front of which was a 12-inch band of silver-leaved geraniums, then a 4-inch band of red alternanthera, then an 8-inch band of green and yellow alternanthera just back of the flag, these last two strips also running around its sides. In front of the flag were alternate rows of green and red alternanthera running in the direction opposite to the stripes in the flag.

OBITUARY.

Peter Buhler.

Peter Buhler, 232 Seventh street, S. E., Washington, D. C., died April 11. Mr. Buhler, who was well known in his vicinity, removed to Washington some twenty-five years ago from New Orleans, where he had engaged in the government contracting business. He entered the employ of Nicholas Studer, in Anacostia, D. C., under whom he learned his trade. He was later given the stand in the Navy Yard market, which stands directly opposite his old home. He stayed with Studer about three years before going into the retail business on his own account. It was only late last week that Mr. Buhler was around the Center Market talking over trade conditions with the boys there. Although 87 years of age, he was active, attending to his store with the agility of a much younger man. He was devoted to his wife, who survives him, and his passing is a matter of deep regret.

C. L. L.

Frank Nuss.

Frank Nuss, who has been for nearly thirty years a gardener at the Ruthenford and White estate at Newport, R. I., died suddenly April 8. Mr. Nuss was born in Germany and after learning the gardeners' business in that country and in Holland he came to this country when still a young man and took up his residence at Newport, where he remained all his life. He was one of the oldest and best known gardeners in that city of famous private estates. The deceased is survived by two daughters, Miss Elizabeth G. Nuss, a teacher in the Carey school of that city, where she has taken a leading part in the establishing of school gardens, and Miss Mary Nuss, who has also taken a great interest in the development of garden work in the schools. There are also two sons, Thomas F. Nuss, of Newport, and Joseph S. Nuss, of Boston.

W. H. M.

Alexander McCullough.

Alexander McCullough, of Brookline, Mass., died April 10 at his home, 17 Aspinwall avenue, at the age of 65. He had been in ill health a long time. He is survived by his wife and five children.

Myron Llewellyn.

Myron Llewellyn, of Olean, N. Y., died of heart failure April 6. Since 1872 he had conducted a flower store in that city. Until the first of the year he had complete charge of the greenhouses and store, but at that time his son, Frank, began to help about the business.

Nels Peter Larson.

Nels Peter Larson, one of the oldest residents of Evanston, Ill., and formerly a florist at 1624 Sherman avenue, in that city, died March 28, at the Swedish Old People's home in North Evanston, at the age of 81 years. He was born in Sweden and came to America and to Evanston in 1866. He leaves one son, Charles, recently of California, but now of Evanston.

Victor Johansen.

Victor Johansen, president and manager of the Victor Johansen Seed Co., growers of flower seeds, Arroyo Grande, Cal., died suddenly of heart disease, on the evening of April 8, at his home in Arroyo Grande. It is announced that the business will be continued under the management of his widow, Mrs. Mary Johansen, assisted by her son, Oscar W. Johansen, who has been connected with the business for the last four years.

John F. Larson.

John F. Larson, for the last nineteen years a florist at Rock Island, Ill., was found dead by his wife in the kitchen of his home, 439 Forty-fourth street, early in the morning of April 9. Suicide by asphyxiation has been given as the cause of his death, although reason for his committing the act is unknown. When found, his body was lying across the gas stove with his mouth over a jet, which had been turned on. He was born in Sweden, December 12, 1856, and came to Rock Island in 1890. For eighteen years he was employed on the government island, working as a horticulturist. Of late, however, he had been in business for himself.

F. P. Dilger's Freak Tulip.

A FREAK TULIP.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph by F. P. Dilger, Milwaukee, who writes: "I am sending a photograph of a freak tulip that appeared among my stock during the Easter week. It was a bright scarlet and the plant created much comment. I have never seen one like it, and none of the visitors to my store had seen anything of the kind. I should be glad to hear if others have encountered similar freaks."

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good, on the whole. The supply of flowers was not large and clearances were fully as good as could be expected. The present week sees trade rather quiet, but supplies, owing to the continued cold weather, are by no means unwieldy, and there is not yet any considerable surplus. Of course a spell of warm weather may speedily change all this.

Roses continue the softest spot in the market. These are in heavy supply and of good quality. Prices are on the down grade. The demand is best for Killarneys, Tafts, Richmonds and the various yellow varieties.

Carnations are down to half the Easter prices, $1 to $3 being prevailing rates. Single violets are over, but doubles will arrive for some time yet. These are making 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are less abundant than a month ago. The Spencer varieties are coming from several growers in fine shape. Bulb stock had an excellent Easter and continues to meet a fair sale. Some fine Spanish iris is seen. Yellow marguerites were surely never more abundant than now. Valley is plentiful, and so are snapdragons, of which pink continues the favorite color. English primroses are plentiful, and there is a good assortment of other spring flowers. Lilies and callas are a slow trade. Green stock is quiet after the Easter rush. In last week's Review carnations were quoted as selling here as high as $10 for Easter. This should have been $6. Large numbers went at $5 April 6.

Club Meeting.

Vice-President W. J. Kennedy presided over the regular monthly club meeting April 16, President Pegler being still indisposed. The attendance was 125, three new members being elected. There was no regular lecture, but numerous queries were taken up and answered and proved both interesting and varied in their character. It was announced that the banquet usually held in February or March, and originally intended for April, will be postponed until autumn, so that something ambitious can be provided in honor of the club's silver jubilee. An invitation to visit the estate of Bayard Thayer, South Lancaster, Mass., where Wm. Anderson is superintendent, to inspect the bulb gardens, lilacs, etc., in May, was received and referred to the executive committee.

Alexander McKay talked interestingly on mushrooms and made an exhibit of mushrooms grown from pure culture spawn. The discussion which followed his remarks was participated in by John Farquhar, William Downs, W. N. Craig, D. Findlayson and Messrs. Elliott, Palmer, Sander and Coles. Among the subjects taken up were amaryllis, dahlias, rhododendrons, kalmias and the question of the respective merits of carnations grown in pots or flats.

Among the exhibits were a new white rambler rose from Thomas Coles, fine Spanish iris from H. Waldecker and Oncidium luridum from J. Q. Smith.

A message of good cheer was ordered sent to President Pegler.

Various Notes.

William W. Tailby, of Wellesley, met with a serious and painful accident on the evening of April 6, falling the full length of a flight of stairs, with his little girl in his arms, through a mistake in opening a door. Mr. Tailby broke his left hip, left wrist and shoulder, fractured his jaw and had a wound in his head needing eight stitches to sew up. He is now convalescing as well as can be expected, but will probably be confined to his bed for a considerable time. His little child rather miraculously escaped serious injury.

John Benton, who died somewhat suddenly April 7, was for nearly a quarter of a century a trusted employee in the seed department of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and well known and respected by both commercial and private growers. He was a Scotchman, born in Aberdeen, and spent three years in Detroit before locating at Boston.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are marketing at the Boston Flower Exchange their usual fine assortment of bulbous flowers. They report sales at Easter as ahead of any previous year, with better prices.

Noted in H. R. Comley's windows April 13 were fine vases of ixias, tritonias, anemones, ranunculi, white scabious, sparaxis, crinums and the first Mayflowers of the season.

William Patterson, of Wollaston, one of our leading bulb specialists, had an exceptionally strong Easter trade, and reports sales as splendid, everything cleaning up well.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. had a heavy Easter trade. They are receiving grand sweet peas from Wm. Sim, Edgar Bros. and other growers, and their carnations from F. P. Putnam, Halifax Garden Co. and Peirce Bros. are of the best.

William Boise, lately with the Plant Estate, Groton, Conn., has been appointed head gardener to Mrs. Samuel Hoar, of Concord.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, has a fine crop of yellow marguerites in addition to his carnations.

N. W. Silverman, on Winter street, had a heavy Easter trade. He always has a pleasing window, which will catch the eyes of passers-by on that busy thoroughfare.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold its next exhibition May 11 and 12, when pelargoniums, calceolarias, tulips and narcissi will be special features.

F. H. Houghton, on Park street, had a charming window arrangement April 13 of genistas and antirrhinums.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newton Greenhouses, is having a fine cut of Killarneys, Wards and other roses at present. Mr. Bridgham had a fine Easter business at his Beacon street store in Boston.

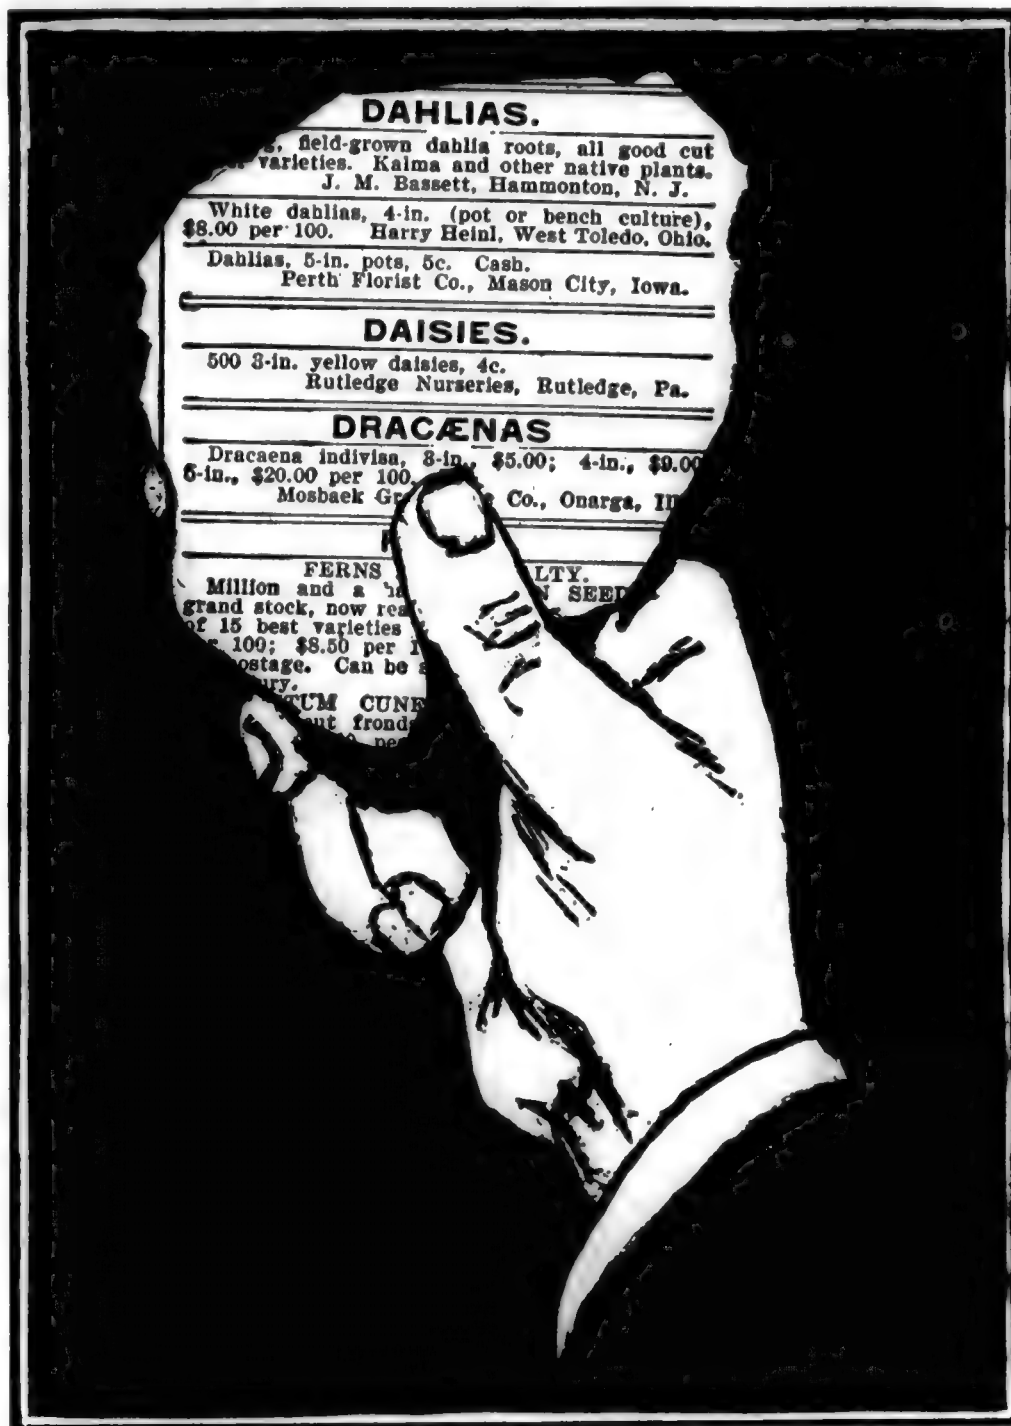

Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation and A. E. Robinson, lately with the New England Nurseries as president and manager, have formed a new corporation, the Breck-Robinson Co. Their nurseries and trial grounds are at Lexington, Mass. The landscape department will be given special attention. The officers are: President, Joseph F. Breck; vice-president and manager, Alfred E. Robinson; treasurer, Charles H. Breck; secretary, Sheldon A. Robinson.

S. J. Goddard reports carnations as being in light crop at present. He has had a heavy call for rooted cuttings and had an excellent Easter trade.

A. F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, is a good plant grower, and there are few better geraniums than his.

Perry Green, of Quincy, has something of a novelty at this season in white scabious, which he is cutting with 18-inch stems.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

E. H. Borowski, of Roslindale, had many of the finest rambler roses and bougainvilleas seen in Boston this Easter.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, has the finest selection of Spencer sweet peas coming into the market at the present time.

James Wheeler's snapdragons continue in as heavy crop as ever. He had a grand pick of carnations for Easter.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Following Easter came a week of chill and depression. The weather on Sunday hugged freezing and a cold rain all day brought calamity to the street merchants, who are now offering about everything but orchids to an indiscriminating public. Saturday saw a fairly good clean-up in the wholesale market, but at badly broken values, while of roses there were too many for any possible outlet. The present week opens with a summer temperature. The whole face of nature has changed in a night. The grass is greener, the trees are budding, and planting has begun in earnest. The seed stores are crowded to the doors. One can imagine, however, better than I can describe the effect this warmth and sunshine will have on the wholesale cut flower market, dominated, as it now is, by the enormous rose crop and the undiminished shipments of southern daffodils. These latter sell, not by the dozen nor the hundred, but by the box of 400 or 500 and lucky is the man who can dispose of his shipment at $1 a box.

American Beauty roses seldom sell above 25 cents. They must then be selected. This week they probably will go lower. So will all roses, including the novelties. Brides, Maids and Marylands sell from 50 cents per hundred up, but not far up, 4 cents each buying the best of them. Killarney dominates the rose situation; one wholesaler reports having received forty-four boxes of them Saturday. Estimate if you can the total receipts of Killarney on Saturday by the fifty-seven wholesale distributors. It takes an expert mathematician to total them.

The violet quotations may as well be eliminated. It certainly does not pay the grower when his violets have to seek customers at $1 per thousand. On the streets 10 cents a bunch is the cry. These are sad days for this once queen of the market. There are plenty of carnations; from 50 cents to $2 per hundred is the range. Good stock sold at $10 per thousand April 15. Valley holds up well, especially the fancy stock, but lilies of all kinds have fallen, selling at from $5 down to $3 per hundred. Callas are back to $1.25 a dozen. Tulips sell slowly, except a few of the new double varieties.

Spring flowers of all kinds crowd the windows, and most of them stay there, narcissi among them, and mignonette, wallflowers and daisies. A great deal of the gardenia arrivals reach the street men. The selected and long-stemmed flowers never go above $3 a dozen. Orchids are in great supply, especially Schroederæ, tion for the National Flower Show of 1913, meeting at the Grand Central Palace every Monday.

The Pennock-Meehan Co. will move into its new store May 1. The whole building will be utilized and the supply and ribbon department greatly enlarged.

Henry M. Robinson was in New York from Wednesday until Saturday last week and is much pleased with the encouragement he has received in his branch here, realizing already the necessity for greater space for his supply department.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., was slightly ill from the grippe last week. The Easter sales by the company were the largest on record. Three new orchid houses, similar to those which make are now devoted to the growing of nursery stock. More greenhouses are being built this spring. Orders for spring planting are far in advance of any season in the firm's history.

A. L. Young & Co. were next door to a small conflagration last week, but they and all their tenants escaped even a scorching.

Large importations of bays, evergreens and boxwood are arriving.

Woodrow & Markatos will continue their branch plant store on Sixth avenue until Memorial day. The firm did an enormous Easter business. Mrs. Woodrow, who was so severely burned by gasoline some weeks ago, is rapidly recovering.

Charles Millang continues to improve and is in the market every day. He is taking out his revenge on the dog that bit him by selling automobiles to the trade, F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, being one of his latest patrons.

A. Hermann says he enjoyed his usual prosperity at Easter, both in large purchases by florists and in his branch enterprise in the confectionery trade.

James Coyle, of College Point, formerly with H. E. Froment, is ill at his home.

The Johnston Heating Co. has the contract for the heating plant for the new range of 35,000 square feet of glass which is to be erected by A. S. Burns, Jr., the widely known lily grower. There are five houses to be built, the material furnished by the King Construction Co.

J. B. Nugent, Sr., who celebrated his ninetieth birthday, is under the weather. He is the oldest florist in New York. J. Austin Shaw.

Wertheimer Bros. say that since Easter there has been a large increase in the orders for gauze shower ribbons and other ribbons and chiffons for wedding work.

THE KESSLER STORE.

The accompanying illustration shows the store of William Kessler, New York, as it appeared when filled with blooming plants for the Easter trade. Although the store is in the heart of the New York business district, one of its appurtenances is a conservatory in the rear.

which sells far below its real value. Only the best of the cattleyas realize anything approaching satisfactory figures. These conditions should speedily improve. Wide preparations are being made by the plantmen for Memorial day. Of all branches of the trade, these seem to have the greatest cause for self-congratulation.

Various Notes.

A serious accident on Sunday, April 14, at Harrington Park, N. J., in the collapse of a church floor, numbered among its severely injured Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Steinhoff, of West Hoboken, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kessler are enjoying a week's recuperation in the mountains after the Easter strain and its sleepless nights. Foreman Bradshaw is giving worth-while daily lessons in window decoration.

The plant auctions are drawing big crowds every Tuesday and Friday. Mr. MacNiff says last week's Tuesday sale was the largest on record, over $2,500 worth of stock being disposed of between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m.

The Manhattan Florist Shop has been removed to the corner of Sixth avenue and West Twenty-fifth street.

President Barrow has furnished Jack Gunther, of Gunther Bros., with a season pass to all the ball parks of his league.

Messrs. Totty and Bunyard have secured their staterooms de luxe, for the trip to the London flower show, and are busy, with Chairman Traendly and the rest of the committee, in prepara-up the present range, are being erected, (thus making this the largest amount of glass devoted to orchids in this country.

A. J. Guttman has removed his headquarters to the front of the first floor of the Coogan building and has incorporated the Alex. J. Guttman Cut Flower Co.

The nursery business is at high tide with Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, where 500 men are employed during the shipping season. Over 300 acres Conservatory of Wm. Kessler at Easter.

East Hadley, Mass.—The Montgomery Rose Co. will begin the erection of another greenhouse, 40x500, just north of the present houses, early this spring.

Great Neck, N. Y.—W. W. Matthews and G. E. Lasher have enormous stocks of Freesia Purity and supply much of that received in the New York market.

Huntingdon, Pa.—James M. Doggett, formerly a landscape gardener at Altoona, Pa., is now employed at the greenhouses of the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, in this town.

Portsmouth, O.—The damage done by the recent hail storm at the greenhouses of the Herms Floral Co., on the Chillicothe pike, has been repaired. It took 1,000 lights of glass to do the job.

Bluffton, Ind.—Myers & Co. will rebuild four of their seven greenhouses this summer, employing the most modern construction. They are putting in an irrigation system for their outdoor stock.

Hartford, Conn.—The Hartford newspapers this week contain an excellent article by J. M. Adams on the history and cultivation of the gladiolus. The American Gladiolus Society comes in for a good notice and the showing is sure to do much to advance the popularity of the flower.

Monon, Ind.—S. H. Long, formerly of Plano, Ill., has purchased an interest in the florist business of Mrs. S. H. Myers, in this city, and will assume active charge. Mrs. Myers' greenhouses have been idle part of the winter, as her health had failed and she was unable to keep them up.

Pittsburg, Kan.—Commenting on the tall Formosa lily of C. Young & Sons Co., recently illustrated in The Review, J. C. Steinhauser, of the Steinhauser Florist and Nursery Co., says he had one that flowered at a height of seven feet ten inches and had eight buds. Like the Youngs', this was from a bulb supplied by A. Henderson & Co.

Des Plaines, Ill.—The Lord & Burnham Co., which last season erected a large greenhouse material factory at this place, has just increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $250,000. The company operating here is an Illinois corporation, separate from the New York corporation of the same name, though the ownership and management are identical.

Champaign, Ill.—J. E. Yates has had the plans drawn for eight greenhouses, to be erected in the south part of the city, on Maple street, just west of Mount Hope cemetery. An office will be built on part of the site of the present greenhouses owned by Mr. Yates, which are at the corner of Third street and Springfield avenue and are conducted by Gus Johnson. The present greenhouses will be torn down and residences built on the remainder of the site.

Cambridge, Mass.—John Kelley, of the firm of Kelley Bros., florists, started recently on a business tour of Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire.

Lawrence, Mass.—Geo. W. Thornton, a brother of the members of the firm of Thornton Bros., is reported to be seriously ill on his farm at West Kennebunk, Me.

Jacksonville, Ill.—O. B. Heintz has been nominated for reelection to the village board of South Jacksonville. The board holds its meetings at the Heintz greenhouses.

Richmond, Ind.—The E. G. Hill Co. reports being practically sold out on Sunburst. It has been the company's most successful introduction since the Richmond rose was sent out.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Henry Smith and Eli Cross secured new automobile delivery cars in time for the Easter rush. The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. has also added a new delivery wagon.

Mitchell, S. D.—William Dethlefs, of the Davison County Greenhouses, intends to erect two more houses, each 14x60, this season. The materials will be furnished by the John C. Moninger Co. Mr. Dethlefs' Easter trade was twenty-five per cent better than last year, in both plants and cut flowers.

Lebanon, Pa.—A recent fire at the greenhouse of S. K. Snyder, a florist and truck gardener at Second street and Schaefferstown road, in South Lebanon township, destroyed the house and its contents, including some thousands of vegetable plants, geraniums, etc. He expects to rebuild, but probably not till next fall. He has a stand in the Eighth street market.

Ottawa, Ill.—Some unusually fine calla lilies and carnations, grown by Lohr Bros. in their greenhouses on Ottawa street, were recently on exhibition in the windows of Charles Geiger's grocery store. The callas, it is said, were probably the largest ever seen in this city; the stems were four feet six inches in length and the flowers were six and five-eighths inches in diameter. The carnations were also large and of splendid quality.

Marysville, O.—C. O. Coder, manager of the Marysville Floral Co., has purchased a building in South Main street. It is the purpose of Mr. Coder to use the property as an uptown headquarters and retail store for seeds, bulbs and all kinds of garden supplies. In the rear a greenhouse will be erected, extending from the store building to the alley. The company will continue to operate the greenhouses and gardens at the south end of Plum street. The work of rebuilding the section that was recently crushed by snow will be started as soon as weather conditions are favorable.

Meadville, Pa.—Roger Ward Haas, of George W. Haas & Son, and Miss Eva Angeline McMillen, of this city, were married April 11.

Waterville, Me.—Mitchell & Co. held their annual opening at Easter, as usual, and the attendance was large. Nearly 1,000 jardinières were presented to the ladies as souvenirs.

South Orange, N. J.—W. A. Manda, Inc., is entered as an exhibitor in the International Horticultural Exhibition that opens in London, England, May 22.

Goldsboro, N. C.—At the funeral of the late ex-Governor Aycock, at Raleigh, N. C., the offerings of flowers were declared to be the most elaborate and beautiful ever seen in the capital city, and among the best of them were two designs made by S. A. Starr, proprietor of the Goldsboro Floral Co.

Louisville, Ky.—Accused of entering the florist shop of Miss Alice J. Miller, 225 West Jefferson street, and attempting to steal a purse, J. Bennett Jones was arrested April 5. Jones, it is said, would have succeeded in securing the purse but for the action of T. O. Miller, brother of Miss Miller, and a negro porter, who held the prisoner until the arrival of the police.

New Castle, Ind.—Otto L. Benthey, who purchased two lots on South Fourteenth street with the intention of building greenhouses there, is said to have abandoned the project on account of the objections of residents on the adjacent property. He has sold the lots and canceled the contracts for the erection of three greenhouses. His purpose now is to open a large retail flower store in the Union block.

Ottawa, Ont.—It is reported that Charles J. Wright and Miss E. Louise Wright surprised their friends by getting married, April 8, in New York city, where they were spending a few days as members of a large excursion party. A facetious newspaper correspondent heads his report "Miss Wright Mrs. Because He Mr.," and says that it is a case where two "Wrights" make a happy married couple.

Marysville, Kan.—Alderman Fisher, or Councilman Fisher—such is now H. R. Fisher's official title. He has been elected councilman of his ward by almost unanimous choice, receiving all but three votes. And, as if that were not honor enough for one florist, his fellow aldermen have chosen him as president of the council, a dignity which is generally conferred on the oldest member of the body. In the reorganization of the council, Mr. Fisher was also appointed chairman of the building committee, and a member of the improvement committee and the board of health.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
 We both have them.

THIS week's Review contains more classified plant advertisements than ever before appeared in a single issue —and every one charged for.

WITH practically everybody using that brown wrapping paper, someone might make his packages distinct by adopting almost any other color.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending
 The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
 two visits of the paper.

THE demand for Manetti stocks is likely to increase steadily for some years, for the number of grafted roses is as yet small in comparison with the own root plants in greenhouse benches.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, chairman of the School Garden Committee of the S. A. F., has just sent a circular to the school trustees of America, illustrating what has been done in school gardening and urging that the work be undertaken in every school district in the country. One line states: "If there is a florist or seedsman in your town he will assist in this good work."

TOPPING ANTIRRHINUMS.

We have snapdragons in 2-inch pots ready to shift. Shall we top them or let them alone? We put them in according to instructions in The Review and we want them for Memorial day. O. S.

If the plants are five to six inches high, top them. If short, it will be better not to top. Plant them out in a bench or bed containing well enriched compost, placing them 10x12 inches apart. Keep the soil well scratched over and let the temperature be 48 to 50 degrees at night. Your plants are just a trifle late, but with good care should flower on time. C. W.

GOOD LETTER WRITING.

Business men ought by all means to be free from the charge of writing insulting or belittling letters. It is mighty easy to use these valuable little particles that we call words in a way that will hurt, disgust or demoralize.
 It is just as easy to use words in phrasing our correspondence that will express our opinion and at the same time command respect, bring business and leave a pleasant impression. We are prompted to refer to this because of some correspondence that has passed before our notice between parties that ought to be too big to allow anything of this kind to happen—in fact, such letters should never pass out of an office or go through the mails. The day of "pistols for two" is fast waning from business correspondence, and, instead of it, there is manifested a kindly regard for the rights of others. It is a good idea to ignore things that may be interpreted as personal slights or intentional thrusts when answering a letter. Confine yourself to business and observe business courtesy in your writing and you will have more friends and more business, too.—Frank B. White.

AWAY DOWN EAST.

This "great country of ours," as the Fourth of July orators term it, is steadily getting smaller; means of rapid communication are drawing us together. In which connection it is worth noting that a letter mailed in Boston postoffice at noon for the 18-hour train, or one mailed at New York up to 2 o'clock, or at Philadelphia up to 3:30, for the fliers, is delivered at The Review office in Chicago at 11
 a. m. next day—which is not more than one delivery behind a letter mailed at the same hour at some substations of Chicago itself.

With such quick connections The Review is in position to give as prompt and efficient service to advertisers on the Atlantic seaboard as it is to those in the great and growing west—and does it, as follows:

Please cut out that heliotrope ad; we don't want to have to return any more money to buyers whose orders we can't fill.—Hopkins & Hopkins, Chepachet, R. I., April 9, 1912.

Please discontinue our advertisement and send orders and we were obliged to return several checks.—Southside Nurseries, Chester, Va., April

The Market.

Suffering a drop in prices almost abnormal in its own suddenness, the market this week resolved itself into a forcing of sales of surplus stock at almost any figure. The general demand was not any greater than in former years, while the annual spring oversupply came more abruptly than usual because of the several warm days that followed immediately after the Easter rush. The quick change in the weather brought out all the backward stock that had been held in check by the cold weather of March. The result was almost startling. Almost every grower was forced to work overtime cutting, cutting, and then some more cutting, until the market was flooded with almost every kind of flower in season. Tuesday, April 9, saw the start of it, and by Wednesday the inundation had overcome the best efforts of the wholesalers, who worked head and hand and foot to hold it in check, using every method possible to force the sale of large quantities in the hope of clearing the tables. Roses came in large shipments, Killarney and White Killarney, Melody and American Beauties alike. For a time the best of these could be moved at a reasonable figure, but by Thursday and Friday the supply was so large that the buyer made the price.

Carnations accumulated in the largest quantities. White and red for a time held firm, but as the supply increased even these were forced to sale at ridiculously low figures in large quantities. Splits and poor stock were a dead loss. Not even the street venders were willing to accept them at even their own figure. Toward the end of

OURS ARE EXTRA FINE KILLARNEYS WHITE OR PINK

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carry the finest flowers of any in this market. The crop is heavy now, so that the prices are lower than what you are accustomed to pay.

CARNATIONS

A Very Large Crop On

Buyers who know this market recognize that our supply of Carnations is not only large but that the stock averages the finest big lot to be found in the west. The spring crop is on this week and the cut is extremely heavy, while the quality is a little the best of the season, as it always is when the big spring cut is on. Excellent values are offered, especially on large lots. Write or wire for special quotations.

BEAUTIES

Spring Crop is On

You will like the Beauties we are now cutting in quantity. It is the spring crop, cut from plants that have not been forced in winter—grown specially to meet the heavy demand that comes at this season. All lengths. Try some of these now—we know you will want them regularly once you see how salable they are.

SWEET PEAS

All Colors—Excellent Stock

The extent to which Sweet Peas now are grown for this market is largely due to the success our growers made with Peas—it was our stock that popularized this flower. While our growers have had many imitators, it has not yet been possible for anyone to produce finer stock than we have handled each season for several years. We ship them fresh and fragrant, fine, long-stemmed stock.

SPRING FLOWERS

Fine Snapdragon, Spanish Iris, Daisies, Pansies, Valley, Tulips, Jonquils, Candytuft and Mignonette. You need them all, every day. If we supply you, your flowers will please your customers.

the week the Saturday rush took off a good portion of the overflow, but still there were large numbers that went to waste.

Throughout the market there hardly could be found anything that was off crop. Greens were in full supply, with the possible exception of smilax. A general shortage of this was in effect and of course the prices held firm. The numerous weddings that always follow shortly after Easter helped the demand for valley and in most cases this moved along in good shape. Orchids, also popular in wedding bouquets, were likewise in demand, and these were about the only scarcity. Spanish iris came on the market in big lots and consequently it suffered with the rest. Tulips, daffodils and the like were forced to rock bottom by the arrival of large quantities from the south. Many shipments of the southern stock were a total loss.

Violets have started to go out and few, either double or single, were to be had. Sweet peas are abundant and, although extremely fine, the prices moderated to a considerable degree. For the first few days after Easter a comparative shortage of lilies was noted, but a couple of warm days sufficed to bring plenty of them to the cutting point and sales were registered at unusually low prices for the latter part of the week. Callas are more abundant than at any time this year, and are difficult to move.

The retailers probably accepted the glut as a matter of fact, for they look for it the first few warm days of spring and they usually are able to turn it to some advantage. There is no doubt that it was more serious than for a number of years, for, coming on the heels of the Easter rush, it caught the retailers unprepared to accept its advantages as they could had it held off a week or ten days, until the demand had become more normal. As a whole the retail demand has seemed to hold about normal, but it was useless to try to force the demand until the end of last week, when things began to show life. Sunday, being a warm, sunny afternoon, proved exceptionally good.

Various Notes.

A new commission house will enter the field May 1, when Charles W. Erne will take over the quarters now occupied by C. W. McKellar, who is to take larger quarters. Mr. Erne has long been identified with the trade and has a large number of friends as the result of fifteen years with E. H. Hunt. At the present time he is connected with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Both Winterson's Seed Store and the W. W. Barnard Co. report that counter trade opened strong this week.

April 17 there was a quiet wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Pearce. The bride was Miss Carrie Pearce; the groom, G. Tegelaar, who is the American representative of Speelman & Sons, Sassenheim, Holland. Those present were only the immediate relatives, but there were many handsome gifts. May 7 Mr. and Mrs. Tegelaar sail from New York for a summer in Europe. It is expected that they will make their home at Hoboken, where Mr. Tegelaar's firm has its American headquarters.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club April 11, George Asmus was elected a trustee to succeed E. C. Amling, resigned. The election of a secretary was postponed until the May meeting. New members elected were August Koch, John Lambert, H. Van Gelder and S. A. Jamieson, the latter in charge of sales to florists by the Universal Portland Cement Co., the concern from which Poehlmann Bros. Co. is said to have purchased 10,000 barrels of cement in the last year, and the Geo. Wittbold Co. 8,000 barrels since it adopted concrete construction. At the May meeting Mr. Jamieson will read a paper on the use of cement in greenhouse building, illustrating his remarks with stereopticon views.

The Lord & Burnham Co., Des Plaines, Ill., has increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $250,000.

C. W. Kellar says that the Virginia narcissi did excellently for Easter, but that since then it has hardly paid to ship them to this market. He received fifty-four cases April 13 in such bad condition that they were a complete loss.

Peter Reinberg will this season drop the Mrs. Marshall Field rose and give

A meeting of the premium committee of the Horticultural Society was held April 11 to prepare a list for the exhibition authorized next spring. The committee found, however, some difficulty because of an unfortunate combination of dates: To have the show before the early Easter brings it too early to have the stock ready, and to hold the show after Easter brings it in conflict with the National Flower Show.

April 13, when it should have arrived on the morning of April 12. Of course this had to happen during a time of extremely large supply.

Hoerber Bros. lost the services of a shipping clerk last Saturday when Lawrence Mathes departed for Minneapolis to take a position with the L. S. Donaldson Co., in its retail store. He left with Wm. Desmond, manager of Donaldson's greenhouses and florists' department. Mr. Mathes formerly was with Weiland & Risch.

The third quarterly meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was called by President John F. Kidwell for April 17. The last quarter was a most favorable one, according to President Kidwell.

Anthony Enwich, manager of E. H. Hunt's cut flower department, was on the sick list Tuesday, April 16.

E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, started with Mrs. Washburn in his automobile the other evening, to attend a wedding, when a punctured tire forced a halt for repairs. The fact that he had a dress suit on did not help matters any.

W. J. Smyth is using a patent tire filler on his delivery car and the manufacturer is using a cut of the auto in his newspaper advertising, thereby giving Mr. Smyth some good free publicity.

All season long L. A. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., has been sending excellent sweet peas to the Chicago market. J. A. Budlong is the consignee.

Frank Evert no longer is with Adolph Malchow, 3743 North Clark street. Mr. Malchow says he cleaned up everything that was ready for Easter and looks for a big bedding season.

There was an interesting meeting of the Florists' Club April 15, when A. W. Robbell, of the Marine City Floral Co., was elected a member. Charles Plumb was speaker of the evening. His subject was "Easter Teachings." He said that the made up plants of lilies were the best sellers at the recent holiday. Tausendschon was the most popular of the roses. Jessie is taking the place of Baby Rambler. Of the hydrangeas, medium or small plants sold best. Small genistas were cleaned up. Of the hyacinths, white and light lavender sold best. It was found that the pale pink rhododendrons take ten days longer to develop than do the lavender and crimson. Mr. Plumb's comments brought out quite a discussion. It was suggested that three Baby Ramblers in one pan sell well, the same as with lilies. One speaker said that single tulips were no good at Easter, excepting Rose Luisant. Golden Spur was the best daffodil. Hydrangeas, not colored, do not sell. Albert Pochelon said that it does not pay to handle plants selling at less than $1 each at retail at Easter; the extra expenses of the day leave no profit on smaller sales. It was unanimously reported that the Easter business this year was the best ever.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market has suffered, during the week ending April 17, reverses that although no greater than in previous years, are, nevertheless, dispiriting after the buoyancy of the week before. There is business, quite a little of it, but nothing like enough to care for nearly all the flowers that are coming into town. Every wholesale house feels the change and the effect on prices has been marked; a decline in nearly everything, with a few notable exceptions.

Valley, so extremely scarce at Easter and some days after, is more plentiful now. Sweet peas have been in active demand. The winter crops are about over and the spring crops, generally of excellent quality, are hardly in full supply. Violets are in the closing days of the season, with little sign of the flurry that sometimes sends their price skyward before their disappearance. Greens have also held fairly well, although the demand for smilax is slackening.

Roses and carnations have fallen; the lower grades accumulate. Easter lilies, and sometimes callas, are extremely hard to market at any price.

The rest of the market requires little special comment save to note the absence of heavy crops of Kaiserin at and after Easter. The effect of their absence has been to improve the sale of White Killarney and of Bride, thereby fooling the buyers who look to the usual accumulation of white roses. Snapdragon is fine just now. Indoor-grown lilac is still here, although the southern outdoor stock is arriving. The market for bulbous stock is in bad shape, the receipts of southern and northern outdoor daffodils overlapping,

Buyers like to deal where they know their interests will be protected, which is where the thought of the man receiving the orders will be, "Will these flowers give satisfaction?"

They like to deal where care is exercised in filling their orders, knowing full well that this care prevents waste so costly to themselves.

while choice greenhouse-grown stock seems the only desirable variety.

Seventy-fourty-three Ridge Road.

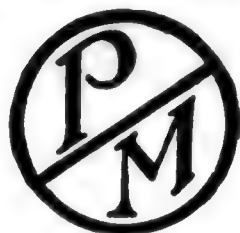

One of our brightest florists, a highly successful grower, said recently that he was trying to become one of the big fellows before the day arrived when the small florist must "go to the wall." A recent article in The Review seemed to bear out this idea as regards the small growers around Chicago. There is, however, one point in favor of the small grower that cannot be too strongly emphasized; quality will enable him to swim, no matter how strong the current of adversity. It does cost him more to produce; he must work hard, but if he has the quality he will always be able to sell his plants and flowers at fair prices. A little bird whispered that it was high time to call on William

H. Westcott, in his new home out on the Ridge road, near Barren Hill. Mr. Westcott, it will be remembered, withdrew from the Laurel Hill Nurseries two years ago, after a score or more years of successful business with his brother, in the firm that bears their name, following ten years alone at Second and Tioga streets. Mr. Westcott and his son, William, decided to make their new home at 7043 Ridge avenue, where one greenhouse, 21x125, of Lord & Burnham material, was erected in the summer of 1910. Two others of the same size and make were attached last summer, with a neat corridor house and a light potting shed over two L. & B. boilers.

The first of these greenhouses was planted with carnations in benches—a house that is worth going ten times as far to see. The plants are extremely vigorous, bearing large flowers on long, heavy stems. The varieties, if I remember rightly, are the two Wards, the two Enchantresses, Winsor, Dorothy Gordon and Pink Perfection, a name that admirably describes the stock. The next house was filled with a thrifty looking lot of sweet peas, pink, white and lavender, full of buds—Burpee's varieties, Mr. Westcott said; all were producing high-grade flowers. In the third house the spring geraniums have just replaced Easter that Mr. Westcott and his son did all the concrete work for the houses last summer; also that within a stone's throw of their place is the original Keifer pear tree from which so many pears have come.

Easter in the Park.

George W. Carpenter looked placidly down from his pedestal in a wing of Horticultural hall, on a beautiful display. It was arranged before Palm Sunday, so that the pre-Easter visitors might not be disappointed. It was really a spring show, arranged for effect. The primal ideas seem to be that an abundance of green best adorns blooming plants, so there were ferns, palms and foliage plants sufficient to lend that softness to the whole so restful to the eye. The east end wing, always used for these exhibitions because of its convenience and suitable size, was laid out quite differently from the chrysanthemum show in the fall. The flower picture was replaced by a flower garden of brightest hue—lilies, hydrangeas, azaleas, cinerarias and so on through the list, all well grown and well flowered. The feature of the show, if that term may be used, was a little nook on a side table, devoted to a particularly well grown lot of Easter lilies of even height, covered with large flowers; the effect was of a white altar on a bank of green, suggestive of purity. Large crowds attended the show, which is still open.

The Gateway to the South.

"Glutted" expresses in a word the condition of the market. Never before, at this time of the year, has the market been so filled with really choice stock that would not move except at great sacrifice. Practically the only lines that clean up are choice American Beauties, iris and gladioli, and these do so only because of the limited supply.

Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Bride are as fine as at any time of the year. Still, there is no active demand for them. The carnation glut continues and keeps growing larger day by day. Even white is affected with the rest. The largest accumulation, however, is in Enchantress. Bulbous stock presents the same condition as carnations. Some of the growers missed Easter and their tulips are coming in now. The stock is good, but not in active demand. The Easter lily and calla supply is easily adequate. Sweet peas are moving tolerably well, but are not nearly cleaning up as they should. Double violets are beginning to find the weather too warm for them to ship well. The same was true for several days about the middle of the week preceding Easter.

The business in the flower market Saturday, April 13, was nothing to brag of. The florists were well represented and had an excellent display, but it coaxed the coin from the people's purses slowly and as a result at the close considerable stock had to be hauled back home again.

The seed department of the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. is kept busy during this, their rush season.

P. J. Olinger is spending several days in Chicago this week.

C. E. Critchell is finding an excellent call for green sheet moss.

I regret to tell of the death of Mrs. Uhl, a sister of Geo. Tromey, the hustling Vine street florist.

E. G. Gillett reports that his good Beauties are cleaning up nicely.

R. McDonald, of P. J. Olinger's force, has been ill for several days. He was injured internally some time ago, in an accident, and is just now being troubled with the injury.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been successful with its weekly specials. Each week Alex. Ostendarp and A. C. Heckman take a particular line of supplies and push it at an attractive price.

Chas. Garvey, the manager of Peter Weiland's sales office, spent several days of last week with his parents in Indianapolis.

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

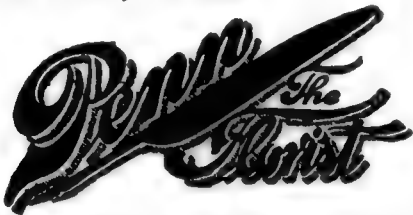

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The market is flooded with stock of all kinds and, of course, low prices prevail. The commission houses and those firms which wholesale are glad to get whatever they can for Easter lilies and are unable to move them in quantity. Good valley is bringing $4, although plenty can be had at a lower figure. Adiantum hybridum is inclined to be quite scarce and such as comes into the city moves well. Other greens are more plentiful and the demand for them is good. There has been a large supply of carnations, far more than are needed, and these were offered in quantity, mixed colors, best quality, at $20 per thousand, while whites brought a little more. The double violets that are coming in are hardly good enough to offer for sale. While sweet peas are moving well, the demand for them is not quite so heavy as it has been. Roses are plentiful and going at low figures. As to outdoor daffodils, there is almost no price or demand. They are coming into the city in large quantities and the grower does well to realize more than the express charges.

Various Notes.

Miss Emma Roak, daughter of George Roak, florist, of Auburn, Me., was one of a party of four young ladies visiting in this city.

Among the traveling men in town last week were I. Rosnosky, of H. F. Michell Co., and S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia.

A good advertising stunt was pulled off last week by the Washington Times when it had an actress who is starring at a local theater visit the representative stores of each line. At each of the stores her photograph was taken while she was showing up some of the wares there handled. Her visit to Gude Bros. Co. resulted in the display of some of that firm's choice stock in front of the store. The ad was a good one and probably was read by the majority of the people in the city.

The store of Z. D. Blackistone was threatened with destruction by the fire which did considerable damage to an adjoining building one night last week. Some of Mr. Blackistone's men, who were working late getting out orders, noticed smoke coming up from the cellar and found the fire. The prompt arrival of the fire apparatus prevented a spread of the flames.

Adolphus Gude is preparing to join other members of the Almas Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, in a pilgrimage across the continent to Los Angeles, Cal., to participate in the annual convention of the order. Mr. Gude, who is a member of the committee on transportation, will be accompanied by his wife.

In view of the fact that peddlers selling flowers are to be seen on Washington's streets in large numbers, local florists will no doubt be glad of the action being taken by the Washington Chamber of Commerce. At the last meeting of this body a resolution was presented asking that the committee on municipal law look into the matter of raising the license fees of itinerant merchants. This will be done and those merchants of the city who so desire will be given a hearing by the Since Easter everything has been quiet. The market remains about the same. Carnations are coming in heavily, but there is little demand. The shipping trade has kept up well and helps out materially at dull times.

Club Meeting.

The Colorado Florists' Club held its monthly meeting on Monday evening, April 1, at the new T. M. A. hall, 1422 Curtis street, a nice, cozy room, which makes a comfortable meeting place. Fred Wilkie entertained the club with several selections on the zither, and there was some music by two colored musicians. Most of the evening was spent in discussing the question of giving a banquet to the out-of-town members, and, upon vote, the motion to do so carried. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for a banquet to be held on the next meeting night.

The committee on arrangements, which consisted of C. R. Root, J. A. Valentine, N. A. Benson, T. W. Hannah, E. S. Kennedy, E. P. Neiman, A. H. Bush and Ben Boldt, met at noon, April 3, in the Daniels & Fisher tea room and decided to give the banquet

Various Notes.

Mrs. L. A. Dunsmore had a fine Easter trade and could have sold more lilies if they had been in stock.

"My Easter business could not have been better." This is rather a broad statement, but Thomas Chapman looked as though he meant what he said.

The Park Floral Co. had a magnificent display of stock and is well satisfied with the Easter week's business.

The Daniels & Fisher Stores Co. finds an increase of fifteen per cent over last Easter.

The Alpha Floral Co. had a few lilies left over, but otherwise the firm was entirely satisfied.

The Elitch-Long Flower Store and its three branches did a big business.
They had a great quantity of lilies, which they advertised at 15 cents, delivered, and this brought a great many into their stores.

T. H. U. Smith sprained his ankle before Easter and has been confined to his home the greater part of the time since. His Easter trade was good, but he knows that he missed some by not being able to take care of it.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The business last week was remarkably brisk for the week following Easter. This was especially the case as regards Saturday, when the demand was exceptionally good. The supply of bulbous stock was large and of exceptional quality and brought better prices than usual. Carnations and roses were also above the usual standard and consequently the quotations maintained a high rate.

With warm, open days the rush for small bedding plants, seeds and shrubs has increased largely and those dealing in these lines have experienced a busy week. Not only has there been a big call for flower seeds, but also for farm and garden seeds.
